HOSIERY: And the Women

The governmental placing of silk in the vital raw material category closed down the silk hosiery industry and sent American women in a wild blitzkrieg on the silk stocking counters of the nation. There were no tears shed over the situation, the women apparently regarding the whole thing as a sort of a gay lark, and dashing into the stores to stock up-just to be doing something more than for any other reason.

For surveys of women's opinion showed that the ladies were perfectly willing to go bare-legged, if necessary; to spray "makeup" stockings on their legs, or to wear cotton, if they could be made good-looking. It was obvious that the new nylon industry would not be able to supply the demand, at least at prices women were willing to pay

But as to the cotton situation, the government had finished researches at Beltsville, Md., from which had come 150 types of cotton stockings, many of them pretty stylish-looking Philadelphia, with a $25,000,000-a-year hosiery industry, and other nearby cities and states with smaller organizations, began changing over to cotton right away. One mill al-ready had out a line of samples of cotton lisle stockings, several of them of the "mesh" type.

These were displayed by pretty models, and the salesmen started out to see what the reception of the American Woman would be.

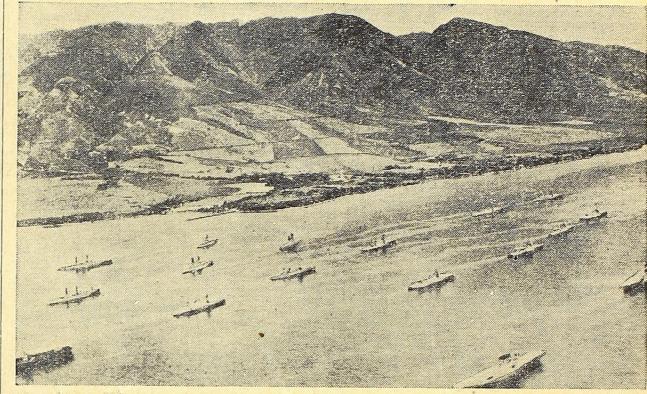

On that, they said, depended what the factory would do-close up or continue to put out the cotton stockings.

thing like that, in protest.

She did go home and probably is happy today to learn that the women, the "Atta-Girls," as they call these ladybirds, can now fly the above planes. There are about 45 of the women pilots, with hundreds of others crowding in for ground service and training, flying fighting planes from the factory to front line defense air stations and performing innumerable other services.

Capt. Pauline Gowan is one of the foremost of this air transport auxiliary, as it is called. She is a comely young woman in her early thirties, one of the designers and most successful modelers of the snappy, powderblue uniform of their unique flying corps. The daughter of Sir Robert Gowan, member of parliament since 1929, she broke conventional ties by establishing a five-shilling air-taxi service and making it hum. She had more than 20,000 flying hours to her credit when the war started, and had carried more than 30,-000 passengers in her air taxis, without a mishap.

She is not a member of the R.A.F. and the "captain" was handed her by the old Imperial Airways system. Merry and friendly, with a wide acquaintance among influential persons, she began several years ago campaigning and agitating for a women's air arm in the national defense. This fervor found expression in her book, "Women With Wings," published in 1936. The new ruling about the Spitfires and Hurricanes means that the "Atta-Girls" can now fly anything that gets off the ground in England.

HANNEN SWAFFER, the deadpan, road company hamlet of British intellectual controversy, says this "V for Victory" thing is just "baby business." He says the V stands for "vacillation. What we really want is a minister of production and a plan run by a mind."

Warned Again

London warned Japan that if she moved against Thailand in any way, she would find that Britain would consider such a move as a definite threat to Singapore, and would act accordingly.

This was seen as a sort of confirmation that the British are sending expeditionary forces of occupation into Siamese territory, and that any Japanese effort to cut the Burma road will bring the world war to the Far East.

