PEACE TALK:

On Many Fronts While cannon roared and ships were torpedoed into the deep, talk of peace broke out in Europe. But there was no peace. The fury on land, sea and in the air did not abate, nor did there seem much chance that the peace moves would be successful.

In England a motion was made in commons by Independent Laborites from Glasgow that the government seek a negotiated peace. The government's reply was made by Maj. Clement Atlee, Labor leader, who said the choice was not war or peace but "war and what kind of peace." The motion was defeated 341 to 4. The following day in a Northampton election a candidate who campaigned on a "stop the war" platform was defeated 1,167 to 16,587.

In Germany there were indications that Adolf Hitler was seeking a formula to bring an end to the misadventure Greece. The effort was handled by Franz von Papen in Turkey who sought to have that nation intervene with Greece.

This was important since any German move to help Mussolini would require movement of Nazi troops through Bulgaria or Jugoslavia and risk involvement with Turkey. But Greece was in no mood for a cessation of hostilities.

In Portugal there were rumors of underground movements seeking peace. Many looked upon this as the most logical step of all, since Hitler would rather trust dictator-controlled Portugal than either the pope or President Roosevelt. Also Portugal has for 400 movements. Portugal has for 400 years been allied to England.

War Goes On

In Italy, Premier Mussolini was continuing reorganization of his combat forces. Added to the retirement list was Marshal Pietro Badoglio, hero of Ethiopia and commander of all armed forces; Gen. Ettore Bastico, governor of the strategic Dodecanese islands; and Admiral Cavagnari, chief of the naval staff who had served Italy in five wars.

The "invasion of Greece" begun a month earlier was turning into a debacle. Italian forces had lost all supply bases and airfields in southern Albania. Many of the bases had been built and equipped since Italy took over Albania and all were aimed at carrying on the march toward the Aegean. How far into central Albania the Italians would be forced to retreat before finding a new defense line was un-

In Egypt the British opened another blitz against the Italians. For weeks the army of Marshal Graziani sat at Sidi Barrani, 75 miles within the Egyptian border. Then the British struck. In the first three days they took 4,000 prisoners, killed the commanding officer of the post and captured his assistant.

All this was aimed at pressing a concerted drive to crack Italy and put a wedge into the Axis alliance. Within Italy there were reports of anti-Fascist riots and murmurs of discontent.

Otherwise on the war front: @ Britain pressed its case for financial aid from the United States and the movement was highlighted by an expression from Jesse Jones, administrator of the RFC, that he regarded England as "a good risk." Sir Frederick Philips, British undersecretary of the treasurer, conferred in Washington on English holdings in the U. S., which may not be sufficient to last another year.

I The U.S. navy reported its building program was ahead of schedule and one new ship was being turned out every 12 days.

LIFE JOBS:

At the Top

Resignations of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Associate Justice James McReynolds from the Supreme court are expected shortly after the inauguration. It has been gossip in the capital for weeks that Hughes offered his resignation, but was prevailed upon by the President to withhold it until after the campaign.

The appointments, which are for life, are greatly sought after by lawyers who regard it as the highest honor that can come to their professions. Many have been mentioned for the two places, but there is some indication the chief justice place may be filled from members now sitting, either Mr. Justice Stone or Mr. Justice Douglas. If such would happen, the President could make three appointments instead of two.

For the other places there has been mention of Senator Minton of Indiana, who was defeated in the recent campaign; Leon Henderson of the SEC, and Attorney General Jackson. Appointment of Jackson might raise to cabinet status Francis Biddle, now solicitor general.

President Roosevelt studied the Caribbean defense situation first hand, on the ground. On the U. S. S. Tuscaloosa he visited French-owned Martinique, British-owned Antigua, in the Leeward islands, as well as American territory.

The duke and duchess of Windsor reversed that schedule, coming from the Caribbean Bahamas, where the former king is governor, to Miami, Fla. The voyage was entirely informal and was to give the duchess an opportunity to visit a dentist.

