DEFENSE: Production

Returning foreign correspondents, making a junket of the defense production industries as guests of the war department, found that airplane motors, considered one of the potential bottlenecks, are being rushed into production at one plant in Connecticut to the tune of 1,400,000 horsepower monthly.

One official of this concern, reviewing what he knew of the potential production of this industry, predicted that between 70,000 and 100,000 airplane engines will be turned out during 1941-42.

The total airplane industry, from a motor standpoint, should eventually be turning out 10,000,000 horsepower a month.

While these producers had no accurate figures on Axis production, it was figured that it might be between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 a month at the present time, with future capabilities unfigured.

In addition to the three great American aviation motor concerns' output, the automotive industry has been asked for some, and while not in production yet, they will eventually contribute a large percentage of

This turned the pages back to World War I, when America's most important fighting airplane motor, the Liberty, was turned out in quantity in a leading automotive factory.

This factory also, by the way, was making the recoil mechanism for the 75-millimeter gun-then a war bot-

DRAFT:

The President softened the shock of the measure, which at first sight looked like an effort toward a complete economic dictatorship, by a later announcement that its major purpose was to permit the administration to break strikes in defense industries, which were still a knotty problem all over the nation.

Both Senator Byrd of Virginia and Senator Tydings of Maryland had taken the floor to demand that the President himself take the leadership in halting strikes, Byrd saying:

Urges Arms Boost

Stacy May, research chief OPM, is pictured as he told the senate defense committee that the gigantic American armament program must be doubled to aid Great Britain and other nations in overcoming the German advantage in production. He pro-posed that the goal of spending twenty billion dollars next year for arms be increased to forty billions.

DOORN: End of Road

The death of former Kaiser Wilhelm at 82 of a blood clot on the lung and the elaborate military funeral accorded him by the dictator of Germany, Adolf Hitler, former Austrian paperhanger, brought an odd and dramatic close to a long and interesting career.

The man who was so much in the forefront of the last war that the slogan "Hang the Kaiser" was on the lips of half the Allied soldiers, died after 22 years of exile after a ripe and peaceful old age, even in the midst of a present war which had brought the conquering hordes of his former country in triumph to his point of exile at Doorn, Holland.

Yet, even in this triumph, though the Germans could have brought the Hohenzollern monarch back to his throne had their desire been to do so, this was not done, and the kaiser and his family remained in exile, there for death to find him while the issue of the fate of his country was still in doubt.

However, the relations between Hitler-controlled Germany and the former monarch were as odd as the position of the civilized world at the time of the kaiser's death. Hitler seemed filled with respect and homage to his former monarch, though what the kaiser thought of the humbly born Austrian who succeeded him was little in evidence, and mattered just as little.

Hitler's final move-to order a funeral with full military honors, was the last there was in the news about the lord of the Hohenzollerns.

GASOLINE:

An Issue

No sooner had Secretary Ickes suggested "gasless Sundays" as a means of controlling the oil supply of the country than administration critics began asking embarrassing questions.

How could this country, with control of half the world's oil supply, be facing an oil shortage?

How did it happen that American concerns were selling oil and its products to Japan? To Russia? To other countries via which it might get into Axis hands?

The defense investigating committee in congress was asking some of these questions, and getting strange answers. The Standard Oil company had to explain the deal to its stockholders, and this brought the issue into more prominence.

The oil concern admitted the sale of oil and gasoline (except the 100octane airplane gas) to Japan, but said that when the agreement was made the British, American and Dutch governments were consulted, and that the terms were entirely acceptable to all three.

It was one of the puzzling phases of America's defense effort.

SEA WAR: Claims

Berlin, having claimed that half of Britain's entire merchant ship strength had been destroyed, asserted that the total had reached 11,000,000 tons.

Britain admitted six millions. Both agreed that British pre-war strength had totaled around 21 millions or 22 millions of tons.