The statement came from Foreign Secretary Eden, making it in the house of commons. It had been rumored that 100,000 British troops would be sent to Thailand from eastern bases, and that a considerable

"That friendship and that collaboration with China will continue and pray that it will grow. "Men and materials are pouring

RUSSIANS: Their Version

Completely ignoring the claims of the Germans, the Reds, admitting Nazi pressure on the south, say that they are counter-attacking and were using the same tactics "which threw the Germans back in the central front."

In fact, the Russian reports considered the front from Smolensk to Bel-Tserkov, a distance of 350 miles, as a single unit, rather than a definite pincer movement, and said that there was mobile fighting going on all along this front. In fact, the Reds asserted they were holding the Germans in two other sectors, that of Kholm, 180 miles south of Leningrad, and on the Estonian front-where the Germans had claimed important advances.

The Russians also reported taking many prisoners, and revealed that many of them are either 17 years old or the older type reservists, showing that the Nazis are drawing heavily on their reserves.

BRAZIL: In Azores

The United States is secretly urging that Brazil take over the Azores islands, Portuguese possession, in the interests of Western hemisphere defense, Berlin had charged.

Although this was promptly denied in Washington, considerable prominence was given the dispatch, in that the question of the Azores was prominent in Washington's long range plan for defense of the Western hemisphere.

Lloyd's was reputedly offering odds on the end of the war, even the likelihood of Washington, D. C., being bombed-circumstances which told their own story. The war is more likely now to be over December 1 than it was at this time last year. Lloyd's was offering 7 to 1 last year, and now has reduced the odds of the war ending in 1941 to 3 to 1.

As to the bombing of Washington, the odds were 1,000 to 1. However, as it was pointed out, the odds weren't really that much, for it was simply the offering of a premium of $1,000 for $1 that no property would be lost within a year in Wash-ington, thus really meaning that Lloyd's was betting 1,000 to 1 that no particular private property in Washington would be damaged.

SPIES:

Meet Doom

The reports issued constantly to British citizens that "even the walls have ears" were given point when it was told that two Nazi spies, Karl Theo Drueke, German citizen, and Werner Heinrich Waelti, a Swiss, were executed as spies.

The story was romantic enough. The two men, equipped with radio sending and receiving sets, flew near the English coast and were set down from a seaplane. They then rowed ashore in a collapsible rubber boat. Both had foreign passports and spoke English.

For a time they evaded discovery. They had split up and were head ing for Edinburgh, Scotland, by different routes.

Their bags were examined, and when the radios were found, the jig was up. Later, the government said, they were found to have food, including sausage made in Ger-many. They were hanged.

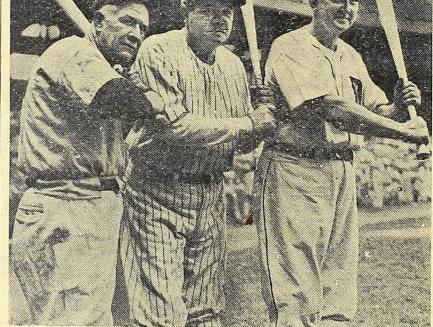

R.A.F.:

Busy Over Reich

Better weather renewed reports of increasingly heavy R.A.F. raids over cities of the Reich, including Berlin itself.

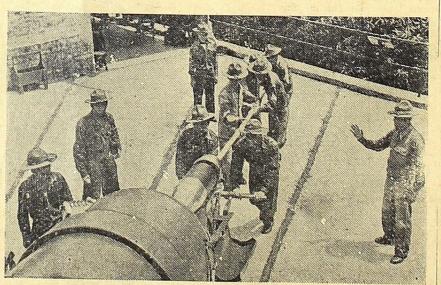

The communiques told of bombers braving storms and high winds to make their raids, although clear skies over Germany gave the pilcts a visual idea of the damage.

Among the towns raided were the industrial centers of Mannheim Frankfurt and Karlsruhe.

Raid-Shelters Foil Jap Bombs In War Capital Chinese Take to the Hills Around Chungking

For Safety.

