It is a supplementary power plant which will enable the bombers to venture high and far, as it takes care of the energy overhead of starting motors, feathering propellers, and powering heat, light, radio and instrument board.

Mr. Lawrance, the first man to adapt air-cooled engines to air navigation, also contributed much to wing design. Soviet Claims Strong Counter-Attacks Stall German Drive in Three Sectors; Japan Feels Weight of 'Crack Down'; British Get Invasion Threat Warning

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union

SOMEWHERE-IN-ENGLAND-A four-motored Consolidated "Liberator," just received from the United States, is shown in flight over England. It was flown across the Atlantic by a crew composed of Americans, Canadians and English, and made the crossing in just over eight hours, according to the British. These ships have a wonderful record of service with

NAZIS:

Real Trouble

Claims by the Russians that they had not only stopped the Nazis along the entire 1,000-mile front, but that they had taken the offensive at points, asserting penetrations as deep as 100 miles had been made, featured the Russo-German war

There were many observers who believed the Russian claims to be fairly accurate, pointing at many admissions from Berlin tending to show that the high command was dissatisfied with the progress being

This dissatisfaction was expressed in complaints against the difficulty of the terrain, the bad character of the Russian roads, and the strong resistance of the Russian troops.

Using these state ants as at least an explanation and a background for belief in the general failure of the German offensive, observers sought to find the answer in Russian tactics and Russian prepared-

They pointed out that in the last war, Russia had an army of about 800,000, poorly mobilized, well-led but not enthusiastic for fighting. This force was hurled into the eastern battlefield without good preparation, ran into highly trained opposition and was defeated bit by bit. This time, apparently, the general Russian plan was to place a good-sized portion of the huge army on the long front, fight a series of rearguard and testing actions to diswould be directed, and to keep the most excellent forces in reserve.

The German drive apparently was hitting in three general directions, Leningrad, Kiev and Moscow, with the heaviest attack in the center, with Smolensk the focal point.

It was around Smolensk that the severest fighting occurred, and it was there that the German effort bogged down most seriously. For better than two weeks there was no real report of advance, and finally came the Moscow claims that the Germans had been hurled out of their trenches and were gradually giving way.

BRITISH:

View of Scene

Churchill, expressing the British viewpoint of the Russian scene of action, saw in it a German failure to execute a complete blitzkrieg, but warned that Britain was dealing "with a dangerous maniac" and claimed that the Nazis, failing against Russia, were thinking of turning to a British invasion at-

Demanding that the defenders of the islands get themselves "into concert pitch" by September 1, the British leader seemed to attach especial import to that date, a war anniversary for Hitler.

Churchill did not boldly announce that the British had definite information of a planned invasion attempt, but the British viewpoint evidently was that the Russian defeat or victory would not necessarily settle the war.

The final scene of the war, it was plain the British thought, would be fought in the west, either on British soil in repelling the invader, or in a British reinvasion of the conti-

There were many rumors of action in other fields. In North Africa the British heard that the Germans were removing troops, and leaving the campaign to the Italians, who might be expected, once the removal was complete, to fall back as disastrously as they did before.

The situation was extremely tense in Turkey, following the British occupation of Syria, because it was reported that the Germans were massing huge forces in Bulgaria, presumably to move across Turkey into the Caucasus region, and attempt to encircle the Ukraine.

GASOLINE:

Curtailment

Gasoline consumption under mandatory control, with a view to reducing the volume of eastern states' demand to meet the oil transportation shortage moved a step nearer when Secretary of the Interior Ickes recommended that more than 100,000 service stations in eastern states close from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. every night in the week.

This was the first direct move on the part of the government to limit sales of gasoline. Rationing may follow, it was indicated by some

Ickes said he was continuing his appeal for a voluntary one-third cut in consumption, hoping that the station - closing recommendation, plus the voluntary curtailment will be enough to put us across.'

JAPAN: A Winner?

The Japanese situation was highly confusing to the lay mind, for the invasion of French Indo-China, even with the consent of Vichy, seemed plainly an overt act, and one which should merit the strongest possible punishment from Britain and the United States.