The German claim was that, her ships sunk, Britain was "bleeding to death," and that a speedup of airplane attacks on merchant ships and war vessels might be expected.

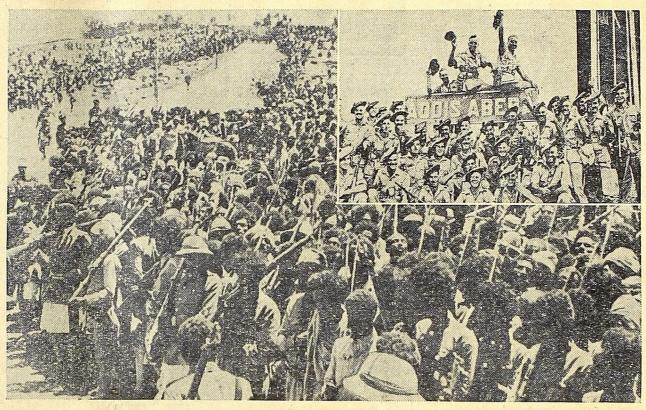

The British, still anxious for shipping aid from the United States, expressed gratification that the United States, as announced, would immediately start picking up the British shipping lines in the Orient and the Pacific, thus freeing many vessels for the carrying of munitions abroad.

Most observers, while believing that the German claims were excessive, admitted that the ship losses were tremendously heavy, and that it was one of Britain's most serious challenges of the war.

The preponderance of British belief was that it would be in Syria, and two things happened at once: The British started mobilizing toward Syria and began air attacks on Syrian points, and the French started propaganda efforts to prove that they needed German aid to repel British attack.

WAR:

The British countered by announcing, via their Turkish friends, that Germany already had landed 20,000 men in civilian dress, who would doff their tourist garb and take up arms just as soon as sea-borne transports landed them. Also the British asserted that 400 German planes were already at Syrian airdromes, ready for an attack on Iraq's British army from bases supplied, in defiance of Franco-British friendship, by agreement with the Petain government headed by Darlan.

The observers in this country were not fooled by this sort of diplomatic byplay, and were able to recognize the same maneuvers, with some variations, that had preceded the German occupation of the Balkans and the subsequent blitz attack upon

Britain's plan was not only a delaying action, but because of the peculiar location of the immensely valuable Mosul oil field, to try to get into Syria first, while the German 'tourists' were still unarmed, and to destroy the landing fields there if possible.

Home Front

Churchill's government, taking a great deal of criticism because of the Crete disaster, because many British people thought the Crete battle might have been won if better handled, now found itself with an intensely serious problem on its

There were signs that "authorized sources" in Britain were preparing the public as gently as might be for a practical abandonment of the Mediterranean as a naval control area since the loss of Crete, and one announcement flatly said that American aid must hurry if it was to get to the Red sea and Suez in time to get to the British forces in North

The British were expecting airborne attacks on Malta, Cyprus, Alexandria and Suez, but whether the Germans would attempt parachute troop operations after their huge losses in Crete was doubtful.

In fact, the Turkish slant on the attempt to land in Syria was that sea-borne invasion would be carried out. A dozen or more large ships were to carry supplies to Syria via the Dodecanese islands, and from these it would be possible, Turkey said, to land in Syria by an overnight sailing under cover of darkness.

Five hundred motorized troops had made such a trip, Turkey said, though France vigorously denied it. Harking back to the days when Weygand's Near-East army was estimated at 750,000 men, figures were now being given out in allied circles that De Gaullet had an army of

The stories about the first Nazis landing in Syria, in fact, stated that they were being sent in to "straighten out" the French forces in Syria, whose loyalty to the Vichy government was in question.

There had been many reports of disaffected troops leaving Syria before the German infiltration to flee into Palestine, there to join the Free French, but just how much of this had occurred was largely a matter of conjecture.

