Not that he's a pessimist or defeatist. I remember meeting him on Mt. Desert Island, Maine, a few years ago and was tremendous-ly impressed with his faith, ardor and fighting spirit.

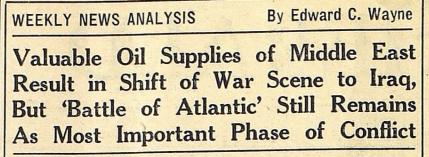

He knows a lot about wars and trouble. It was our Civil war that brought him here from his native Mannheim, Germany. His father was a prosperous cigar manufacturer. Civil war tariffs put him out of business and the family came to this country when Henry Morgenthau was nine years old. He was a lawyer at 23, turned to real estate and finance, and had his money-making over at 55, with time, means and mental equipment to turn to the humanities, to philanthropy and good works in general. Now he has a son in the cabinet, children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren and the unflagging energies which are the reward of an abstemious life.

When the British put forth an effort to hold the Iraq oil wells by force they faced cavalrymen like these. These Iraqi troops make an impressive sight on parade but Iraq asked Germany for heavy mechanized forces to aid in keeping the British from complete control of the highly valued oil fields.

(See Below: WAR-Changed Scene)

WAR:

Changed Scene Although nothing in the European war was a certainty except its uncertainty, it seemed reasonably likely that the attempted Axis pincers move against Suez via north Africa and the Middle East would change the vital scene of the war to that locality.

That Suez eventually would fall to the German-Italian forces was deemed a likelihood, though the failure of this campaign would conversely mean a distinct turn of the tide in British favor.

Even before the outset of the campaign, when the British had concluded the first move into Iraq, the British ministry of information attempted to prepare the public for an adverse outcome by letting it be known that even the fall of Suez would not be fatal to the British cause.

Indeed, the propaganda articles pointed to Alexandria as a much more vital spot in the Mediterranean than Suez, but how this helped when Alexandria was as much of an Axis objective as Suez was a little difficult to see.

Perhaps it was that the British thought they could hold out at Alex-andria after Suez had fallen, thus naming the objectives in chronological order.

All this was considerably in the future, however, for the British at-tempted to "jump the gun" as they had at Salonika and Piraeus, by landing an expeditionary force in Iraq. There was one vital differ-ence, however, that in Iraq they were meeting an unfriendly regime, whereas in Greece the landing was was this same group of oil wells. Of course, if the German drive southward should succeed, the Haifa end of the pipeline would fall as well as the Kirkuk end, not to mention the oil field itself.

Formula None doubted that Germany would hold to this so far winning formula of warfare and leave the Arabs largely to their fate until the planned advance had been thor-oughly worked out. This was the method employed in northern Af-rica, where the Germans let the Italians take their beating until they were driven back to Tripoli. Then the forces of the Reich crossed the Mediterranean, largely in Italian ships, landed on the north African coast, and promptly and with high speed drove the British back on their heels, taking everything that the Italians had lost in a matter of weeks, where it had taken the British months. This was the western end of the pincers which was aimed at Alexandria Egypt and Suez, with the move of the eastern end, which started with the Grecian campaign and the general Balkan infiltration, expected to start as soon as the proper diplomatic and military preparation was finished. Many believed the Germans would have to hurry this time, for some ob-servers reported the Russians to be drawing troops from the eastern part of the country, and beginning to concentrate them in central Rus-

This might mean two things, either a protective movement, or an effort to beat the Germans to the Near-Eastern punch and to go into the Eurasian territory themselves.

WAR:

Vital Phases It was evident that the war was entering several of its most vital phases, with Britain standing alone, though with constantly increasing American 'aid.

The big test which the Churchill government faced at the hands of the British commons was only a part

The battle was three-fold-the air fight over England, with the channel crossing threat behind it; the pincers move on the Mediterranean, especially Suez; the Battle of the Atlantic.

Over England

Over England Hammer blows being struck at Britain by the Luftwaffe no longer were being shrugged off in dis-patches as "some damage being done" or "some casualties feared," but dispatches from England told of most serious damage to Plymouth, which was practically ruined; to Liverpool, to Belfast, to the Clyde-side, all of them much more vital to Britain's defense than the smashing attacks on London and the Thames estuary. estuary.