Indeed, this was the way it all started out, with concerted action by the U. S., Britain, Australia, Canada and the Dutch East Indies. However, as the days went on and as the Japanese continued to land military forces in Indo-China, there began to be dispatches indicating that the cover where the main Nazi punch adverse action would be much milder than had been anticipated.

> In fact, British sources said that oil shipments to Japan might continue; the Dutch said they had not "yet" abrogated their agreement with Japan for 1,800,000 tons of oil a year; Washington hinted that the "appeasement oil" might continue to go to Japan as long as she did nothing more than invade Indo-

Yet there were some things on the other side of the picture, because other British high authorities said 'wait and see what happens' on Japanese reprisals; the Dutch announced that if the break came, Japan need never expect to get East Indian oil, for the Dutch had made preparations to destroy all wells and refineries instantly.

The question was whether Japan was the winner or the loser by her move into Indo China, and there was evidence on both sides.

NIPPON:

Behavior

If future action against Japan was to depend on the behavior of the Nipponese, there was little immediate evidence that this behavior would be mild.

Almost immediately there was a serious "incident" when Japanese bombers attacking Chungking paused directly over the U. S. gunboat Tutuila, part of the Yangtze river patrol, and dropped some bombs, which damaged the vessel, though there were no casualties.

The ship was anchored in the socalled safety zone across the river from the Chinese capital. One bomb, according to a report from Shanghai, fell only eight yards from the gunboat, caving in a part of the ship's stern and blowing some equipment off the dock.

Also in the Shanghai dispatches came word that the Japanese army had authorized the seizure of American property in North China. Actual seizure of some properties had been made, the consulate reported to Washington.

Some of them were the oil properties at Swatow, Chefoo and Tsingtao and a tobacco plant at the lat-ter town. There were reports of other seizures at Tsinan and Mukden. Some occurred in Manchukuo, Japanese puppet state, but some were in occupied territories of North China proper.

'So Sorry'

Lieut. Com. W. A. Bowers U. S. N., is in command of the Gunboat U. S. S. Tutuila, which was damaged by Japanese bombs during an air raid on Chungking, China. The Tutuila was lying near the U.S. embassy at Chungking when the bombing occurred. No injuries to U.S. seamen were reported. Before an official protest could be made, Japanese official apologized for the incident.

U. S.: Turning Tide

The frank statement by Secretary of the Navy Knox that an American destroyer in the Atlantic had dropped three depth bombs when it believed it was about to be attacked by a submarine focused attention on the "battle of the Atlantic."

It brought by Senator George the statement that he believed the U.S. naval patrol of the sea lanes as far east as Iceland appeared to have been of such assistance to Britain that she was slowly gaining the upper hand in the effort to keep the ocean free for the passage of sup-

At about the same time however, Germany announced the sinking of 19 vessels in one convoy, totaling 116,000 tons. Yet the Nazis admitted that the sinking was accomplished only with the greatest difficulty.

The German dispatches, in describing the armed escort of the patrol, admitted that there were many armed ships, in fact, claimed the sinking of one and the damag-ing of another.

Partly due to American interven-tion, Churchill told the commons, the "battle in the Atlantic is moving progressively in our favor," and this sentiment was quoted and echoed by Senator George.

From the turn of events, however, the senator drew the conclusion that there would be no attempt at invasion of Britain this year. He cited also the difficulty of the German invasion of Russia as one of his

In this premise of the Georgia senator, however, Churchill hardly seemed to agree.

HOPKINS:

To Moscow

The flight of Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's lend-lease administrator and personal representative to warring capitals, caused intense interest here, because it was supposedly portending the sending of lend-lease aid to Russia.

Hopkins was scheduled to confer with Stalin in person, also to talk with leaders such as Molotov, Litvinov and others.

His departure was a closely guarded secret until he had arrived safely, and indeed it was a dangerous flight, as the Nazi warplanes were occasionally flying over Mos-

JOINT:

Tax Returns?

One of the most dubious pieces of tax legislation found its central fight to circle about whether or not husbands and wives should be forced to file joint returns.

Few prognosticators in Washington could be found willing to bet that the battle would end one way or the other.

The tax bill came out of committee with the joint returns mandatory, but only after the stiffest sort of a fight, and with only the slightest sort of margin in the committee

One of the first floor battles was to get the administration leaders to agree to open the matter for floor discussion during debate, and in this skirmish the foes of mandatory joint returns won out.