By GERALD WILSON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.) NEW YORK CITY.-Attempts to bomb Chungking out of existence become more hopeless with every bombing, showing that, as a national capital, Chungking can endure indefinitely, according to Mr. Ronald Rees, secretary of the National Christian council, who recently arrived in New York from China. Chungking was the last stop in a six-weeks' trip made by Mr. Rees throughout China in the interest of work and relief projects being financed by American churches through United China Relief.

According to Mr. Rees, residents of Chungking are 16 times safer to-day from air-raids than they were two years ago, and there had been a drastic decline in air-raid casualties until the recent accident that caused several hundred deaths from suffocation inside an underground shelter.

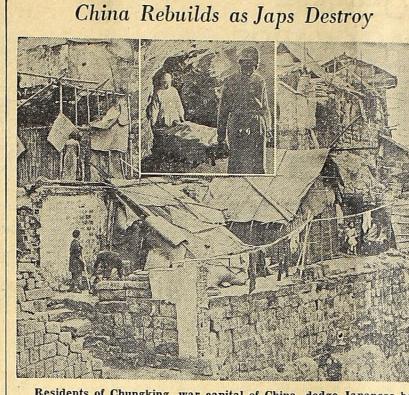

"This accident does not detract from Chungking's effective air-raid precautions, its alarm system and its shelters, which make Chungking the safest war capital in the world,' said Mr. Rees.

"When Japan first struck at Chungking in May, 1939, the city had very little defending air force, and few anti-aircraft guns or airraid shelters. In May and June of that year, over 4,000 people were killed.

Thousands in Caves.

"During the first breathing spell, 7,000 stone cutters of Chungking got busy with dynamite and crowbars, and blasted hundreds of roomy shel-ters from the sides of the sand-stone hill on which Chungking sits. Today the steep sides of the hill are Today, the steep sides of the hill are honeycombed with underground shelters, and most of Chungking's population can be accommodated inside them. Some of the tunnels house several thousand people."

Here is the picture of China's wartime capital as given by Mr. Rees: When the Chinese government moved in during 1938, Chungking was a quiet, picturesque, almost medieval village, without electric power development, without railroad connections with the rest of China, and with no modern highways. Today, by contrast, Chungking is a beehive of activity, the dynamo that directs all the human and mechanical energy that is developing free China. A large part of the relief work for Free China is directed from the war-time capital. Chung-king has become the center of a

Above, inset shows native doctors carrying a war stricken victim into one of the underground hospitals, blasted out of solid rock in the hills about Chungking. This one has 20 cave-rooms, joined by tunnels and equipped with operating room, research laboratory, wards and kitchen. Medical equipment and drugs are being sent there from the United China Relief campaign fund, now being collected in this country.

German-Americans Form Organization To Oppose Hitler

NEW YORK .- Formation of the "Loyal Americans of German Descent," a militant pro-democracy, anti-Nazi organization to act as center of practical guidance "for the 10,000,000 Americans of German descent, on whom the Nazis have been working for the past eight years,' has been announced. The organization has directors, sponsors and charter members in 18 states. Headed by Robert F. Wagner Jr., state assemblyman of New York, as president, and Dr. George N. Shuster, president of Hunter college, as chairman of the board, the organization has secured the support of nationally known political, management and labor leaders. The "Loyal Americans of German Descent" stated: "Every American, whether native born, naturalized or prospective citizen, must take a clear-cut stand today. Any sympathy with Nazi-Germany is completely irreconcilable with Americanism. Through forthright action, if necessary by the ultimate sacrifice of life, we shall meet the challenge with which destiny confronts us in the shape of Hitler and his henchmen.

"We consider it our duty to meet the Nazis wherever they may have enjoyed even partial success among the 10,000,000 Americans of German extraction. The misled must be guided back to the American way of life from which they have strayed through ignorance, misinformation or lack of guidance. We shall convince them that their own network of highways fanning out to well-being, this country and democracy are worth a fight to the finish Ideals Stated.