Apparently paying little attention to the industrial Midland section of England, Hitler thus was centering his attacks on ports, ports and more ports, apparently seeking to tie in the battle of England with the battle of the Atlantic, rather than to con-centrate on a general air blitz centrate on a general air blitz against England's factories and her industrial production.

Another development was the constant increase of day fighting over the channel, regarded in many quarters as a trial balloon to an invasion attempt as soon as midsummer calmer weather should arrive.

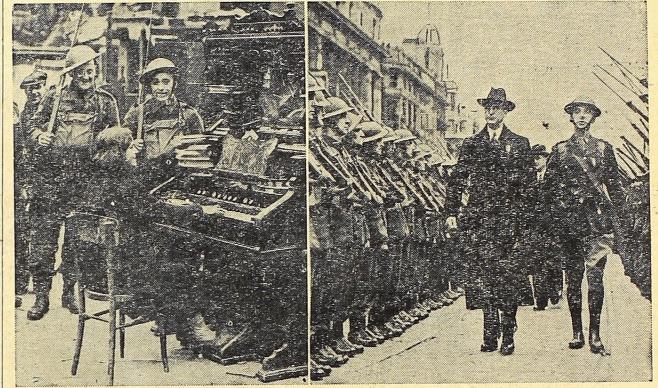

As always, the defense of Britain found its echo in this country, and the change in the method of Luftwaffe attacks on England found President Roosevelt issuing an urgent appeal, practically a command, to the air industry to concentrate on the production of the largest possible bombing planes. OPM said that America should

Dr. Edward L. Thorndike, author of the famous Thorndike intelligence test, probably wouldn't say there isn't any intelligence, but he does say intelligence can't be tested, according to news reports of his address before the American Philosophical society at Philadelphia. Dr. Thorndike's apostasy no doubt will set up some new measuring standards.

If we don't learn much, about keeping out of wars and such, it isn't Dr. Thorndike's fault. A professor at Columbia for 37 years, he is the author of a shelf of books in oil fields, and the British drive was the general field of the psychology of learning. He has just about sur-rounded the subject of "How We Learn." The question of what we fleet fuel for the Mediterranean learn seems to be still wide open.

In fact, he conditioned the even-tual mastery of the air by Britain on the American production of these very large bombers, and said that they must be built even if it means enlarging plants further.

MEDITERRANEAN: Also Important

The battle of the Mediterranean was no less vital and no less active than the battle of England. For on the eastern front the British found themselves, after the withdrawal from Greece, with new problems on their hands.

The Iraq coup left them with the possible loss of the Mosul oil fields, and the all-important pipeline from Kirkuk to Haifa falling into the hands of the Nazi-inspired Iraq government of Gailani.

The British swiftly landed an expeditionary force, shot it inland, and sent reinforcements. Yet it was obvious that the trouble in Moslem Asia Minor was on the increase, with the French in Syria frankly throwing up their hands and saying that they were unable to quell disturbances on the part of Arabs there. Turkey offered her good offices, and so did Egypt, but though there was religious unity in those directions, there was little unity of purpose, and it looked as though Britain would have to fight for her oil or give up and get oil somewhere else.

The prospect also was dark because of the menace of German aid to the Iraqi, which might make the pipeline untenable even if the British get full control of it.

SAILOR: Round-Up

Considerable excitement was occasioned by the immigration department's roundup of all German sailors on charges that they had 'overstayed their leave."

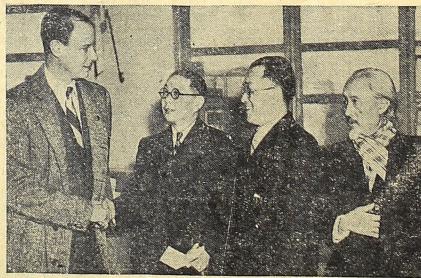

The government never has been strict with them. But it was signifi-cant that the roundup followed a Washington release by many correspondents which stated at great length that there has been a systematic sabotage of regular shipping.