It was finally agreed that an amendment will be offered to remove the mandatory joint return clause, and that this may be debated on the floor.

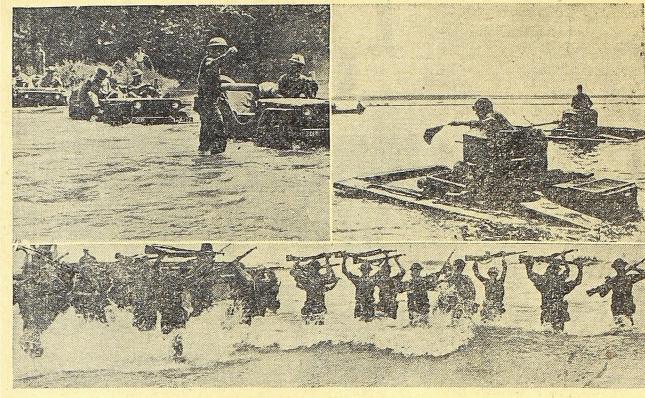

SABOTAGE:

Canadian Strike

A three-day "sort of sit-down' strike in Canada's biggest war industry, the aluminum works, brought from the government the statement that sabotage was sus pected, and that thorough investigations would be instituted.

The government formally called the strike a "suspected case of enemy sabotage" and promised that arrests would be made.

New Blood for U. S. Navy

Thousands of Americans who have never set foot on a warship have shed their blood for the U. S. navy. A shipment of that blood, dried and processed, is shown being taken aboard a man-o-war at Philadelphia navy yard. The blood was collected by the American Red Cross. It keeps indefinitely under proper conditions.

Lights of New York by L. L. STEVENSON

Another New York elevated line is rapidly passing into history. This time the electric torch is being used over in Brooklyn on the Fulton street elevated that has been in use for the last 53 years. It took 10 years of court fights with property owners and others before construc-tion could be started. It took 20 years of agitation before demolition could be begun. The actual building time was three years. The line was opened April 24, 1888. The original equipment were two "palace coaches" pulled by a woodburning locomotive. Fifty thousand passengers were carried the first day and so great was the strain that another locomotive had to be put into service as an assistant. At present, a single subway line will carry more than a million passengers a day without strain on equipment though most of the passengers may feel more or less like sar-

The Fulton street line starts in the downtown section of Brooklyn. At its beginning, Brooklyn's largest department stores as well as many others are within its shadows. At the other end are cheap tenements. With the passing of the elevated and the coming of sunshine, as well as more sleep for the tenement unfortunates, it is expected that Fulton street will change for the better as have Sixth avenue and to a lesser degree, Ninth avenue, in Manhattan. At any rate such belief was expressed at the ceremonies connected with the start of the demolition at which Mayor LaGuardia, as usual, put on goggles and heavy leather gloves and used an electric torch more or less effectively. Incidentally, the scrap steel from the old structure will increase the supply of material essential for national defense since most of it will be turned into munitions.

Elevated lines, because of greater speed, revolutionized urban transportation. Just about eight years after the Fulton street line was opened, something happened in Manhattan that was to revolutionize entertainment. The event was the first commercial showing of motion pictures. The premiere was nothing like those of today. Instead of crowds, Klieg lights, flocks of press agents and camera men aiming lenses at celebs, a mere handful of people gathered in the old Koster and Biel's Music hall on West Thirty-fourth street to witness a demonstration of that wonderful Thomas A. Edison invention known as the Vitagraph. It seems hardly possible but maybe one of those present 45 years ago visioned motion pictures in color and with music and dialogue and as many as 4,000 persons in a theater at one time. But that isn't a matter of record.

IT'S CANNING TIME

With food taking on a greater than ever importance under the national defense program, you'll want to make a thoughtful selection for stocking a shelf of extra good jams and jellies for later use. When winter comes you'll glow with deep satisfaction over your canning efforts of the summer.

Since a record breaking peach crop, the third greatest in the history of the country, is expected, plan to put up many, many jars of this golden ripe fruit, not only as jam, jelly, or marmalade, but as conserve combined with other fruits.