Col. William J. Donovan, wartime commander of the "Fighting Sixty. Ninth," was a passenger on the Europe-bound Clipper plane under the name "Donald Williams." Last July Colonel Donovan visited England mysteriously just before the swap of U. S. destroyers for British air bases in the Western hemisphere was announced. NEW YORK.—Early in September, 1924, the League of Nations assembly was in session, on a sunny afternoon, with every garde-Popular Candidate on the lapel

For Free Albania of its morn-Modern Jeremiah ing coat, with decorous murmurs mingling with the bird song and the hum of the bees, heard through the open windows. The impeccable and somewhat desiccated Sir Eric Drummond, who played closer to his immaculate white vest than any living man, was presiding watchfully against any untoward procedure, any solecism, any break in syntax or punctilio, or move toward any overt suggestion or act. There arose among the delegates a great, shaggy bearded man who started the windows rattling with his booming voice. He said: "You are just blowing bubbles. Your talk is hot air. You have done and will do nothing for peace. You know that the Dawes plan is doomed. You know that all treaties are destined for the waste basket."

It was a long, masterful and punishing philippic, delivered in a finished Harvard accent. Sir Eric was almost a hospital case.

The Jeremiah was Bishop Fan Stylian Noli, of the Albanian Orthodox church, and it is Bishop Noli, now supposedly living in Boston, who is named in a London cable to the New York Sun, as the popular candidate for a liberated Albania. With the aid of the Greeks, the hope of Albanian liberation is warming up daily, here and abroad. The huge, ruddy warrior-bishop, a medieval man with modern ideas, never has been caught in the feudal tensions and confusion of Balkan politics. He is a genuine libertarian politics. He is a genuine libertarian and democrat, recruiting Moslems as well as Christians in his long running fight for modern free statehood for his country. His League of Nations speech was shushed in Europe, but all of it finally filtered through to American newspapers. It was the voice of a major prophet was the voice of a major prophet, as startling as the little flickering cinema spot on the walls of Belshazzar's palace.

If the bishop should reclaim and redeem Albania, America would get an assist, if not a put-out. He was educated at Harvard university, entering in 1908 and finishing in 1912. In the former year, the peaceful religious revolution by which the modern Orthodox Albanian church was established was just getting under way, and it was in that year, that ne was invested with the robes of ts priesthood.

I got a glimpse of the bishop in the Commodore hotel in 1931, a keen-eyed, black-bearded giant, purposeful, alert and powerful in every aspect of his face and person. He had arrived just a jump ahead of certain dissident Albanian gunmen. On this and many other occasions, he blasted Albania's dude monarch, Ahmed Zog much as he had blasted the tit-tat-toe assembly of the league. But he changed hotels frequently and mysteriously, as for many years he has had death close on his heels. And it was in 1931 that he said that Premier Mussolini would snatch Albania when he got ready, and that Zog's government was all make-believe.

The Better Way to Correct Constipation

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "ounce of prevention"?

Santa Claus doesn't visit children | when several men dressed like kings stopped in front of her cottage. They asked her where Bethlehem was, but she had never heard of it.

The men told her about a baby which had been born in Bethlehem, and mentioned a star which had been guiding them. The old lady wished she could accompany them when they left her in search of the infant Jesus.

But La Befana stayed home. It was getting too dark out, and besides, the baby could wait until tomorrow. Later that night she noticed the sky quivering with light. The clouds seemed to take the form of angels. All thought of sleep left her. Rising, she carefully wrapped two gifts for the Holy Baby, then ran out into the night in the direction the kings had gone.

Fast as she hurried, she had not reached Bethlehem when the star disappeared and dawn filled the She frantically asked the way to Bethlehem, but no one could tell

And so La Befana has constantly traveled since that day, searching for the Christ Child. On the Epiphany, 12 days after Christmas, she goes from house to house, looking into the faces of babies. With each lieved to be the first Christmas made in London in 1846.

CHRISTMAS cards are almost as dinner table. Each member of the much a part of Christmas as family was looking into a brimming Santa Claus himself, yet they have been in use less than a century.

According to most records, the first Christmas card was designed in 1846 by Mr. J. C. Horsley, a prominent member of the Royal academy of London. It was produced at the request of Sir Henry Cole, a popular man with many friends.

