Defense Funds Constitute Largest Item In 17 1/2 Billion Dollar National Budget; Blockade on Food for France Is Lifted; British Win New Victories Over Italians

FIRM WORDS: President Speaks

President Roosevelt spoke to the new congress. There were no weasel words. The President was grave. His speech was frank, and fighting. He said he would call on congress to give authority to provide "billions of dollars" worth of weapons needed by the embattled democracies of the world. He warned appeasers and subversive elements that the government would use its sovereignty to save the government. He admitted that the defense effort is lagging in some quarters and demanded sacrifices from business, labor and agriculture.

England has been criticized at home and abroad for not making earlier a statement of its war aims. President Roosevelt covered this detail as far as the American effort goes. He said America was seeking to protect the fundamentals on which this government was founded—free speech, a free press, the right to worship as a person's conscience dictates; and, lastly "freedom from want and freedom from fear."

The President made no light matter of the danger. He said secret troops of the dictators already are among us. He said as long as the aggressor nations maintain the initiative, America is not safe. He declared whatever stands in the way of speed must give way to the national security.

It was the most unique message ever delivered to a new congress. Usually President's messages to new bodies go into lengthy and detailed recitals on a multitudinous amount of administrative complexities. This message dwelt on one subject—defense and speed in defense.

Two days later came the President's new budget message. It called for a total expenditure of $17,485,526,049 during the 1942 fiscal year beginning July 1, 1941. This is the highest budget in history except the war year 1918-19. Over 10 billions of this amount is to be used for U. S. defense spending. The balance of non-defense spending came to well over six billions, a little less than this year.

More taxes will be needed, said the President's message, to pay these bills. The public debt will pass the $49,000,000,000 limit by June 30 this year, and the President suggested removal of the debt limit.

Almost $2,000,000,000 was included to maintain agricultural aid at present level. The WPA item was cut to $995,000,000, a drop of $400,000,000 from this year.

PROPAGANDA: New Style

Before France fell, the civil population was lulled into a false sense of security by assurances of the invincibility of the Maginot line. When Germans cracked the lines, the whole French nation went jittery and fled—from anywhere to anywhere. They believed all had been lost, and in the resulting confusion all was lost.

European propaganda staffs, quick to sense public reactions, took a lesson. The British immediately began giving their people the ugly facts. People's minds were "conditioned" to expect the worst. When what happened wasn't half as bad as expected, public morale rose.

When Australian troops battered their way into Bardia, Italian Libya, and took the first fortified town captured by British troops in the war,

New Commander

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, by direction of the President, has announced that Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel (above), has been appointed commander-in-chief of the entire United States navy and personal commander of the Pacific fleet.

Mussolini could have silenced the bad news, since all the Italian press is controlled by him. But even before British broadcasters could tell of their troops successes, Italian announcers were breaking the news to their own people, and no effort was made to deny the loss was serious. In fact, for days Italian minds had been "conditioned" to expect the loss. There is belief in some excellent quarters that 15,000 Italian troops in Bardia, cut off from retreat and with little food and water, were ordered to hold out at the sacrifice of their lives while this radio propaganda could be carried out at home.

Boys From Down Under

Conversely there was no celebration in England, although the British figuratively lifted their hats in appreciation to the Anzacs who fought amid heat and sand in Egypt. Anzacs are Australian and New

When the British forces entered Bardia after routing the Italian stronghold, Air Gunner H. T. Brundidge, 25, (above), was the lone American in their ranks. He holds a civilian pilot's license and has been recommended for an Air Force commission.

Zealand troops who came half way round the world to answer England's call, just as their fathers had done in the World war. Officially they are members of the Australian and New Zealand army corps.

The Anzacs are one of the oddest armies in the world, knowing little of the discipline quirks that govern many other bodies of troops. The Anzacs do not salute the officers of their own army, and certainly not the officers of any other, including the British. Colonels are likely to be called by their first names even when addressed by privates; captains and sergeants mingle with the utmost freedom. All troops eat at the same table and wear the same uniform, the only difference being insignia of rank.

But any World war veteran will tell you that the Anzacs are one of the fightin'est bunch of men ever to raise a gun.

For 20 days they had to stand outside the gates of Bardia, waiting the word to attack, and growing more impatient by the hour. When the signal came the city fell in less than 48 hours.

FOOD FOR EUROPE: Britain Relents

American governmental pressure upon London has brought a change in blockade policy and will result in some food shipments being made to Spain, unoccupied France and Finland.

U. S. authorities have been negotiating with the British for months to obtain a reversal of the order. The British were afraid that any food reaching Europe soon would be in the hands of the Germans, whom they accuse of stripping occupied territory so as to increase rations at home. The story told in France was repeated to American diplomats. In France, it is said, there is a German waiting every time a chicken lays an egg.

Besides, it was pointed out to the U. S. agents, that it is the duty of the conquering nation to feed the conquered, and it was recalled that American and British sacrifices were necessary after the Armistice in 1918 in order to get food into Germany, both occupied and unoccupied territory.

But American pressure continued, and London unwilling to be stubborn with the nation to whom it is looking to supply much of its munitions, finally relented.

SEA WOLVES: History Repeats

The German quota of three British ships sunk daily was raised to five as a sea raider appeared in the Pacific to war on the British trade lines. Prisoners taken by the raider and later released said the captain of the German ship is Count Felix von Luckner. Count Von Luckner led the British a merry chase in 1916. Then he was supplied with an old sailing vessel by the German navy, ran the blockade and left behind him a trail of sinking ships from the west coast of Ireland to the South Seas.