*Ripe Peach Jelly. (Makes 6 medium sized glasses)

2½ cups juice 31/2 cups sugar

1 box powdered fruit pectin To prepare juice, pit and crush thoroughly (do not peel) about 2½ pounds fully ripe peaches. Add 1 cup water, bring to a boil and simmer, covered 10 minutes. Add a few peach pits, crushed, to mixture while cooking. Place fruit in a jelly cloth bag and squeeze out juice. Place the juice over a hot fire, and add fruit pectin. Mix well and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. Add the sugar, stirring constantly. Bring to a fully rolling boil, boil hard 1 minute, remove from fire, skim, pour quickly into glasses. Paraffin at

LYNN SAYS:

To test when jelly is done, dip in a clean spoon and hold it high When the last drop sheets or flakes off the side of the spoon, remove from the fire. Another way which I like too, is to see if two drops drip off the side of the spoon simultaneously. If they do, the jelly will jell.

Fresh fruit which is ripe should be used for jams, jellies, conserves, marmalades, and preserves. Remove any spots or bruises as they may cause your whole batch to spoil. Cook them as short a time as possible so they will retain their lovely colors and look as though they were brought from garden to glass

Pick a rainy day or a day before you start canning to look over your equipment and get it clean for use. Dirty jars should be boiled in soda water and washed in soap suds. Boil old lids 20 minutes in soda water using 1 teaspoon soda to 1 quart in a pressure cooker or in the oven to prevent sticking. Since some fruits do not convert into jelly easily, a commercial pec-tin is usually employed to make the fruit jell properly. Often fruits which jell easily, that is, those which have sufficient pectin in themselves are used in combination with fruits which do not. Crabapples, unripe grapes, currants, gooseberries, cranberries, quinces, huckleberries, and blackberries jell well. If enough of

Rapid Heart Often Due to Nervousness

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

WHEN an individual is sitting quietly and his heart suddenly begins to beat very rapidly-twice as fast as normal-he is naturally going to TODAY'S become worried. HEALTH Just as suddenly COLUMN as the rapidity started up, it stops, and the heart rate is back to 72 or 76 again. When the heart beats rapidly, it is called tachycardia—"tachy," meaning fast, and "cardia" the heart. When the rapid beat occurs suddenly, lasts for minutes or hours, and stops suddenly, it is called paroxysmal tachycardia.

While the cause of paroxysmal tachycardia is said to be unknown the cause in some cases is believed to be nervousness, disappointment, worry or some other depressing emotion. I have one case in mind of a teacher who had worked and planned for two years to take a certain trip and at the last moment circumstances pre-fying everyday dresses that's

Dr. Barton vented his trip. From that time he began to have attacks of paroxysmal tachycardia which were controlled by the drug quinidine sulphate, now in general use for these attacks. Others state that these attacks occur when they have to do some special work or duty which is unfamiliar or distasteful.

Attacks Not Dangerous.

The treatment of this common type of rapid heartbeat is to assure the patient that there is no danger life. This assurance is often all that is necessary to prevent further attacks. These attacks can sometimes be stopped by pressing on the nerves of the neck running along the "cord" which runs from back of ear to breast bone.

However, in some forms of tachy cardia where there is also some disturbance of regularity (rhythm), of the heartbeat, rest in bed is absolutely necessary, in addition to the quinidine sulphate.

The thought then is when the heart suddenly begins to beat rapidly, is not to become frightened, but to send for your physician. If it is the common type, he can prescribe the quinidine sulphate.

Neurology And Psychiatry

In MY student days there was not much instruction given on "behavior" problems, or psychiatry.

Today most neurologists combine with neurology (knowledge of nerves) the study of behavior (psychiatry) and are thus qualified to tell us when the symptoms are due to a disturbance of the nerves themselves or whether the emotions, circumstances, surroundings are affecting the individual's judgment and so affecting his behavior.

When there is no real disturbance or change in the structure of the nerves or nerve tissue, yet the individual behaves abnormally, the condition is called a neurosis.