"All people" are included in God's plan of redemption. When the angel

Christ to the shepherds he said,

"Fear not: for behold I bring you athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely"

(Rev. 22:17). The disciples natural-came when God was ready to send them to the Gentiles, that they too might hear the message of redemp-

Lights of New York by L. L. STEVENSON

The heart of many a New York resident is elsewhere. That's why there are newsstands that sell only out-of-town newspapers. Reading of happenings in the old home town brings a break in loneliness. Many non-travellers hang around Grand Central and the Pennsylvania station. There's always the chance of sighting some familiar face. At this season, longing for past scenes is at its height, possibly because memories of early summer are so bright. Right at the moment, instead of being in Times square, I would much rather be on the banks of some northern Michigan stream trying to lure a crafty trout to my creel. Or merely wading the Boardman with the swift brown water caressing my hips and birds singing in trees overhanging and leaning toward the river as if they were using its surface as a mirror to reflect their graceful beauty.

Each Tuesday, there is a "Celebrity Luncheon" at the New York Infirmary for Women and Children. The object is to raise money for the hospital with the hope of some day having a new building. The building now used was built 76 years ago and was originally the first medical college exclusively for women. Recently, the luncheon speaker was Dr. James Rowland Angell, of Yale university, and Lanny Ross was the singer. The presence of males in the infirmary is a rare thing. Occasionally, there is a male patient in the cancer division, but otherwise most of the males who come there enter through the maternity ward.

The infirmary is not only for women but is run by women. On the attending staff, there are 105 physicians and surgeons and they are all women The 13 internes are women. So are the 68 day and night nurses. Then there are about 50 pink ladies and gray ladies. The pink ladies got their name through their uniforms. They are really practical nurses and they do a lot of hard work. The gray ladies also work hard, though their duties are mostly clerical. Neither receives any pay. The pink ladies and the gray ladies are volunteers, and at the infirmary, a number of socialites are in the ranks, scrubbing, bathing patients, keeping books, etc. They are in training for Red Cross

A busy place is the infirmary, one of three such institutions staffed and run by women in the United States. Last year, 3,539 patients were admitted. Of that number, 25 per cent received free treatment, while 38 per cent were public charges, the city paying a small part of the cost of their care.

YOUR SUNDAY DINNER (See Recipes Below)

ESPECIALLY FOR DAD

Sunday, June the fifteenth, is the lay you want to especially prepare DAD's favorite foods-for it's Faher's day-and don't forget it. The favorite of all men is a good tasty meat pie-so the suggestion for the main course is a delicious individual meat pie. Dad doesn't like to bother much with side dishes of salad, so place his salad right on the plate with the rest of the meal. He likes a cole slaw stuffed tomato. Buttered carrots and peas are the vegetables. Because he is so fond of blueberries, it's blueberry muffins to go with the meal, and blueberry ice cream cake for dessert. This week's menu is properly balanced for nutritional value. It sup-

- 2 lbs. shoulder 2 small onions
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 11/4 teaspoons salt

2½ cups milk Butter Pastry

Trim the lamb, cut in small cubes and brown in a hot frying pan. Add the chopped onion and cook until light brown, stirring constantly. Add the flour and salt and mix well. Stir in the milk gradually. Cover and cook over low heat for about 45 minutes or until the lamb is tender. Roll out pastry and place in individual pie tins or cut in six five-inch rounds and place in large cupcake pans. Fill with rims of the paspastry. Crimp the edges and cut milk or cream. Bake in a 425-deuntil the crust is evenly browned. Lift gently from the pan and serve.