Sir Cole wondered how he could express his personal Christmas greeting to a thousand friends spread throughout England. After dismissing the thought of visiting each personally, or giving presents, he decided to send them each a

SHARING THE SHEPHERDS' JOY (Christmas Lesson)

LESSON TEXT—Luke 2:8-20. GOLDEN TEXT—Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to-ward men.—Luke 2:14.

Tinsel and toys, snow and sleigh bells, crowded department stores and rushing throngs, gifts and greet-ing cards, Christmas dinner and fel-lowship with family and friends— is that all Christmas means to us? All these things are proper in their place—exciting and interesting—but they are not enough.

They have never been enough and certainly they will not do this year, with a world in chaos. We need not lose any of the thrilling enjoyment of Christmas by properly observing the day; in fact, we shall only enhance its meaning and bring out its real glory by keeping Christ at the heart of our Christmas.

The opening verses of Luke 2 tell us of the coming of Mary with Joseph to God's appointed place at His appointed time for the coming into this world of His Son to be made flesh and dwell among us (John 1: 14). Our lesson tells us of

I. Good Tidings of Great Joy (vv.

God had good news for the people of this world and He gave it, as was His custom, to those who were faithfully discharging their humble duties (cf. Judg. 6:11, 12; I Kings 19:19). God is still ready to reveal His glory and grace in the "office, kitchen, mill, barn school-room, and open field—places where people are at work on daily tasks" (Douglas). You need not be in the great church in a large city to meet Him on Christmas day. He will reveal Himself in all His beauty where you are, though you be in the humblest surroundings and at the most menial task. Look for Him!

Jesus came as a Saviour. "The world did not want an adviser. The world had advised itself almost into hell. The world did not ask for a speculator. Everything that man could do had been done, and men sat in the darkness of their own wisdom. The world did not want a reformer, a man who could change his outward and transient relations, an engineer that would continually devote his time (for appropriate remuneration) to the readjustment of the wheels and the pulleys and the various mechanical forces of society. The world wanted a saviour' (Joseph Parker).

Note that the army of heaven came to declare peace, not war; but only to those in "whom He is well pleased" (v. 14, R. V.). As long as men serve the devil and displease God, they will have no peace.

II. Great Faith and Consistent Action (vv. 15, 16).

The shepherds did not say, "Let us now go and see if this thing has come to pass," or "which we expect or hope will come to pass," but said,
"which is come to pass." They went not to test God's word, but in the assurance that they would "see" what had come to pass. Blessed faith! Let us too believe God's word to us. But "faith without works is dead" (James 2:17). The shepherds might have made many excuses for not going but "they came" and "found" the Saviour. Perhaps you who read these words have failed at that point; you have not come to Jesus as your Saviour. No more appro-priate time could be found to come than right now. Believe, then act on your faith. Some of us who are Christians need also to learn of the shepherds. We talk a great deal about our devotion to Christ. Especially at this Christmas season we render much 'lip service'' to Him. Let us make it real, and our lives virile and active for Him. III. Good News for Meditation and Proclamation (vv. 17-20).

The gospel is literally "good-news." What a blessed privilege it is to have such good news in a day of evil tidings, of darkness and

There are two things we ought to do with the gospel of God's redeeming grace. We should make it known to the ends of the earth, but we should also do as Mary, "who kept ail these things and pondered them in her heart." We know she had special reasons for doing so, on cake in swirls. but may we not suggest that you too make this Christmas a time when you will ponder in your own heart what God has done for you in Christ?

The shepherds also set us a Christmas example, for they "made known abroad" the coming of the Saviour. Will you tell someone else today? Will you, like the shepherds, be "glorifying and praising God" this Christmas? You will if you, like them, go to the manger and meet Jesus. If you go to this world's empty show of celebration, you will return empty (see v. 20).