A simple classification of the neuroses is outlined by Dr. A. L. Mac-Kinnon, Homewood sanitarium, Guelph, in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. This classification makes it easy for us to understand such common conditions as neurasthenia, hypochondriasis, hys-teria, psychasthenia and anxiety

1. Neurasthenia: A condition of mental and physical tiredness. 2. Hypochondriasis: A hypochon-driac is a patient who has the fixed idea that he is suffering from organic disease, when no disease is

3. Hysteria: Where patient thinks he cannot walk, cannot remember, throws himself about but never hurts himself because he is consciousnot unconscious as in epilepsy.

4. Psychasthenia: "Psych" means mind or nervous system, "a" means not, and "thenia" means strength; thus mind or nerves are not strong and there are thus fears, obsessions, a feeling that he "must" do certain things.

5. Anxiety states: A continuous state of anxiety with rapid or hard beating of the heart, breathlessness, nausea and vomiting, and diar rhoea.

Lockless Suez Canal

The Suez canal is a sea-level 'ditch," requiring no locks. The narrow ditch in the sand runs for 104.5 miles through desert and marshy land from Port Said on the Mediterranean to Port Taufiq on the Gulf of Suez. Its channel depth is now 45 feet, and its narrowest width is 70 yards. Although it has been concreted at some places to halt erosion, the banks are chiefly sand or gravel.

The northern half of the canal cuts straight through the desert; the southern half leads through a chain of small lakes which act as "expansion chambers" to help take up the flow of the four-foot tide from the Red sea.

Me Lamp in the Valle

Sidney Lander, mining engineer, is engaged to Barbara Trumbull, but apparently loves Carol Coburn, Matanuska school teacher. Salaria Bryson, a big out-door girl, also loves him. Carol's father died with an unproven claim

Salaria didn't come back that | you've indulged your penchant for night. By the following noon, her father became alarmed. He even appeared at the Administration Building and asked for help. And it seemed the most natural thing in the world that Lander and his leannosed Sandy should be among those who hurriedly made ready and trailed out into the surrounding hills in search of her. Why Lander headed out past the Happy Day I don't know. But I do happen to know that when Barbara Trumbull intercepted him on the outer trail and offered to join him in what she termed his gesture of gallantry, he promptly and firmly declined her companionship. This, apparently, piqued the lady from the superintendent's lodge, for she later visited Katie's tent office and made inquiries as to the character and appearance of the missing Artemis. And it obviously didn't add to her questioner's happiness when Katie informed her visitor that Salaria Bryson was the most superb specimen of vital and lawless woman-

It was unfortunate, I suppose, that Lander should have been the searcher who eventually found Salaria. He succeeded in locating her, late the second evening, half way up the slope of Big Indian Mountain, in an impromptu comp behind a wind-break. For she was woodsman enough to take care of herself in the open. When Sandy nosed her out, in fact, she was quietly broiling bear steaks over a campfire. But she had been unable, apparently, to resume her homeward journey because of a hurt ankle, incurred when she had a hand-to-hand encounter with a wounded black bear. There may have been some question as to the extent of her injury, but the bear carcass was there to substantiate her story of the encounter.

hood she'd ever clapped eyes on.

They had to rest and make camp on the way, which took up a night and a day. The ankle, I gathered, grew worse, and for some of the distance Salaria surrendered her independence of spirit to the extent of mitting her rescuer to carry her.

her times, by clinging to his, she was able to hobble lander's side. And I could he how the forlornly primitive heart of that dusky Artemis went pit-a-pat against her ribs when she felt those sustaining arms about her. But the final portion of that safari wasn't as harmonious as it might have been. For it happened to be John Trumbull's car that picked Salaria up, just beyond the Happy Day, and carried her to her father's door. Lander, for quite discernible reasons, declined to ride in that car with his charge. And Trumbull's openly expressed view of the adventure in no way added to Sam Bryson's peace of mind.

"The first thing," I suggested, "is to have Doctor Ruddock look at that ankle of yours."

Salaria, however, promptly declined the services of Doctor Ruddock. She agreed, in the end, to let me bring Katie and her first-aid kit to the shack. And it wasn't long before that expeditious nurse had the ailing member looked over and strapped up.

"Will she be all right?" I asked as Katie's Black Maria went lurching back to Palmer.