In the "danger zone," the Dover-Folkestone area of England, which has become the "front" in the battle of Britain, home-guardsmen patrol the barren sea cliffs and shore-ready to give Hitler's Nazis a warm welcome if they come. Sergeant W. Read, a retired civil servant, stand-ing guard, typifies the spirit of Great Britain.

those sidewalk merchants whose business establishment is a keister (grip) on a tripod. New York is always a profitable field for pitchmen since New Yorkers will buy just about anything sold on the street, even watches without works. It's no trouble at all to attract a tip (a crowd of possible customers) but there is a drawback. A cop is liable to appear and chase the tip just when high pressure salesmanship is about to be applied. Also most pitchmen are gypsies at heart and like a change of scene. Hence with the coming of warm weather, many are on their way. They follow no set routes but flit here and there, always in search of places where they may "get the geedus," or gather in the coin in case you may need a translation.

A loosely knit fraternity are these nomads of the keister and the tripod. For their benefit, the "Billboard" each week has a column of "Pipes" in which pitchmen report from here and there. Here is a sample communication from a recent issue: "Territory around Jackson, Miss., is n. g. according to word from George Sanders who has been working hoops and blocks to draftees. Sanders says he plays the post office lobby and gets the boys as they come in for money orders as he knows they have money then. He saw H. L. Bird and brother in Hattiesburg, Miss., working wire jewelry and says he will beat them north in the spring. Sanders says to Bob Posey: 'I don't see how a fellow could get sick with all the big med men out in Texas unless it's that country you're in that makes you sick.'" . . .

Soldiers and sailors who, especially on week-ends, are coming to New York in such increasing numbers that uniforms are a common sight all around the town, are proving something of a headache to various night club managements. A number of spots, especially those regarded as swank, do not care for | napkins - they're inexpensive and the patronage of enlisted men. The prevailing rate of pay, $21 a month, even though the soldier or sailor should spend his whole 30 days' earnings in one place, doesn't mean much in a night club. Hence, there is a tendency to frown on the buck fill up the evening. But remember private or the newly enlisted member of the navy. The frowns, however, are hidden whenever possible. A law passed many years ago is responsible for the attempt to mask a night club owner's feelings. The measure provides for a $500 fine for discrimination against the uniform.

. . . While some of the "class" places do not welcome enlisted men, it is different when it comes to officers. That is due to two quite evident reasons. In the first place, officers as a rule have more money to spend than enlisted men. Second, proprietors hold that officers give tone to to women patrons. Then too, there are a number of socialite officers. There are socialite enlisted men with money to spend also. That complicates the situation. If an enlisted man should be informed by a headwaiter that there is no space available and another man in the same uniform but who is numbered among the elect, should walk up, be received with a bow and escorted to a table, there might be trouble. Possibly $500 worth of trouble.

COMMENCEMENT TIME

You can't believe it, can you? Susie is graduating from high school! In between putting the final stitches on her organdy dress and Serve an appetizer, one hot dish, plenty of salad and hot rolls, more cake or ice cream than you think you will possibly need, and flatter their sense of sophistication by offering second cups of coffee.

A fortune telling cake is always fun when the crowd is young and merry. You can write fortunes on slips of paper, roll them and wrap them in bits of waxed paper, and put them in the cake after it is baked. Another idea is to put in a little trinket for each guest-an entheir spots, especially when it comes gagement ring and a wedding ring, to forecast the first engagement and

Halifax Hums With Activity Housing Shortage Is Acute

Due to Doubling of City's Population.

HALIFAX, N. S .- Mushroomed to twice its normal population by the influx of wartime residents, Halifax, Nova Scotia's capital city, is faced in extreme form with the problems of housing and feeding that beset many Canadian towns and cities to-This Canadian port, so far day. east it operates in the Atlantic time belt, so near the war zone it practices a modified blackout, is full to overflowing.

It is a case of standing room only. Apart from the troubles of visitors, who telephone hopefully from one hotel to another in a vain search for rooms, local residents themselves have their housing worries. Business Girl's Lament.

Typical was the complaint of a Halifax business girl who wrote to a local editor protesting that men of the services were given preferences by landladies.

One reason, the girl suggested, was that housekeepers with marriageable daughters saw greater possibilities in a houseful of young men than in a bevy of bachelor girls. Again, service men in need of a room were willing to pay almost any price and double up with roommates as well, she said.

"But what about us-business girls of Halifax? We work all day in stores and offices; we have a pleasant smile for everyone, yet at the end of the day we never know whether we are going to receive a notice from our landladies to vacate our rooms.