May the blessed peace of Christ be yours this Christmas. That is my wish from the heart to you

IT COMES UPON THE MIDNIGHT CLEAR . . MERRY CHRISTMAS AND A CUP OF CHEER! (See Recipes Below)

'Tis the night before Christmas and all through the house everybody's stirring except the wee people who are wandering in dreamland with Santa Claus. The little stockings have been filled to bursting, the last package has been tied up in tissue and ribbon, the Christmas angel has taken the tree under the shadow of its wings . . . and everybody's hungry!

wish each other Merry Christmas and gather round the buffet table for a snack and a cup of cheer. The bill of fare, on such an occasion, is as simple as the way it's served; a platter of cold meats, served with hot chili sauce; soft rolls or French bread or perhaps melba toast; and cookies for the sweet tooth are the perfect accompaniment to hot tea which quickens the Christmas spirit. Or perhaps you'd like to serve bowls of creamy, old-fashioned oyster stew, with toasted hard rolls, a green salad if you like, and for dessert doughnuts with hot, spicy apple sauce. Oyster Stew (Serves 6 to 8) 1 quart oysters ½ cup butter 2 quarts rich milk Salt and pepper to taste Place oysters, strained oyster liquor, and butter in a saucepan and Place sugar, corn syrup, salt and water together in a saucepan and cook to the firm ball stage (250 degrees). Pour the hot syrup slowly into the well-beaten egg whites, beating constantly. South African Racket

Cape Providence, South Africa, is prepara g drastic action against the money-making racket of "jackal breeders," it is stated in Capetown. It has been discovered that in parts of the province professional hunters, who destroy jackals for bounties have been capturing only the cubs, allowing adult animals to escape, and thus providing for the next season's "crop." It is suspected that in certain districts there are secret jackal breeding establishments, the owners of which make big profits by constantly turning in very young jackals. Last year the record number of 36,000 were destroyed at the standard rate of $2.50 an animal. In some districts $3.75 is paid.

Further, we have in our school this year an Achevement Roll. It functions in this way-if a student improves his work in any one subject by a full grade in any grading period over the grade in that subject during the pre-vious marking period, and does not have any grade lowered, he qualiles for recognition on the achievement roll. To illustrate this—a student received four "D's" in a marking period. In the following marking period he received three "D's" and a "C." This would qualify him for the achievement roll

FIRE DRILLS (Hazel Galliker)

This year we have changed our ethod of fire drilling in this ay. Students have been given instructions to use the exits which are nearest to the room in which they are situated. The new method will help to relieve congestion in the front of the building, because part of the students go down the back hallway. In this way confusion is also eliminated from contact with the grade students. Instructions were also given as to the necessity of leaving the building at once. Remember, if there is a real fire, a moment spent in loitering may result in serious bodily harm or even death.

Brain Surgery Pictures

Japan's first medical sound moving picture was released recently in Tokyo. The film, which shows a delicate piece of surgery on the brain of an epileptic, is the work of Dr. Makoto Saito of Nagoya medical university. The picture was planned and directed by Dr. Saito, who has 50 reels of silent medical films to his credit, and the operation was performed by him. High spot is the removal of an affected area of the brain about as big as a nan's thumb, from the head of a 28-year-old male patient. The man recovered rapidly. Music is played on the sound track so that the actual scenes of the operation, which are gruesome, may not have a bad eflect on the audience.

Working Toward a New Day

NEW note of understanding has come into the American Public's thoughts concerning the railroads.

It is now recognized that the coming of new forms of transportation has brought about disruption of the normal transportation situation. These new agencies must be properly fitted into the nation's distribution system if the best interests of the public are to be served. And certainly that program must include attention to the present disordered and unfair regulation requirements under which the railroads are the worst sufferers.

Armed with this new sympathy, the public in recent years has sought to rectify this injustice. Congress, in 1935, and the various states have passed laws to this end. This year Congress enacted the so-called Trans portation Act of 1940.

But much additional progress along this line must be made before the railroads are on a parity with their competitors. To achieve equality will not harm other forms of transportation; is no more than justice requires; and definitely will be in the public interest.

Our members of the Michigan legislature and our representatives in Congress are urged to exercise justice, fairness and common sense in considering any legislation intended to bring equality into our transportation industry.

Some folks still can't believe their eyes

NOING over Buick dealers' reports on our 1941 models, we find an unusual thing happening.

Time and again cars come in for the usual inspections with an extra note of instructions-"Please check the gas gauge needle."

Even after hundreds of miles, people mistrust their eyes when they see its snail-like pace from the Full mark toward Emptythey don't see how it's possible for a car as big as Buick to go so far on so little.

But it does—and for good reasons.