Katie's Celtic gray eyes met mine. "It's not her ankle that needed strapping up," announced the Red Cross nurse. "It's that many-hunary heart of hers that needs atten-

1 stative, "Oh!" a wall and Eg asn't it a bad sprain?" I inquired There's something there all right," conceded Katie. "But I've seen girls dance half a night on a foot worse than that." This gave me something to think about. "You mean," I suggested, "that alaria wasn't as helpless as she pretended?"

Katie's laugh was slightly enigmatic. "Such things," she observed,

"have been known to happen. She probably saw him coming and thumped herself with a stone."

When I stopped at the post office for my mail I saw Lander's truck there. A moment later Lander himself came out, with an open letter in his hand. He looked harried and haggard.

Just then the Trumbull car swerved it and shuddered to a stop close beside the truck of battleshipgray. Alone in the driver's seat was Barbara Trumbull, with her face pale and her eyes flashing fire.

"I've just seen the heroine of your mountain adventure," she said. "She seems less ashamed of the situation than you do. She was, in fact, barbarously frank about it all." Lander stiffened.

"Then there's nothing much for me to say."

That brought a vibrata of passion and hurt pride into Barbara Trumbull's voice when she spoke.

"I suppose not," she cried.

nocturnal romance. I made no response to that oblique thrust. But Lander's movement as he stepped between us seemed almost a sheltering one. "That's about enough," he said in a voice as hard as nails. "I'll say it is," cried the lady to whom life must have brought very few frustrations. And it was all so futile and foolish that I felt vaguely sorry for her. For with a shaking right hand she drew a ring from her finger and with a little gasp of anger flung it at Lander.

She flung it badly. It went past the tight-lipped man and landed in the road dust a dozen paces away. But Lander disregarded it. He merely stood there, rather gray of face, studying the woman in the driver's seat who so abruptly threw in her clutch and roared off down the longshadowed roadway.

I picked up the ring and held it out to Lander.

"You'd better keep this," I said. "It'll all straighten out in time."

But Lander didn't seem to hear me. His eyes remained on the vanishing car, even when I forced the ring into his hand. Then he looked at me, like a sleepwalker suddenly awakened.

"Do you believe that rot?" he challenged.

I tried, quite without success, to laugh the tragedy out of his face. "I went through much the same thing, like foolish agitation was really a without any apparent peril," I reminded him. "I've always rather banked on your honesty."

"Then you trust me?" he asked in a disturbingly lowered voice.

I tried to keep my heartbeats steady under the questioning gaze that rested on my face. The barriers, I felt, were finally down between us. It was only my woman's pride, I suppose, that made me fight back the impulse to comfort him in his unhappiness.

"Of course," I answered. "Then you'll have to keep on at it," he grimly asserted.

"Why?" I asked with a creeping sense of disappointment.

That sense of disappointment sharpened as he reached for the letter which he had thrust into his coat

"Because I've just had word Trumbull's putting through his cancellation of your Chakitana claim. He's to head through to the mines there as soon as a plane can pick him up.'

It failed to stir me as it should have. There was a cloud on my heart, I remembered, more important than mine claims. But men, I also remembered, too often preferred facing a hard fight to uttering soft words.

"It's not easy to understand," he patiently explained. "But your father's patent was granted and recorded. There's no dispute about that. But the Territory has a large area of unsurveyed land, land remote from any center of popula-tion. The Chakitana falls under that heading. So the field notes of a survey for any claim there, where the survey is not tied to a corner of the public survey, has to be tied to a location or what they call a mineral monument, something showing definite adjacence to some recognizable landmark, such as a creek or a river or a mountain. Is that "I think so," I dubiously responded.

"In the case of the Chakitana claim," he proceeded, "the anchoring landmark is the Big Squaw Creek. But the Trumbull plat shows the Big Squaw to be where he wants it, and not where your father first found it. And Trumbull's intention is to fly in with the Registrar of pecially as it isn't the first time | Mines and a couple of official sur-asked. "I want you there as owner," was his answer, "when that official survey is made." "But how?" I asked, trying to speak calmly. "We'll go by plane," he explained, 'as soon as I can get one in here to pick us up.'