Big Returns Economy is a great revenue .--A wise God shrouds the future

The problem, so far as swank night club impresarios are concerned, might be greater were it not for one thing. Prices are a better deterrent than a supercilious guardian of the silk rope. An enlisted man doesn't care to spend 75 cents or a dollar for a drink which he can get elsewhere for 25 or 35 cents. Or $5 for a steak. Then too, laying $3.50 on the line for a Saturday night cover charge isn't so good because there are many places where, no matter the night, there is no cover and no minimum. Hence the majority of men on leave drift into establishments where prices are moderate. And in these less pretentious places, they are by no means headaches.

Speaking of discrimination, an incident in Times square would seem to indicate that the dear sex is restrained by no law other than that of fancy. For instance, two sailors sauntered along Broadway each with a pretty girl on each arm, that is two girls to each sailor. Possibly 10 paces behind them, were two soldiers. Their uniforms were just as immaculate as those of the men of the sea, their shoes were just as highly polished but neither soldier had a girl.

Stir gelatin and cold water together. Let stand at least 3 to 5 minutes. Meanwhile simmer tomatoes with seasonings in a covered container for 10 to 15 minutes. Strain and add vinegar. Dissolve the softened gelatin in this mixture, and pour into one large mold, and chill until firm. When it has set and is ready to serve, it is divided into two squares with layers which are joined together with a filling of cream cheese. A cream cheese star decorates the top. This recipe makes 6 portions. Now for something truly different in the way of a hot dish-

*Veal on Skewers.

Cut boneless veal in pieces 11/2 inches square by about 3/4 inch thick. Stick on 8-inch metal skewers, alternating meat with slightly smaller peeled potato halves or cubes, chunks of carrot, and whole small white onions. Lay skewers in roasting pan, add 1 cup hot water, and salt. Cover and bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 1 hour, reduce heat to 350 degrees F., add more water if needed. Bake about 30 minutes longer, or until tender Garnish with broiled bacon. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

In a bulletin describing the experiments, Dr. A. C. Dahlberg said the most satisfactory results were obtained with ice cream when 25 per cent of the sucrose or cane sugar was replaced by corn sweeteners.

"Based upon sweetness alone," Dr. Dahlberg said, "a pound of cane sugar was equal to 1.1 pounds of corn sugar or dextrose, 1.5 pounds of enzyme-converted corn syrup, and 2 pounds of corn syrup solids. When used in these proportions, the corn sweeteners showed slight but definite improvement in body and texture of ice cream which could be detected by consumers. Consum-ers were unable to tell whether corn sweeteners had been used, however.'

A shift from all cane sugar, largely imported, to part corn sweeteners, entirely domestic, would rep-resent the use of some 25,000 tons of the corn product by America's ice cream industry each year.

Corn syrups are said to have improved the body and textures of ices and sherbets noticeably.

Blonde Gives Army Boys, 24 of 'Em, the Runaround

CAMP ROBINSON, ARK.-Two dozen soldiers of the 137th Infantry's Company F danced with a demure blonde from Little Rock at a recent social function.

To each she confided a telephone number.

But after the ball was over their delight turned to despair when they compared notes and found that all the numbers were different.

And despair turned to dudgeon when test calls were answered by the fire department, the police station, the dog pound and similar unromantic institutions.

"But I'm not sure that claim was ever established."

And it was equally obvious that his right either to champion my cause or control my destiny had never been established. But, for all that, an absurd little robin of happiness stood up on the tip of my heart and started to sing. "We can't go into that now," Lander said as old Schlupp came in with an armful of stovewood. And Katie, a moment later, was announcing that you couldn't kill some children with a club. All this little papoose needed, she called out to us, was food.

"Then she ain't a-goin' to kick the bucket?" questioned Sock-eye.

"Of course she isn't," said Katie. "But if I could lay hands on her fool redskin father I'd have him drawn and quartered." The old fire-eater's face brightened up with a new eagerness.

"I'll do it for you, lady," he said with a large and rounded oath. "Sam Bryson was a-tellin' me that noaccount Injin's hidin' out in a hill camp up above the Happy Day Mine. And I'd sure relish roundin' him up and ventilatin' his good-fornothin' carcass."