"We urge every loyal American of German descent-citizens and prospective citizens—to join us in notifying Adolf Hitler, his agents and the world at large: that Hitler is dead wrong; that men and women of German descent in America despise the slavery and tyranny and inhumanity which his terror imposed on the German people; that we are ready to fight for freedom and independence here and everywhere; that side by side with all our fellow citizens of many origins we shall uphold American unity by proclaiming our unalterable faith in democracy; that we shall not be fooled by traitors of Quisling or whatever stripe; that far from finding us a stepping stone into America, Hitler's followers shall founder against the rock of our opposition!" Directors of the organization include: Karl Brandt, economist, Food Research institute, Stanford university, Calif.; Gotthilf P. Bronisch, executive vice president, New York; Elisabeth Christman, secretary-treasurer, National Women's Trade Union league, Washington, D. ina, and the center of all parts of C air transportation connecting with Europe, and with the Western world via Hongkong.

The Chinese capital's most publicized air link with the Western world is its Hongkong-Chungking service, maintained daily by two companies: the Chinese National Aviation corporation and Eurasia. Both planes leave Hongkong secretly, shortly after midnight, so as to fly undetected over Japanese-held territory. The CNAC line continues beyond Chungking to Kunming and on to Rangoon. Another airline runs from Chungking through Chengtu and Lanchow, on to Russia and Germa-Chungking's airport has been built on a small island in the Yangtze river.

Cops supplies into China. Others are the standing beside booths with their Marco Polo road, running from Chungking northward to the Trans-Siberian railhead at Udinsk; and the Northwest route from Chungking to Sergiopol on the Trans-Siberian railroad.

Population Increases.

Chungking proper is spread out on a promontory of solid rock be-tween pine hills and valleys, with rivers on two sides: the Yangtze and the Chialing. Since the war has closed the Yangtze to Shanghai, both rivers are filled with small steamers, launches, junks and sam-pans, many of which did yeoman service in transporting dismantled machinery from Hankow and the industrial coastal regions before the Japanese advance. Because of the war, the normal population of 100,-000 has been swelled by refugees, government officials, and war workers. Some of the most vital industries have taken up their quarters inside the cave dugouts, so that they will not be forced to discontinue opera-tions during air raids. One of these is the publishing plant of Ta Kung China's leading newspaper, Pao. which has moved five times since the war drove it from its original home in Tientsin.

Some of the dugouts have wooden walls, electric lights, radio connec-tions and telephones. One of Chungking's most modern hospitals, consisting of operating rooms, laboratories, operates underground.

University. CHICAGO-The upward trend in farm income continues, with prices now averaging higher than any time since 1930, except for a short period of 1937. The growing season to date has been very good for nearly all crops, and if the weather continues favorable, the harvest this year is expected to be the largest on rec-

On clear days during the "bombing season," which lasts from mid-May to October, the Japanese bombers usually come between 9 a.m. and 1 p. m., and both business men and housewives have accom-modated their lives to the raids. Most government offices are open at night. School begins at 6 a. m., and banks are opened at 7 a. m. Housewives complete all their marketing and housework before the air raid, so that they can "eat rice" immediately after the all-clear.

ies. The total income is the largest in history, and still rising. In addition to having their income increased by the greatly improved domestic market, farmers are also benefited by the government agri-cultural programs which are constantly being expanded and made more effective. These programs include payments for co-operation in soil conservation and control of acreage planted to major crops, higher loans on basic products, and government buying for relief purposes as well as under the lease-lend program. Government payments are about the same as last year, and account for a little over 6 per cent of the total cash income received by farmers.

A new ruling of the U. S. depart-ment of agriculture governing excess acreage tax on wheat makes it possible for farmers to avoid the 49-cents-per-bushel tax on wheat grown in excess of their 1941 marketing quotas. The department has announced that farmers who have exceeded their 1941 quotas may seed less than their 1942 acreage allotments, and secure permission to sell their 1941 excess acreage without penalty. Farmers are urged to produce more dairy products, pork, beef, fruits, vegetables, tomatoes and beans.

III. No Escape (4:17-19).

IV. No Worry (5:6, 7).

"Put care into Christ's bag," said George Herbert. "Treat your cares as you treat your sins. Hand them over to Jesus one by one as they occur, commit them to Him" (F. B. Meyer). He really cares about you-believe it and act upon it.