The whole FIREBALL engine was designed and built to get the most good out of modern gasolines.

And the simple secret of Compound Carburetion is that it keeps your engine running on its most frugal diet for all normal driving - and provides full feed only when you need, want and call for the lift of extra wallop.

Meantime even the gears are helping save money-for the regular high gear in a Buick gives you the economy of the so-called "gassaving" top speeds you hear boosted so enthusiastically.

The big thing is, of course, that this is no small car that's setting these economy figures. There are all the room, size, impressiveness, comfort and downright thrilling performance you expect from a Buick.

But we assure you that it isn't because the needle's out of kilter that it goes down so slowly. It's simply because it's in a FIREBALL Buick.

David Mallory, in search of newspaper work in New York, is forced to accept a job as switch-board operator in a swank apartment house, managed by officious Timothy Higgins. There David meets Miss Agatha Paget, a crippled old lady, and her charming niece, Allegra. One day, talking with Higgins in the lobby, David is alarmed by a piercing scream. David finds the scream came from the Ferriter apartment, not far from the Pagets'. The Ferriters include Lyon and Everett, and their sister, Ione. Everett, a genealogist, is helping Agatha Paget write a book about her blueblooded ancestors. Inside the apartment they find a black-bearded man—dead. No weapon can be found. The police arrive.

"It wasn't completed," Shannon replied. "If it had been we'd have been here an hour sooner. He was calling Police Headquarters when he was killed."

He plumped into his chair as though the weight of jumbled facts had pushed him over.

"From three-thirty on, there was someone in the hall all the while?"

"I think so. I left Higgins there when I brought Miss Paget upstairs. Hoyt was there when I went down "And neither of them saw anyone go out," he snarled like the victim of a practical joke. "And you "No."

He jumped up and began to walk the room, his jaw hard. Miss Aga-tha, leaning forward in her chair, watched him with the interest of a spectator at play.

"Could anyone leave without pass-ing through the foyer?" Shannon threw at me.

"There's the fire escape," I suggested, "or the dumb-waiter." "Thanks," he said savagely. "The fire escape hasn't been used in months. I happened to think of that. And the dumb-waiter rope broke this morning and that tub of lard Higgins hasn't fixed it yet. Yet some-body stabbed that guy next door and got away. How?"

"Stabbed him with what?" I asked and only made him angrier.

"If I knew," he squalled, "I'd not be suffering here. A knife, you goof. A knife that was in this."

He darted to the desk and held a leather sheath, blackened by long wear, up before me.

"Ever see that before?" he demanded and, scarcely waiting for my denial, plunged on. "We found this under Blackbeard's armpitempty. Where's the knife? Gone with the murderer."

The hands he ran so frantically through his reddish gray hair seemed at last to control his mind. He asked me suddenly:

"Higgins had a key to that flat?"

"Anyone else beside these Ferriters?'

"I don't think so." "Higgins says not," he growled. phone receiver with his big paws try to keep my voice down. until there's not a clear fingerprint on it. Wait a minute. His eyes sparkled. "Where was Higgins when you took that call?"

I saw Miss Agatha shift a little in her chair, start to speak and check herself. I said:

"Upstairs on the elevator." "Doing what?"

I kept all feeling out of my voice. "He said he was fixing the water tank on the roof."

"You can go," Shannon decided.
"Jake, bring that big beef back here.' Miss Agatha said mildly as I rose:

"Timothy was on the fourth floor I'm certain, Captain." "Sure he was," he agreed. "I just want to see if anyone saw him He was pacing the floor again and the old lady was smiling oddly as Jake led me out. I felt Miss Agatha would confide in Shannon when I was gone.

Hoyt was on the elevator. He looked at me hard but said nothing while Jake took me downstairs. Higgins was arguing with a half-dozen men in the foyer and getting nowhere. I could tell they were reporters and the sight of them made me homesick. Higgins looked worse than I felt when Jake led him back to the car. His face was gray and his eyes made me think of a steer in a slaughterhouse chute. I waited by the elevator shaft till Hoyt came down again. With him was a policeman who shooed the reporters off the settees and out of the door. I followed Eddie over to the switch-

"You don't think," I asked and the words sounded foolish, "that Higgins is tied up in this thing?"