"No," Katie said, "that's a luxury we can't afford. But he's going to be made an example of by due process of law. And if either of you men will take Miss Coburn and the baby back to Toklutna in the truck I'll get help and push on to the Happy Day and see that this baby killer is put where he belongs."

Sidney Lander, who had been look-ing down at the blanket-wrapped papoose, lifted his head and caught my eye.

"I'll take Miss Coburn through to Toklutna," he quietly announced. And I could feel my pulse skip a beat, casual as I tried to appear about it all.

It was Sock-Eye who crossed to the door and looked out.

"There's sure a smell o' snow in the air," he warned. "We'd best fix up that truck more comfortable and stick a shovel in between the blankets and grub bags."

ing ghostly scraps of talk from my childhood.

"Well, so does the Trumbull outfit," proclaimed my companion. "The Chakitana Development Company always wanted a clean sweep of that valley bottom. They even sent me up there as field engineer to find out how the land lay and corral any territory needed to round out their development work. It was your father's claim which cut their field in two and kept them from having full control."

"He always said he'd never sell out," I explained.

"Of course he did," cried Lander. "He may have been a lone-fire prospector, but he knew he held a key position there. And when they

I'd always treasured that picture of him, the only one I possessed. "That means our battle's half won," proclaimed Lander.

"Why do you say our battle?" I asked. Lander's face, as our glances locked, hardened a little. Then he laughed his curt laugh. "Since I muddled into this thing," he said, "I'm going to be bullheaded enough to see it through." "But it's all so long ago," I objected. "And you can't wreck your career championing lost causes." "My career isn't wrecked. I'm thinking of swinging in with the Happy Day outfit, in fact, just beyond the Matanuska." "Why?" I asked.

"Because then we won't be so far apart," he said. 'You've been very kind to me," I said. "You're easy to be kind to," Lander retorted with a quiet intensity that should have shifted my heart action into high. But I had certain things to remember. "What does that mean?" I exacted. He leaned a little closer under the swaying lantern.

"It means I'm happier being with you than with anyone who walks this good green earth."

I was able to laugh a little. "It isn't green," I reminded him. "And you might also remember why you so nearly missed the boat at Seattle?'

I could see his jaw muscles harden as he sat staring at me in the dim light from the lantern. "I guess I'm running a little ahead of schedule," he said as he rose to his feet. I watched him, with a small tingle of disappointment, as he backed out of the tent opening. "You're not going away?" I cried out above the whining of the wind. "I'll bed down up in the driver's seat," he casually remarked. And in a few minutes I could feel the tremor of the truck as he climbed aboard, up in front. I could hear him, a moment later, as he nested himself under his double blankets. He wouldn't, I knew, be very comfortable there. I even wondered, as I stretched out on the hay next to my blanket-swathed little papoose, if wind and cold wouldn't drive him back under cover, where he had a perfect right to be.

BROADENING CHRISTIAN HORI-ZONS: SAUL'S CONVERSION

LESSON TEXT-Acts 9:1-16. GOLDEN TEXT-I was not disobedient anto the heavenly vision.-Acts 26:19.

The conversion of Saul is recognized as one of the outstanding events in Bible history. When two brilliant English lawyers, Lord Lyttleton and Sir Gilbert West, set out to disprove the truth of Christianity, they selected the resurrection of Christ and the story of Paul's conversion as the focal points of their proof. Working independently, they then came together to compare notes, and found that they had both become Christians as they had become convinced of the truth of the Scriptures.

The two events may well stand together as mighty evidence for Christianity, for only on the ground of regeneration can the change in Saul be accounted for, and only on the assurance that he met the risen Christ on the Damascus road can we account for his conversion. This is a great lesson, let us make the very most of it.

I. Saul, a Bold Persecutor (vv. 1, 2).

As our lesson opens we find the brilliant and zealous young Jew, Saul, "yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the dis-ciples of the Lord." The persecutions in Jerusalem had practically wiped out the church in that city, but had scattered the disciples abroad, and thus the witness had been spread. The death of the godly Stephen, to which Saul had given his approval, had only increased his determination to destroy those who were "of the way" of Jesus. Looking for new fields to conquer, he carried with him to Damascus letters from the high priest at Jerusalem, giving him authority to imprison the followers of Christ. But on the way he met Christ Himself, and was stricken to the earth.