The cure for all worry is right there, but even as it is true that the meek shall "inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5), so it is true that only the humble are ready to cast their cares on the Lord. "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble . . . Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up" (James 4:6, 10).

V. No Wavering (5:8-11). "Steady, perfected and established in Christ, strengthened by His grace, sure of the eternal call, and with the eye of faith on the glory to come, such is the man who is able and ready to successfully meet the devil when, like a roaring lion, he seeks to disturb and devour God's people.

Satan is busy in our day. Dr. Wil-bur M. Smith says: "It is admitted everywhere by outstanding Christian leaders, in every sphere of life today, that there has never been a time, at least in our generation, when the temptations of Satan have been so fierce, so frequent, so con-stant, as just now. What Satan wants to do is to destroy the testimony of God's people, to take them out of places of power and influence for the gospel, to rob them of that joy, and victory, and power, by which, through their labors, others will be brought to confess the Lord Jesus Christ. Christian people today who are conscious of being fiercely as-sailed by evil ought not to be alarmed, but should realize that this experience of theirs is general, everywhere, of true believers, and that there is sufficient grace for every need in such dreadful times as these.'

Three women love Sidney Lander, Alaska mining engineer. He is engaged to Barbara Trumbull, whose rich father is contesting the mining claim of Klondike Coburn, now dead. Because of Carol Coburn, teacher at Matanuska, Lander breaks with Trumbull.

It was the incompetents, of course, who'd caused the most trouble, the incompetents like the prolific and indolent Betsy Sebeck and her unkempt brood of offspring. But even in their sloth they remained instruments of destiny. For it was the mountainous Betsy's two-year-old daughter Azalea who tried her best to swallow an open safety pin, while playing about a littered tent floor, the safety pin already alluded to. The pin stuck in the child's throat, and the mother, thinking it was choking to death, ran out screaming for help. It wasn't long before Katie and her Black Maria arrived on the scene. She failed to find the pin and suspected it had slipped down to the child's esophagus. But as she was without either X-ray machine or bronchoscopic instruments, she decided the case was serious and took matters in her own hands. In the absence of her Ruddy she radioed for a plane to carry her patient down to a properly equipped hospital.

The answer came, three hours later, when we heard the drone of a motor through the hilltops.

The courier of the sky, in this case, proved to be Slim Downey, the Cordova pilot, who had picked up the summons when he stopped to refuel at Fairbanks, on his way south from the upper Porcupine. He swung down between a furry colony of mountain clouds and was quickly surrounded by an army of rapteyed watchers. But while the colony children pawed about the knees of that helmeted Viking and fingered and patted his plane struts, Katie did an odd and altogether unexpected thing. When she noticed her little patient in greater distress and giving every evidence of a choking fit, Katie took the child by the heels, and, holding her upside down in those muscular big hands of hers, abruptly cracked-the-whip with that limp and unprotesting little body. She swung and jerked it as a busy housewife shakes a floor rug to rid it of dust. It seemed like sudden madness. But an equally sudden shout went up from the watchers. For there, in plain view, they saw a safety pin fall out between their feet. "I guess that puts a kink in my mercy flight," observed Slim Downey as Lander pushed through to his side.

I saw the two men standing there, talking together. And I saw a quick and affirmative nod of Slim's helmeted head. But it wasn't until Lander shouldered his way through to my side that I realized the import of their hurried conference.

"We've got our break," he said with an exultant light in his eye. "Slim's to fly us in to the Chakitana." It was while Lander was stowing away our duffel, half an hour later, and I was waiting to climb into the cabin, that the culminating touch came to that drama of speed.

Lander finds Salaria. She had injured her leg while hunting. Barbara misinterprets the rescue and flings away her engagement seem unable to charter a plane. Trumbull's hand is seen in this ring.

"Sure," answered Slim. "I was grounded and frozen in there two winters ago. Since then we've kept a gas cache at Carcajou Lake." He scanned the welter of peaks and valleys over which we were arrowing. 'You'll be seeing it in half an hour, if the fog holds off."