LYNN SAYS:

Dad's day might be the one day when Dad would really like to try his hand in the kitchen. How about some feathery light biscuits to go with dinner? They're an easy trick if you just put out the ingredients for Dad, along with one of those big bowls and a spoon. Now sift 2 cups of flour, 2 teaspoons of baking powder, and 1/2 teaspoon of salt. Cut in 4 tablespoons of shortening, and then add about 34 of a cup of milk gradually. Stir until a soft dough is formed, not too long, though, or the biscuits will be Turn the dough on a slightly floured board, pat to a 1/2-inch thickness, and cut with a floured biscuit cutter. Pop them into a hot oven (450 degrees) on an ungreased baking sheet for 10-15 minutes. Dad will probably like the large biscuits, so better give him the large cutter. The recipe will make about 12 biscuits of that size, or 16 of the smaller ones. Can't you just see him beaming over a plate of hot, flaky biscuits he made all by

11/2 cups blueberries Vanilla ice cream

Cream the butter, add the sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Add the egg and beat well. and sift the flour, salt and baking powder and add to the first mixture alternately with the milk. Add the vanilla and pour into a buttered cake pan about 8 inches square. Sprinkle blueberries over the batter and bake in 375 degree F. oven for 30 minutes. Cut in squares and serve warm with ice cream and warm blueberry sauce.

Blueberry Sauce.

- 1/3 cup sugar 11/2 tablespoons flour
- 1/4 teaspoon salt 3/4 cup water
- 1 cup blueberries 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 2 teaspoons butter Mix the sugar, flour and salt in a saucepan, and add water and blueberries. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Stir in lemon juice and butter.

SERVING HINTS:

Place individual pies right on the serving plate. The tomato cole slaw salads may be arranged on lettuce leaves on a platter and each person can serve himself from this platter. Peas and carrots always offer a good color combination. Arrange them in a bowl tossed together or separately arranged with carrots in the center and peas surrounding the carrots.

The dessert had better be served in a rather deep dessert dish. Place a square of cake in each dish, then top with a ball of ice cream. Over all pour the rich looking blueberry sauce. Prepare this dessert just before it is to be

Humans Have Same Traits

All human beings have the same traits and capacities, a noted psychologist recently stated. Everyone has the ability to solve problems; all have some mechanical ability, some will power, some foresight, and some ability for salesmanship or self confidence, he states. The difficulty, he declares, is that the average person does not know how much of these abilities he has, or else he thinks he does not possess them.

Forecast Flying

As early as 1252, Roger Bacon forecast flying. The English scholar and scientist wrote to a friend: "It is possible that a device for flying shall be made such that a man sitting in the middle of it and turning a crank shall cause artificial wings to beat the air after the manner of a bird's flight.'

Lamp in the Valley

Carol Coburn, Alaska-born daughter of a "bush rat" who died with an unproved mining claim, returns North to teach school. Sidney Lander, mining engineer, rescues her aboard ship from annoyances of Eric (the Red) Ericson. Lander is engaged to

"About the change in Sidney," was the unexpectedly frank response. "He's a man of his word. And he's a good mining engineer. Yet he's willing to throw up his chances by hanging about this Godforsaken valley.

I resented that slur on the land of my adoption just as I resented the implications behind it.

"I have no intention," I said, "of interfering with Sidney Lander's career. I happen to have a career of my own to look after."

"I understand you're to be a teacher here," she said with a commiserative small smile.

"I am," I replied. "And my work will keep me too busy to think of wrecking other people's happiness.' "May I tell Sidney that?" she asked as she buttoned her queenly cloak of mink. "Of course," I retorted with more held out to me.

"Thanks," she said, rather quiet-

Before I knew it, in fact, I found myself taking the hand which she

CHAPTER IX

It didn't come to me as a surprise when I learned that Sidney Lander was no longer concerned with the management of the Willow Creek Mine. What perplexed me was the discovery that he didn't go to Seward when Barbara Trumbull sailed for the States.

But it wasn't mine to question why. All I cared to remember was that, for reasons entirely his own, he somewhat sedulously kept his trail from crossing mine.

So, in that interim of suspended action, I lost myself in action enough of my own. I trimmed the wick of the lamp of learning and came a little closer to my valley neighbors. And even Sam Bryson, I began to feel, was no longer an open enemy. He thawed out sufficiently around the edges to come and inspect my shack and declare the school board would have to keep me in firewood.