"Be your age," Hoyt advised me and then grinned. "The big boy looks sick, don't he?"

"That's what made me wonder." "Look," Eddie muttered. "You know that smart little trick on the fourth floor-Mrs. Arnold's maid? Well, Mrs. Arnold's out this afternoon and Mrs. Higgins is away till tomorrow. And two and two makes—"

"Ah-hah!" I said.

"Right," Hoyt agreed. "Higgins has got an alibi, all right, but I think they'll have to tear it out of him. That's why he looks so sick."
"Well," I told him, "an alibi is the homicide men went away with their black satchels. A few indignant tennants worked through the res you've missed. Have a drink?" blockade beyond the front door and hurried along the foyer talking to themselves. Eddie turned the car over to Boone of the night shift and went home, and Fineman, my relief, had just come in when Higgins came downstairs again.

I had been through a lot that afternoon and I suppose my mind had slowed up. I really thought he wanted to thank me for saying he had been on the roof, so when he spoke I stood and stared. His voice sounded as if he was afraid someone would overhear, but he could have been no angrier if he had screamed.

"You had your chance," he told me. "You didn't want it, eh? All right. I don't want you. Get your things and scram."
"Wait a minute," I stalled. "If you're canning me, what's it for?"

"After what I've been through upstairs," he wheezed and his big fists were clenched, "you've got the guts to ask that. Slandered me and a poor innocent girl, so ye did. You ought to thank me I'm just kicking you out into the gutter where you belong, instead of calling a cop."

His voice had got away from him.

"Will you be still?" he asked in a hushed voice, and I knew from his eyes he was going to hit me.

"Go ahead," I invited. "There's plenty of reporters outside. It'll make a good story. The tabloids will have pictures, too. One of you in Wilson's uniform, maybe."

I waited. He stood still and at last opened his mouth. I never found out what he was going to say for Fineman, at the switchboard, called:

"Hey, Mallory. You're wanted up in Three A right away.'

"Don't bother to pack for me," I told Higgins. "I'll do it myself when I come down."

Boone, on the elevator, kept glancing at me as he took me up. Maybe I looked as sick as I felt. Anger is worse than liquor on an empty stomach.

They had closed the door of the Ferriter flat but there still was movement inside. I rang the Paget bell. The girl in uniform I'd seen in the hall while Miss Ferriter was screaming let me in. She led me down the hall and stood aside at an open door. I started to enter but astonishment stopped me. I could only stand on the threshold and stare without belief.

CHAPTER IV

Miss Agatha Paget laid a red ten on a black jack. A tall glass stood beside the cards on her table. A cigarette dangled from her lips. Through its smoke her eyes shone bright as the diamond pin at the throat of her black silk gown.

She should have been knitting in-stead of playing Canfield. The drink, the cards and the tobacco seemed as out of place as a cuspidor in church. She blew a cloud from her nose, ground out the cigarette on a tray, and nodded toward a chair.

"Come in, David," she said. "Sit down." I obeyed. She held a card above the layout, placed it and then looked square at me. "If that is an air of affronted piety," she told me, "I can get along

A half-hour went by. A couple of | without it. When you're my age, She looked toward a cellarette in the corner. I shook my head. Her sharply angled, eager face made me wonder whether the vitality denied her crippled legs had not flowed upward, to invigorate the rest of her. She took a long pull at her glass and wiped her lips on a lacy handkerchief.

"Grove," she began, "tells me you've been discharged."

I didn't know Grove but I said:

"I have. I'm supposed to have bared the amours of the basement Casanova.'

She gave her husky chuckle.
"It was I who bared them. Only a remarkable man could be wrong as often as Timothy."

She tinkled the ice in her glass, sipped it again and then looked straight at me.

"What are you going to do?"
"When you sent for me," I said,
"I was just going to take a poke at Higgins.' The wrinkles about her eyes deepened. "You quote Kenneth Grahame; you want to punch Timothy. What other recommendations have you?" I did not understand. She prompt-"You've been a reporter. What else can you do?" I could not see where all this led, but I answered: 'I'm a fair blocking halfback and

"I'm a fair blocking halfback and a good fencer. I also ride, swim and know a couple of card tricks."
"College, eh?"
I wondered if this was her idea of amusing herself.
"B. A." I told her. "The diploma is in Omaha. I also had a Phi Beta key but I haven't now—there are rules against hoarding gold, you see. I can ransom my dress clothes I can ransom my dress clothes though, if you feel you need a butler. They're in the trunk my former landlady is keeping for me. She insisted on it."