But the fog didn't hold off. A new-uneasiness crept through me as we went higher, to climb into the clear. Our pilot seemed to be watching the valley bottom over which we were winging. He dropped lower as the cloud floor fell away under us. He gave me the impression that he was peering about for familiar landmarks. Then I saw him stiffen and cry out, at the same time that Lander leaped to his feet. "What's that?" was the latter's sharp demand.

Slim Downey didn't turn as he shouted back. But there was indignation in his voice. "It's rifle shots. There's some fool shooting at us." "Turn back," I heard Lander's voice call out. "And go down like a duck?" was Slim's sharp-noted reply. "Not on your life!"

Then I saw the helmeted head stoop closer to the instrument board. This was followed by a series of hand movements that were meaningless to me. But even before I

At last the air begins to clear up in Carol's and Sidney's romance. Lander and Carol decide to fly to Chakitana, scene of her father's claim. But they working on his ship and packing in the gas, you and I will start overland for Big Squaw Creek. We should do it in a day. And every day counts." It was easy enough to say. But out on the trail, ten hours later, I realized there was little romance in mushing over the broken terrain of the Alaskan hinterland. There was no path through the spruce groves and no foothold on the hillside rubble. Twice we worked our way up rough traverses that came to a dead end and compelled us to retrace our steps. Our shoulder packs trimmed down as they were to essentials, seemed to grow in weight with the growing hours. I even came to resent the tugging burden of Sock-Eye's old six-gun swinging from my belt holster. But I could see that my own burden, compared to Lander's, was trivial. For my trail mate carried a belt ax and rifle and grub bag and blankets. Sometimes he had to use the ax to cut a way through the undergrowth. We were two plodding animals, swallowed up by the wilderness, fighting our way through from one peril to another. And when we slept out that night, with a campfire between us and the aurora borealis brushing the blue-white peaks of the mountains above us, I lay stunned with a slowly widening sense of solitude touched with unreality. It was the far-off howl of a wolf that brought a final cry of protest from my lips.

"I'm not much good to you, am I?" Lander quietly announced. I detected a new timbre in his voice. And it was both a joy and a peril to me.

"You're a good fighter," I told him. "But that isn't everything," he suggested. "No, it isn't everything," I agreed.

His gaze went, for a moment, down the dark valley, and then returned to my face. 'I know what you mean," he said in that overdisturbing low voice of his. "But our fight isn't won yet." "But aren't we letting something better slip through our fingers?" I was foolish enough to cry out. Lander sat considering this.

"You call me a good fighter," he finally said. "But any fighting I've done for you is easily explained." "How?" I asked. And again, somewhere between the blue-white peaks, I could hear the far-off wolf howl

"Because I've always loved you," he said with his face a little closer to mine. Then he stooped still lower, and pressed his cheek against my cheek. His face was rough and unshaven. "It's rifle shots. There's some But in its very roughness I found

OUTDOOR SUPPERS

If you've a longing to do something different, an outdoor supper's the answer. Get the smell of woodsy smoke into your food, the crackle of burning embers for atmosphere, the sound of sizzling meat held over glowing flames during the supper hour and you'll experience a tastethrill you'll long remember. Everything tastes better cooked outdoors! Toss some cans of beans into a gay kerchief, wrap fruit, cookies, cake into waxed paper, whip up some barbecue sauce to use with the meat, and the meal is under way.

Outdoor cooking equipment may be as humble as a few large bricks, an iron grate, or an extra rack from the oven, a long handled fork for each member of the family. A light camping stove or a more elaborate grill such as a vertical or horizontal stove of sheet steel including drip and ashpans, a roasting spit, and warming shelves may also be used. Whatever you use, remember, it's the cooking outdoors which makes the meal.

You will want meat and plenty of it for fresh air whips up the appetite. The family will come back again and again for this delicious meat with a sauce all its own:

Tomato Horseradish Mustard Marinade.