II. Saul, a Convicted Sinner (vv. 3-9).

Stricken down by a brilliant heavenly light, he finds himself talking to the Lord Jesus. He hears from His holy lips the solemn indictment of those who persecute God's people-"Why persecutest thou me?" He who lays unkind hands upon, or brings untrue accusation against, God's children had best beware, for so closely is our Lord identified with His people that when they suffer, it is He who bears the hurt.

In a single sentence the Lord disposes of the persecuting zeal and the sinful skepticism of this proud young Pharisee, and Saul enters into Damascus not as the haughty persecutor, but as a man trembling and astonished. He spends three days shut in with his own soul and God, not seeing, not caring to eat, but entering into communion with God. By God's grace the old life is pulled up by the roots as it is displaced by the new life in Christ Jesus.

of blanket-wool again, with only its pinched little yellow face showing like a seal's at the bottom of a blowhole. Then we'd fight our way on for another hundred yards or two.

So we ploughed on, feeling out our way in the uncertain light. Twice, when we slewed perilously close to the ravine that yawned at our car wheels, I thought the end had come. And twice, where the trail wound so vaguely about the upper slopes, we had to cut our way through drifts, with the help of the shovel. We did very little talking. But I could breathe more easily when we were over the hump and dropping down into the next valley.

Yet even there the drifts and darkness were too much for us. We got off the road and bumped headon into a spruce stump. The old truck, with indignation boiling from its radiator cap, refused to go farther. I could see Lander's grim smile as I sat there staring out at the flailing snow. There wasn't a shack or settler, I felt sure, within ten miles of us.

"What'll we do?" I asked with a gulp.

"I suppose we'll have to sleep out here," he casually announced.

"I suppose so," I agreed. But I wasn't as placid-minded about it as I pretended. Lander, in fact, stared into my face for a moment. or two before swinging down from his driver's seat. Then he lighted the primus stove and hung a lantern from one of the bows of our little covered-wagon truck-tent. And then, after shutting out the snow and wind by closing the end flaps of the tarpaulin, he announced that he was going to have a look ahead along the trail.

He stayed away longer than I expected. By the time he got back, in fact, I'd melted snow and had our coffee boiling on the primus stove. The smell of that coffee made our little canvas-covered cave seem rather homelike. And my cave mate watched me with a ruminative eye as I warmed milk and fed the quietly complaining Indian baby. When our papoose was back in its blanketmuffled basket, and we sat eating, with the primus stove between us, it seemed oddly paleolithic to be squatting there on a bundle of hay, dining on bacon and beans and sourdough bread.

Lander helped me pack things away when the meal was over.

title by claiming his location lines were wrong. The official survey, when his first twenty acres were patented, showed the eastern limits of the claim to border on the Big Squaw where that creek ran into the Chakitana. The Big Squaw, in the open season, has a fine flow of water. And you can't mine in Alaska without water. I saw the Fairbanks Exploration Company spend a year and a half bringing water to their placer fields. And Trumbull wants that water for his upper shelf just about as much as he wants the claim.' "How do you know all this?" I asked.

"Because I've seen the Trumbull papers. And I made it my business to investigate some of the Trumbull moves. I know, for example, that while his engineers pretended to be doing development work their powdermen planted enough dynamite in the right place to change the course of Big Squaw Creek. Then they brought in a Record Office surveyor who naturally found the Coburn location stakes all wrong." "The thing that puzzles me," I interposed, "is why you're not loyal to the man you're working for." Lander's laugh was curt.

"If you can't sense that," he said, "I can't explain it to you." He laughed again, less harshly. "Let's put it down to the fact that a man can't work for a boss he doesn't believe in."

I still found a blaze or two missing along that trail.

"But why should he call my father's claim a fraudulent one?"

"Klondike Coburn, he contends, was born on the Canadian side of the line."

"That's true enough," I conceded. "But what about it?"

"A great deal. It means he wasn't a citizen. And the law says a patent can be allotted only to citizens." "But my father was naturalized,"

I told him, "a year or two before I was born. He even used to talk about when he moved up out of the Indian class and got a right to vote." Lander's spine suddenly stiffened. "Are you sure of that?" he demanded. "Trumbull claims there's no record of it."