I had begun to feel like a laboratory specimen under her regard. It bothered me. When Miss Paget asked: "Would you care to work for me?" I shook my head.
"Kind of you," I told her, "but 1 think not. I've got relatives in Nebraska if I want charity."

I think that surprised her. She

I think that surprised her. She lit another cigarette.

"My boy," she said through a smoke cloud, "I'm beginning to understand why Higgins doesn't like you. It isn't charity. People I help have to work for what they get. Is that clear?"

It wasn't, but I nodded. She went on:

"I'm working, with Mr. Ferriter, on a genealogy of the Paget family.
You've heard of the Pagets."
"Sorry," I said and hoped my denial would irk her. Instead she grinned and for an instant it seemed time had worn her old face so thin that a valiant spirit shone through the mask.

"Weren't you lucky," said Miss Agatha, "to have been raised in Nebraska? If you'll stop being suspicious, I've something to tell to you." She finished her drink. Her eyes were bright and mocking. "Paget, David, isn't just a family name. It's a religion—a very exclusive, comfortable religion. The only reason there wasn't a Paget on the Mayflower is that the ship had no royal suite. There aren't any D. A. R.'s or Sons of the Revolution among the Pagets. You see, the patriots were rather a mixed lot. I was raised in the fear of Pagetry and I'm doing a book about my forebears by way of reprisal. I need a man, preferably one who never heard of the Pagets, who can take what the heliotrope Mr. Ferriter digs up and write it. He can't-or he's

"A genealogy is just a catalogue," I told her. "You won't need a writ-

"Wrong all the way," she told me riskly. "That's just what I do briskly. need. There's never been a genealogy like this one. I'm prying the highly polished veneer off Pagetry. I'm going to tell the story of a family that is full of cowards and scoundrels and hypocrites and cheats and sluggards-like your family, like all families. I'm going to give as much space to my ancestors' frailties as to their virtues. It'll be a big book."

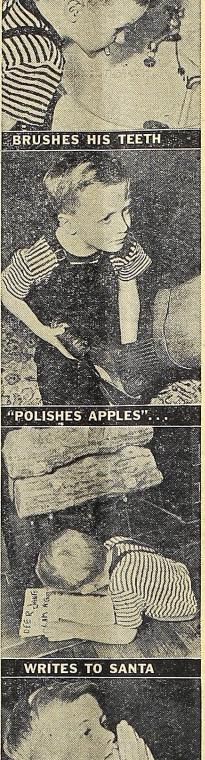

Again she gave that robust chuckle. I asked, defensively, for I felt her sweeping me along:

"Who'll dare to publish it?"
"I will," she said, and her teeth bit through an invisible thread. "One copy for each of the Pagets. Most of them are too far gone for the truth to reach them, but I want my children to know all about Pagetry before they're much older. They aren't really my children, though I raised them. My brother and sister-in-law died when Grosvenor was thirteen and Allegra ten.

"Grove is working in a bond house for all he's worth-which is about half of what he gets. Allegra is too pretty to have brains, yet she has them. I want my book to keep them from going Paget. Every family should have a factual account of its ancestors, their weaknesses and foibles and misdemeanors and felonies. The Pagets will be the first to get it. I don't want my youngsters to get the family delusion that just being a Paget is all that should be expected of anyone."

Nation's Christmas Bill Set at $62 per Family; Toys Cost $183,000,000

You're paying a part of this bill: Santa's middle men predict a $183,000,000 national toy bill this year, which would be about the same as was spent last year to spread cheer among the youngsters. The array around American Christmas trees this season, including toys, will cost each family an average of $62.50, according to reliable surveys. There's another side to it. Between 250,000 and 300,000 persons are being added to the nation's payrolls during the holiday rush, and the turnover should raise total 1940 sales for the year to at least last year's volume of nearly $40,-000,000,000.