For 3 pounds of spareribs or beef short ribs use:

2 tablespoons prepared horseradish mustard sauce 1/4 cup vinegar

1/4 teaspoon black pepper

1 cup tomato juice

1 teaspoon salt 1 teaspoon sugar

2 onions, chopped fine

Combine dry and liquid materials well and beat thoroughly. Place meat in a shallow bowl or glass ice creams you dish and cover with the marinade. Turn every 3 or 4 hours and mari-dients and mix with potatoes. Chill 1 hour and serve with lettuce. If you decide on hamburgers some night for your open grill stove try them this way: Add 15 per cent suet to your regular meat. Press the uncooked hamburger into thin flat cakes between waxed paper. Put two cakes together with a filling made from finely chopped raw onion mixed with steak sauce and rich prepared mustard, pressing the edges of the cakes' firmly together. Broil quickly on both sides. Serve on large, toasted buns which have been buttered. Here are two variations you may wish to follow if you serve baked beans often: Maple Beans-Substitute 1/2 cup maple syrup or three tablespoons maple sugar for brown sugar and molasses.

Baked Beans with Sausage-Arrange parboiled beans and uncooked sausage in alternate layers; substitute 1 can tomato soup for molasses and part of water.

Boiled Campfire Coffee.

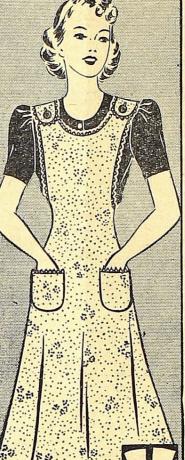

(1 quart) 4 heaping tablespoons coffee 4 cups boiling water

1 egg Combine the coffee and egg in the pot and mix thoroughly. Pour in water and bring slowly to a full boil, stirring coffee down in a warm place for 3 to 5 minutes. Use 1/4 cup cold water to settle grounds.

Famous Romance

The romance of Paolo and Francesca da Rimini in Thirteenth-century Italy has been the subject of more famous music, literature and paintings than any other true love story, says Col-lier's. Operas include one by Debussey; symphonic poems in-clude one by Tchaikovsky; poems include those by Dante and Leigh Hunt; paintings include those by Dore, Watts, Rossetti and Cabanel; and plays include those by d'Annunzio, Pellico, Echegaray and Maeterlinck.

It came in the person of Salaria, mounted bareback on one of her father's horses.

She swung off her horse and came straight to my side. Then she caught at my arm, as though to hold me back from climbing up into the cabin.

"Kin I come?" she said. She said it roughly yet almost imploringly.

"What for?" I asked, at a loss for words before such impetuosity. "To swing in, if there's any fightin'," she announced. "I kin be a two-legged wildcat when there's call for it."

I had to tell her, of course, that there'd be no call for it. But I noticed that Salaria's dusky eyes continued to hold a look of desperation.

"You've got Sid Lander," she said with a shoulder-movement of comprehension touched with abnegation. "I'm as dumb as a fool hen in a snowdrift," she dolorously con-fessed. "I never savvied."

"Savvied what?" I questioned. "I never savvied until that silkskinned Trumbull cat put me wise," was Salaria's embittered reply. "But I sure gave her an earful when I had the chance. I may not git thim. But she won't."

CHAPTER XXI

The valley, which had once seemed so big to me, became a narrow shadow between clustering peaks, peaks as white as wolf teeth, that lost their sharpness as we climbed.

"Why do you call this ship the Snowball Baby?" Lander inquired of the singularly silent man at the stick.

Slim Downey laughed.

"That's what they christened her back at Bear Lake," he answered. "Up at Eskimo Point they used to call her the Igloo Queen."

Still again I heard Lander's voice. "Why aren't you carrying radio equipment?"

Slim laughed for the second time. "I'm a bush pilot. What good is two-way radio to us when we're belly-dragging through a thousand miles of wilderness?"

heard the stutter of the engine l could read alarm in that forwardbent figure.