I found something consoling in my thoughts during the tumult of packing and making ready and saying an abrupt good-by to my schoolchildren, who faced their midsummer vacation a few days earlier than they had expected.

I hurried on to explain to Katie. But Katie, when I found her in Doctor Ruddock's new surgery surrounded by crates and boxes, didn't seem greatly interested.

"Why the sudden grandeur?" asked that tight-lipped lady as watched her hanging curtains in the wide-windowed living room that still smelled of fresh paint.

"Then you haven't heard?" queried Katie. "It's that boss of mine, getting the nest ready for the new

"You don't," I demanded, "mean the nurse from Seattle?"

"Of course I mean the nurse from Seattle," was Katie's even-toned reply. "She's sent up her silver and linen. And the lady herself lands at Seward on Friday." Katie adjusted a curtain pin and stepped down from her chair. "They're to be married on Saturday at Anchorage. And Ruddy wants everything shipshape when they swing back to Palmer on Sunday."

Katie endured my stare without flinching.

I studied the line of Katie's brawny shoulders, dark against the window light.

She smiled a little, at my gasp of protest, but deep in those Celtic eyes of hers I could see the light of tragedy.

CHAPTER XX

It's odd how destiny can hinge on small and unforeseen things. In this case it was nothing bigger than a safety pin that proved the god from the machine.

For our flight in to the Chakitana wasn't as prompt as Lander had expected.

"I can't get a plane in today," he explained. "Eery ship within flying distance seems either chartered or spoken for. And in that I detect Trumbull's fine Italian hand."

So, having no choice in the matter, I waited. The Project was like a prospector's pan: what seemed the weaklings and the rubbish slowly washed out over the rim of the North.

Week by week, the real workers were taking root and making their half-finished homes a little more livable, or building fences and sheds, or clearing and draining and seeding more land-and discovering it to be incredibly rich land, land that could grow thirty-pound cabbageheads and Climax oats that would run sixty-five bushels to the acre. The twenty-hour summer day breathed warmth into that black bowl, touching the dead silt into life, steaming, abundant, explosive life. It brought growth that one could almost see with the naked eye, hay that could hide a team of horses, a tropical prodigality of growth, rank and arrogant, gargantuan vegeta-bles, grain as high as a man's head, too rank with straw, peas and vetch that smothered themselves in their own luxuriance sweet-peas that could over-run a cabin and smother it in bloom before frost cut the mad growth short, berry-brambles that became a forest, muskeg-surfaces that turned into a choked tangle of grass and alder and cranberry, tilled gardens where potatoes grew as big as footballs, where carrots were like war-clubs, where one strawberry could fill a teacup. The tillers of that soil may have wondered where their ultimate markets were to be. But they tapped its richness and were stunned by its rewards. And much of the glory, I also knew, went to the women who worked at their side.

They had waited so long to get into homes of their own that there was some excuse for the noisy and foolish way they kept celebrating every escape from tent life. Each one of those rough-and-ready housewarmings had meant an all-night party, with mouth organs and accordions and much to eat and drink. Yet now and then a more gracious note had struck through the rougher noise. When the Saari family, sedate Finns from Wisconsin, commemorated their accession to their five-room bungalow of spruce logs, they first sprinkled salt on the doorstep and then conducted a service of prayer in the living room where the carpenters' shayings still littered the

JAMES TEACHES CONSISTENT CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT-James 1:17-22; 2:14-174 GOLDEN TEXT-Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world.—James 1:27.

Spiritually minded but very practical was James, an outstanding leader in the Church (Gal. 2:9; Acts 15) and the brother of our Lord. His epistle speaks little about Christ, but reflects more of His teachings than any of the other epistles. It parallels the sermon on the mount and in that way, as well as other ways, greatly resembles the teachings of Jesus. It is a straightforward discussion of practical Christian living.

There is so much inconsistency among Christians in their daily walk that nothing could be more needed than a careful study of the exhortations of James.