One Sunday, as I was shoveling the drifts from my doorstep, Sock-Eye arrived with a home-manufactured hand sleigh, which same, he dourly explained, would make it easier for me to mush supplies from the village. On that sleigh, however, reposed a war-scarred old rifle and an equally worn revolver, to say nothing of a Morris chair which he had fashioned with his own hands and upholstered with the hide of a moose brought down by his own trusty forty-five.

When he took me out to practice marksmanship on the side hill back of the shack, the rifle made my shoulder sore and the six-gun did things to my wrist. But I soon found I could hit a spruce plank at twenty paces. Sock-Eye, watching me, eventually admitted I handled a shooting iron like an old-

"I'll bet it was your pappy first showed you how t' handle them peace-makers," he chucklingly ob-

"It was," I admitted as I took a final pot shot and made the bark fly from a hemlock trunk.

"Then he gave you eddication that meant something," conceded Sock-Eye. "I've seen a heap o' changes in this cockeyed country. But she's still raw around the edges. And there's times when slappin' leather's still the short cut t' a square deal." still the short cut t' a square deal."

My teaching was an odd sort of teaching. For morning by morning, in parka and mukluks, I set out for one or another of the lonely homesteads, and there, beside a stove crackling with spruce wood and birch, I held my classes, sometimes with the Monday's washing or the Tuesday's ironing being done on the other side of the room, sometimes with the sourdough sponge being worked into loaves on the far end of the table at which my solemn-eyed little scholars were at work with paper and pencils. I was asked, as a rule, to have dinner with the family. Sometimes, when I started for home, I'd be given a jar of blueberry jam or a bowl of sauerkraut, sometimes even a slab of deer meat. But very few of them, I found, were able to be givers. Most of them were shockingly destitute.

i did considerably more than teach the three R's and correct papers and pass out assignments. Sometimes I looked after a baby or two, and took the bread out of the oven, and airily prescribed for an earache or frostbite, and tried my hand at cutting a pupil's hair, and attached muchneeded buttons and even more urgently needed patches to the garments of my not ungrateful little scholars. They no longer laughed at Sock-Eye's old revolver, which I carried in a belt holster around my against my hip.

When Sam Bryson first told me he had a girl in need of schooling I pictured a frail and frostbitten child in pigtails. But Salaria Bryson—universally spoken of as "S'lary" turned out to be something quite different. I found myself confronted by a dusky and wide-shouldered Boadicea who towered several inches above me. She wore her hair close-cropped, dressed like a man, and could swear like a trooper. She was hard-muscled and strongly-knit and could swing an ax or drive a team or carry a deer carcass over her shoulder. She proved herself fonder of hunting, in fact, than she was of housework. And taken all in all she seemed about the most perfect specimen of physical womanhood I ever clapped eyes on.

Her attitude toward me as a chalk-wrangler was openly hostile, until she discovered I was Alaska born and had once lived in a hill camp. She was willing, after that, to overlook my unhappy dower of book learning. But there remained something pathetic about S'lary. She had missed so much of life, without quite knowing it. She was as strong as an ox and as tireless as a sleigh husky and as fearless, in one way, as a wildcat. She knew her woodcraft and could keep herself alive, I suppose, in any corner of Alaska. But she was afraid of that side of life which a schoolteacher stands for. The sweat came out on her face when I gave her a list of third-grade words to spell.

S'lary, however, was seldom meek. She shared her father's resentment against the outsider in general and all invaders of the valley in particular. And certain newcomers, she intimated, would live longer if they talked less about that raft of broken-winded cheechakos the government was shipping up north in the spring.

They were to be families, rumor had it, taken off relief in the Middle West, hard-working farmers who had failed in their old homes and were looking for a new Land of

"But if they was failures there," contended Salaria, "they'll sure fail here. And all they'll do, after the first freeze-up, is amble out and give the valley a bad name."