After the war, Count Von Luckner came to the United States. He lectured to audiences that were dazzled with his good-natured rillery. He leased a sailing ship and took the sons of wealthy parents on summer cruises for large fees. He expressed disgust with the Nazi government.

But the count's present audiences are not being dazzled. They say he sank their ships without warning, killing women and children, that he huddled what prisoners he took in evil quarters with little food. Ever the gallant, however, he gave them a complaint book in which they entered all the complaints they wished to make about the ship. He promised them the book would be for his personal attention. But there was no indication he bothered after reading the complaints.

Meanwhile, there was a hint that American vessels might soon take over the Pacific trade routes and release British vessels there for the more vital Atlantic runs, in areas closed to American ships under the neutrality act. The idea was discussed at the outbreak of the war. Washington sources say the British vetoed it. London sources say the proposal never got an answer from American shippers.

NEW DRAFT: Legion Plan

When next fall rolls around, it has generally been expected President Roosevelt will call for a new enrollment in the selective draft. The idea behind this is to take care of those who have attained their twenty-first birthday since October, 1940, and to exempt those who have passed their thirty-sixth birthday. The new enrollment would call for new drawing of numbers which might see some lifted to top positions who now are far down the list.

The American Legion has come forward with a new plan. It calls for enrollment in a new selective draft only of youths between the ages of 18 and 21. Moreover it would be a permanent arrangement, not like the present law which is operative only during the present threatening emergency. It would call for compulsory military training of the nation's youth as a matter of regular national policy.

MISCELLANY:

Death pursued four navy air corps members. They with three others, including two officers, were riding in an amphibian plane in Texas when caught in a storm. The pilot, to lighten his load, ordered the five enlisted men to parachute to earth. Four landed safely, one tore loose from his chute and fell to his death. A naval court of inquiry was ordered to fly to the scene near Big Spring, Texas, for an investigation. After the official proceedings the court flew toward San Diego, Calif., with the four enlisted men in the plane. In a lonely California canyon the plane crashed. Eleven were killed, including the four who had survived the adventure in the other plane.

A million dollar increase in pay has been awarded to employees of the Tennessee Valley authority. The increase, affecting 10,000 employees of the federal agency, was agreed upon at the annual wage conference of the TVA and the Trades and Labor council.

Harry Hopkins, former secretary of commerce and close personal friend of President Roosevelt, is in London on a special mission. The circumstances recall the special missions in 1916 of Col. Edward House, personal friend of President Wilson.

Lower left, the port wing of a Walrus plane gets its load of bombs before the takeoff. Lower right, a war bird comes home to roost.

Military Training Helps Reformation

Free French Fight on for Liberty

Somewhere in England, and in an English port, this destroyer now flies the standard of the Free French forces who fight on for liberty. It was one of the ships of war that came over to England rather than surrender when the French government capitulated to the Nazis. Craft of the Free French navy are now doing regular duty with units of the British fleet.

The Army's Men in White

"Ten below zero" is what the thermometer said as this ski patrol of the U. S. army started out from the Plattsburg, N. Y., barracks for a winter training march. These men, clad in outfits like those made famous in the recent Finnish war, are members of the Twenty-sixth infantry. They are being trained in ski and snowshoe maneuvers.

NAMES . . . in the news

Judge—J. Warren Madden was first chairman of the National Labor board, but his decisions caused so much criticism in congress that President Roosevelt despaired of naming him for a second term, fearing senate opponents would block ratification. So the President named him to the U. S. court of claims. His enemies in the senate still were displeased but approval finally came.

Fame—Mrs. Martin J. Weller was one of the most famous lion tamers in the world 40 years ago. She was world wide known as "the lady of the lions." She quit her profession after the St. Louis World's fair, but remained living in that city where she died the other day at 75.

Wealth From Waste

Wealth out of waste is being made by the village of Esholt, England. By burning wool grease into soap the village is giving employment to many persons and adding to its revenues. More than 70 mills discharge into the sewers waste matter which enters the sewage works at Esholt. Ten tons of soap powder are turned out of the plant at frequent intervals. The plant was constructed to exploit new commodities found in the recovered wool fat as a result of research at the Esholt laboratory. In addition by-products useful in the manufacture of paint are sold. Large sums have been collected in taxes from these operations.

At Close Speaker's Remarks Had Become a Nightmare

The dinner came to an end, and the chairman called for silence. "Gentlemen," he began, "I will now call upon Mr. Long, our distinguished guest, to speak." The guest rose and was greeted with polite applause. At the end of ten minutes he was still speaking, but when at the end of half an hour he had not finished the patience of his listeners began to get exhausted. In the end the speaker wound up with: "Speaking is nothing to me. As a boy I used frequently to talk in my sleep." "And now," a drowsy voice was heard to exclaim, "you talk in ours."

ONE special beauty of this design (No. 8836) is that you can make it up in household cottons for home wear, cutting the sleeves off short, and in spun rayon or thin wool for runabout, cutting the sleeves long! And it's so easy to make that you're certain to repeat it many times. Belted only in the back, with lengthening bodice panels that ac-

"It's only fair. My car keeps me well cleaned, too."

Mad Modes
"I say," said the first man, "has your wife been fighting?"
"Fighting?" exclaimed the second man, startled. "Of course not! What makes you think that?"
"Well, what's that pad over her eye for?"
"Pad? That's not a pad; it's her new hat."