"But I have his papers," I explained. "He sent them out to me so I could get my passports when I was sailing for Europe." I wondered at the grimness with morning, by Lander reaching in for the lantern. The drifter was over, he explained, but he'd have an hour of shovel work before we could hope to climb back to the trail bed.

He hadn't slept any too well, I'm afraid, up on his wind-swept driver's seat. I detected a sort of glum fury in his movements as he shoveled at the snowdrift that embedded us. Even after I'd boiled coffee and cooked breakfast for him he impressed me as unnecessarily constrained and silent. It was late in the afternoon when we got through to Toklutna.

Miss Teetzel promptly ordered the Indian baby to the infirmary and sent for Doctor Ruddock. Lander, ignoring the lady's glacial eye, quietly asked me if I'd be good enough to give him my father's naturalization papers.

I had no way of knowing what Miss Teetzel said to Lander during my absence. But I didn't like the heat-lightning fire that glowed in those deep-set eyes of his as he took the proffered document from me. He studied it, for a moment, the lines of his mouth still grim. "I'll take this, if you don't mind," he said as he tucked it away. "It'll help to clear things up.'

I wasn't unconscious, all the while, of Miss Teetzel's narrowed eye fixed on my face.

"There's one point I should like to see cleared up," she announced, her lips pressed into a foreboding straight line. "Where did you spend the night?"

"Why, in the truck, of course," I answered. "There was no place to go." "And this man?" she questioned with a second stony glance at the altogether unimpressed Lander.

"Naturally, he slept in the truck too," I quietly acknowledged. The lemon-squeezer jaw took on a new line of grimness. "I've an idea, Miss Coburn," said the lady of unpolluted purity so icily confronting me, "that your days in this school are quite definitely numbered." It was Lander who spoke first. "What does that mean?" he said.

"It means, sir," was the icily enunciated reply, "that there are certain things this institution will not stand for. And you and your perilously modern traveling companion have just been guilty of one of them.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

III. Ananias, an Obedient Disciple (vv. 10-12).

Ananias was the "I am here, Lord" type of Christian to whom the Lord could confidently commit His important business. All we know of him is what is contained in this chapter, but it is a very beautiful and enviable record. God is able to work directly on any human soul and accomplish His end (as He did with Saul on the Damascus road), but His usual manner of working is through faithful human agencies.

One wonders how much would be accomplished for God if every Christian were as willing and ready as was Ananias to do the Lord's bidding in seeking out and helping a struggling soul.

The greatest of all Christian leaders, the apostle Paul, was led out into his life of loyalty and service to Christ by a humble layman. Repeatedly God's Word by precept and example stresses the vital importance of personal work on the part of laymen and women. The leaders of Christian work during the coming generation are now in the Sunday school classes of our churches. perhaps in a little wayside chapel in the country, in the village church, in the mission or settlement house, or in the great city church.

IV. Saul, a Chosen Witness (vv. 15, 16).

The fears of Ananias that Saul might still be a worker of evil (v. 13) were soon overcome by God's assurance that in the praying Saul He had prepared for Himself "a chosen vessel" (v. 15) to bear the gospel to the Gentiles and to kings, as well as to Israel.

The great witness of Saul was to he accompanied by great suffering. How often the two go together, and both may be (as they were in Paul's life) for God's glory. Saul knew nothing of that subtle hypocrisy known as being "a secret believer," for at once he made open confession of his faith in baptism, and "straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues that he is the Son of God" (v. 20).

JOHN DEERE-VAN BRUNT MODEL "CC" CULTIVATOR takes over your important tillage jobs

You can make short work of cleaning your fields of weeds when you let a John Deere-Van Brunt Model "CC" Field Cultivator take over your important tillage jobs. Every time across the field, the Model "CC" tears out all weed growth and stirs the soil-preserves the moisture and saves those "profits" for you.

Whether it's roughing stubble fields, summer fallowing, making seedbeds, killing bindweed or other weeds, cultivating alfalfa, or breaking up land, you can do a better job with a John Deere-Van Brunt Model "CC" Cultivator. See this all-'round tilling machine at our store the next time you're in town.