X-Ray an Aid In Treating Sinus Trouble

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON ONE day you may read of the great success certain specialists have had in the treatment of chronic sinus ailments by use of X-rays and of how the clearing up of the sinus infection has resulted in greatly | COLUMN improved hearing of the patient. The specialist in this case has treated a number of cases and had cured or helped the majority of them. Perhaps the next day you read of another specialist using X-ray treatment in the same number of cases without any success whatever. Now there would appear to be something wrong when one specialist gets good results from a method of treatment and another gets no

satisfactory results

whatever. Dr. E. Trible Gate-Dr. Barton

wood, Richmond, in Archives of Otolaryngology (ear and throat) reports the study of 22 cases of chronic sinus infection (sinusitis) before and after treatment by X-ray. Four patients of the group showed complete relief of symptoms and eight were improved as far as their symptoms were concerned. Ten patients were not helped at all. Why were some of these cases cured, some improved and others not helped at all?

Ventilation of Sinus Needed. It depends upon the condition of the lining or mucous membrane of the sinus. When this has become very thick or hardened, the X-ray (in the dosage given anyway) was unable to penetrate or restore it to normal. If this lining can be restored to normal, the sinus can be properly ventilated. A well-ventilated sinus gives no trouble, as the air destroys harmful organisms and, if lining is not swollen and thickened, the sinus can drain properly into the nose and throat.

Another point about the success or nonsuccess of X-ray treatment of sinus infection is that X-ray specialists are not agreed as to the 'dose" of X-rays that should be given or how often.

Sufferers with chronic sinus disease who have tried without success all the usual methods of treatment-sprays of adrenalin up the nose, washing out with salt and water, injections of ovary extractscan finally try X-ray treatment.

How to Relax And Go to Sleep

▲ PHYSICIAN is often asked by A adult patients as to the length of time they should sleep, and his answer in most cases is that eight hours is about right.

Two cases often cited are Thomas Edison, who slept about four hours at night, and Woodrow Wilson, who required nine or ten. Most people forget that Edison was hard of hearing, and so when he slept he was not disturbed by noises low or loud, strange or familiar.

It is being able to keep body and mind relaxed that prevents us from becoming tired too soon. A completely relaxed body and mind is getting 80 per cent as much rest as if it were asleep; that is, from the standpoint of heart rate, breathing, temperature and blood pressure.

When the physician wants the patient to relax completely so that an examination of the abdomen can be made he asks him to hold his mouth open and breathe slowly through the mouth. This relaxes the body and, to a considerable extent, the mind also.

Relaxation is the exact opposite of tenseness. To relax requires no effort. It means to "let loose," to stop doing. In learning to relax a person learns to recognize tenseness wherever it occurs in the body. By letting each part of the body go limp or loose-legs, arms, trunkone after the other or all together, tenseness of body disappears and with it often tenseness or alertness

Sometimes when there is no noise, no light, no draft, no heat or cold keeping you awake, try lying on ei-ther side with arms and legs bent and your mouth loose and open. You may snore, but you should get off to sleep.

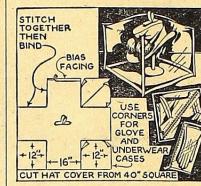

QUESTION BOX

Q.-Would prostate gland trouble have any unfavorable congenital effect on a child? Is it possible to cure prostate gland trouble?

A.—If prostate trouble is simply an enlargement of the gland this could not affect a baby born to you. If infection is present treatment by a specialist is usually necessary. Sometimes it is necessary to remove prostate gland. Don't hesitate to speak to your family physician about it.

Cottage School Makes First TB Stamp Returns

The Cottage school at Whittemore, with Theda Charters as teacher, was the first in Iosco county to send back proceeds from the annual rural school sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals, the Michigan Tuberculosis Associa-tion announced this week. Many of the schools are requesting more seals 18 as the sales this year are going higher 22 than ever before.

The scal sale in rural schools is usually conducted on a competitive basis. This year, the chidren are divided into two teams: one called Mi-40 crobe Hunters, and the other, Germ-Chasers. Children sell the seals only in districts where it is difficult to reach all purchasers by any other medium.