"But they're to bring their women and children," I pointed out, "and the government is to stand behind them and build their houses and supply them with seed and stock." I could see Salaria's eyes flash.

"And it's a hell of a lot the gover'ment did for the old-timer," she exploded. "They fixed it so we couldn't even land a salmon or kill a deer without havin' a warden at our heels. They put the bush-rat out o' business by playin' into the hands o' the big minin' companies. They kept us with the Indjins and Eskimos and squealed like a stuck pig when we asked for a school allowance. And they wouldn't even build a road for us.

"Perhaps," I suggested, "they'll bring along some of the things we seem to need."

"What t' hell do we need we ain't got now?" was Salaria's prompt challenge. I meekly suggested that hospitals and schools and churches and good roads and telephones and a radio station might help a little.

Salaria's smoldering eyes viewed

"I reckon you've been powwowin' with that long-legged college dood who's dennin' up with ol' Sock-Eye for the winter. He sure burns my pappy up hot-airin' about what's goin' to happen to this valley. But waist and from which I derived a any silk-shirt swamp-drainer needn't somewhat foolish sense of protection. For I felt more self-reliant, the old-timers who came in here

CHAPTER X

Sock-Eye appeared at my door and presented me with a bearskin, fresh off the stretching frame.

I suspected this was merely an excuse for a man-to-man talk. Sid Lander, my caller casually explained, had just blown in after a week out on the trail. As I had no answer for that announcement suggestion it is turned over to the Sock-Eye sat morosely and meditatively chewing his cud. "I reckon you think quite a lot with an effort at lightness. "The immejit trouble is that outlaw offspring of ol' Sam Bryson's,' he announced. "S'lary's hit so hard poses, it may be adopted if found she ain't got no shame left. "Have you ever told him so?"

Salaria's wide shoulders drooped

"It wouldn't do no good," she listlessly proclaimed. "He ain't in terested in females that-away." "But he's a man," I reminded

"I s'pose he is," Salaria retorted with a heightening flame of indigna-tion. "But I'll bet my bottom dollar that lousy four-flushing pie-eatin' Trumbull blonde back in the States is sourin' that hombre on women for ers. life. I seen 'em when she flew in here. And he wasn't turnin' no handsprings when she hunted him up."

As I stood staring into Salaria's flashing eyes I began to realize that she was of the same statuesque and even dried for indefinite presermold as Lander. She had the same love for open trails. She had the replace blood which might have same ruggedness of body and the same wide jaw and the same brown tone to her skin. And I fell to wondering, with a ghostly twinge of en vy, if there mightn't eventually be human donors, and large quantities some kinship of spirit between them

"I'll respect your secret, Salaria,"
I said with what dignity I coulc command.

"Secret? It ain't no secret," was the prompt and primitive reply. 'Even ol' Sock-Eye knows Sid Lan der could do what he likes with me. And the fire-eatin' ol' killer piped up and said he'd put a bullet through any short-horn female who made a pass at that shack-pard o' his."

And Forms Through I

"What's Sock-Eye saving him for?" I found myself questioning. "For that sap-headed Trumbull blonde that's got him hog-tied, I s'pose," was the sadly intoned answer. "He's willin' t' play ball with her even after her yellow-bellied old man came and bought up the Happy Day outfit jus' t' give Sid his walkin' ticket and grind his nose ir the dirt."

I sat down to think this over.

Brown and Dun each boasted a talking parrot and rivalry ran high between them. At last a 16,000 Have Been Appraised match was arranged at $5 a side.

When the great day came the Brown parrot spoke not a word, so the other bird was an easy winner. Back home, Brown greatly chagrined, said:

"You're a fine pal, letting me down like that!"

"Shurrup!" replied the parrot, closing one eye knowingly. "Take him on for a return match for twenty bucks and I'll talk his blooming head off!"