I. Be Doers of the Word-Not Hearers Only (1:17-22). Knowing God's will is important, but it amounts to little except to bring condemnation upon us, unless we do it. It is good to hear with swift apprehension, but there is no point in talking about what we have heard unless we practice it. God is the "giver of every good and perfect gift" (that's literally and wonderfully true). He has not withheld one blessing, even to the giving of His Son, who was sent down from heaven to redeem us. His very goodness should profile us to lay aside everything which dishonors His name. Wrath (v. 20), all uncleanness of speech or thought, pride (v. 21)—all these must go, and will go, as we permit the Word to take root (be "engrafted") in our hearts and lives. Note that it is not enough to read the Word, or even to memorize it. It must take root and grow in our life.

II. Believe-But Do Not Forget to Work (2:14-17).

Saved by faith? Yes, we are, and in no other way; but the man who says he has faith in Christ will inevitably show the results of that faith in his life.

James is not in any way contradicting the teaching of Paul's epistles regarding justification by faith, but is clearly stating what must be true, 'that a faith which does not result in works, i. e., in a manifestation of a true Christian life, externally and visibly, is not the kind of faith commanded by God, and constantly revealed in the New Testament as the only instrument for the appropriation of the redemption that is in Jesus Christ our Lord. There is no such thing as real, genuine, vital, living, Christian faith, except it has its fruits in the works of faith" (Wilbur M. Smith).

How that faith will show itself in the practical dealings of daily life is graphically presented in verses 15 and 16. Pious talk has always been very cheap, and it certainly accomplishes nothing. Real Christianity works.

III. Trust-But Do Not Boast of Tomorrow (4:13-17).

There is a strange religious attitude which talks about faith as though it were something of which to boast, which encourages people not only to believe, but actually to presume. There is a radical difference between faith and presump-

All Christians are subject to the temptation of talking about being "strangers and pilgrims" (Heb. 11: 13) in this earth, and then planning their lives and their business as though everything will continue as it is through all eternity. It is right to plan, but every day we should plan subject to God's will, always realizing that this may be the day when we shall be called into His presence to give an account of the deeds done in the flesh.

Every hour of life should find us ready to meet the Lord, and with all in readiness, so that our going may leave behind a clear testimony of faith in God, and of consistent Christian living.

IV. Be Honest-Without the Need of an Oath (5:12).

A Christian should never need to give an oath in the ordinary affairs of daily life. His life should be so transparently honest and consistently aboveboard that his word ("yea, yea, or nay, nay") will be "as good as his bond.'

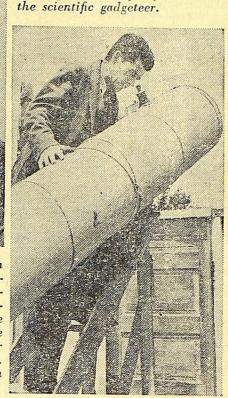

The Jews were accustomed to use formulas for oaths such as those mentioned in Matthew 5:33-37. They would have felt much at home in our day when there is so much dishonesty that people are constantly calling on God to witness to their truthfulness. Those who have least to do with Him and the worst records for dishonesty are most prone to thus seek to bolster their word.

What a striking contrast is the simple "yes" or "no" of the true Christian. Let us make our word always good, because it is the expression of the integrity of our lives.

Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide seclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

EAST TAWAS FAMILY HARVEST "WEIGHS OUT" IN

BETTER LIVING When you catch the first handful of grain from your own ALL-CROP HARVESTER... something tells you Better Living has come to stay. You know by the feel that the plump, stalk-ripened kernels will weigh out heavier. This year—you've worked a miracle with your All-Crop Harvester! Your grain is safe in the bin. Nearly enough Harvester! Your grain is safe in the bin. Nearly enough more bushels to pay the cost of harvesting! Air-Blast Separation and the Close-Cutting Header did it. The Wide Bartion and Over-Size Threshing Rear kept you ahead of Cylinder and Over-Size Threshing Rear kept you ahead of Cylinder and Over-Size Threshing Rear kept you ahead of cylinder and of the standard simple in-the-field adjustments for legumes, grasses, made simple in-the-field adjustments for legumes, grasses, sorghums as well as grains. And your cost was 10 cents less on every bushel. Bushels that "weighed out" in terms of Better Living!

MODEL 40 (BELOW)

Like Model 60, needs NO AUXILIARY MOTOR. Gives you a family harvest for 100 different grains, beans, soil-building le-gumes, grasses, sorghums. Pickup attachment for windrowed crops.