"They got my fuel tank," Slim suddenly shouted over his shoulder. "That's Blackwater Lake on our left there. I think I can make it. I've got to make it.'

We veered a little as we slid down an invisible stairway that was nothing but crystal-clear air whistling through our struts. I could see the earth coming up to meet us. And I could feel Lander's hand groping for mine as we catapulted over ragged cliffs with little patches of snow between them. Then the valley widened again and between the lightly wooded slopes beneath us I could see a dark-surfaced pool of water that became much more than a pool as we drew down on it.

I heard Slim's throaty shout of gratitude and felt Lander's hand tighten on mine. But we merely sat there, in silence, as we taxied to a stop. "What do we do now?" asked Lander with what I recognized as purely achieved casualness. Slim took out a cigarette and sat down on a rock. Then he mopped his face.

"We've got to get gas," he announced, "from our Carcajou cache. But it's no good to me, of course, until I've plugged that hole in my tank."

"Can you do it?" I rather tremulously inquired.

Slim laughed at my woebegone look.

"It'd surprise you what a bushhawk can do when he has to. When I was iced down on Cranberry Lake last winter, with a dead battery and no starting crank, I was blacksmith enough to turn an oil-screen wrench into a hand crank. There's always a way, young lady.' Lander placed his consoling big hand on my shoulder and said: "It's all right. We're not licked yet." "I know it," I said with a foolish little surge of faith.

"We've grub for two weeks," he pointed out, "whatever happens. We've fuel, all the fuel we need. And a chance for snowshoe rabbit or caribou if we need it. You'll sleep in the plane cabin tonight and Slim and I'll camp on shore here." "And then what?" I asked, trying to keep the desolation out of my voice.

"Then in the morning, when Slim's something infinitely soothing. CHAPTER XXII

When we broke camp the next morning Sidney Lander seemed sur-er of himself. Through his binocu-lars he examined the wide and twisting valley country and announced that we'd have to climb up into higher territory.

"I begin to know these hills," he told me. "We're at last getting somewhere."

He pointed into the distance. "That's the Chakitana," he called down to me. I detected a note of If you're accusexcitement in his voice. "And in an hour we ought to be spotting the Big Squaw.'

So we pushed on again. But my trail mate's rise in spirits was not an enduring one.

"I don't like this loss of time," he said as he glanced at the sun, "It's three days now. And we may be too late."

"Too late for what?" I questioned. "We'll know that when we get there," he said with a curtness which I wrote down to overtensioned nerves.

So still again we went forward. We went clambering over mammillated rock ridges and dipping down into blue-shadowed canyons.

"It's great country," Landes called back over his shoulder.

I couldn't agree with him. It seemed wild and torn and empty, the outpost of the world, a scarred bat.

tlefield where titanic forces had clashed and enmities older than man had left desolation in the wake o tumult and warfare.

I was glad when Lander came t a stop, at the end of a traverse that led to a wide rock ledge overlooking the westerly running valley. The valley itself widened out, with a cleft or two in the hill ranges where a series of canyons and smaller valleys radiated out from the lower wide bowl, with gravel beds and groves of stunted spruce interspersed along it's broken slopes. "We've made it," I heard Lander

I stood watching him as he moved forward and mounted a glacial hardhead that had all the appearance of a pagan throne carved out of granite. He had a little trouble, because of his heavy pack, in getting to the top of it. Then with his glasses he scanned the valley. (TO BE CONTINUED)

LYNN SAYS:

While cooking under the sky over hot coals you'll want to remember:

Charcoal burns to fine, lasting coals and gives a nice steady fire for barbecue cookery. For best results when using either charcoal or wood should be burned until the flames disappear. Then the meat should be placed 8 to 10 inches above the coals and turned every few minutes to insure even cooking.

Hard woods like oak, hickory, madrone manzanita and maple give a lasting glowing bed of coals. Soft pine is suitable for quick grilling like hamburger and hot dogs.

Whatever type of grill you use, pick a spot that's shady, not too far from the kitchen if you're do-ing it in the back yard and not too near heavy shrubbery.
