TAWAS CITY

"Old Timers" Day at Athletic Field Sunday

"OLD TIMERS" PLAY TAWAS CITY TEAM

Wheel-Chair Occupants to Be Barred from Playing

Plans for "Old Timers Day," which is scheduled for Sunday, are nearly complete. A large delegation of old timers and former players are expected to be on hand to play the present city team. Let's make this a big day by attending the game and seeing some of the former players in action and renewing old friendships. The Old Timers will be managed by Henry "Hank" Neumann.

The old timers from around town have been limbering up their arms and legs the past several weeks and some of them appear to be in pretty good form, maybe a bit slower than in their younger days. Fred Rempert says that any of the old timers who want amble or zerk fittings installed and their joints greased can have the work done at his garage any time up to Sunday noon, free of charge. And if anyone has an extra pair of crutches to bring them along, wheel chair occupants are barred from playing, but may direct the play of the younger lads from the side lines.

The game is scheduled to start at the usual time, 2:30, and the same admission price will prevail, twenty-five cents, with ladies free on this day. The Tawas City Baseball team was idle last Sunday, as no game was scheduled. Several of the players from the local team accompanied the West Branch All-Stars to Alpena where they played the Alpena Bronchos. The game was won by Alpena, by the score of 14 to 5. The Tawas City players who played were: Nelson Thornton, Bob Rollin, Bob McPhearson and Rollie Gackstetter.

Tawas City Recreation

The Tawas City Bowling association has been organized for the coming season with the following officers elected: Fred Bublitz, president; Henry Neumann, first vice president; Ernest Mueller, second vice president; E. D. Jacques, third vice president; Earl Davis, secretary; C. R. McMullen, treasurer and foul man.

League competition will begin Monday evening with the ten Major league teams swinging into action. On Tuesday evening the six Inter-City teams will start. On Wednesday the Ladies league and on Thursday evening the Minors, also a six team league.

All matches are scheduled for 7:30 sharp, and 9:30 where a double shift is bowled. Captains and players are asked to please observe this rule and plan to be on time as it causes a confusion when a team is late, especially for starting the second shift on time.

Next week's schedule:

MAJOR LEAGUE

First Shift, 7:30—Turner Gypsum vs. Hulls Grocery. Humphrey Sales vs. Forest Service. Gilbert Drug vs. St. Joseph.

INTER-CITY LEAGUE

Mueller Cement Blocks vs. Tawas City High School. Gabler's Lunch vs. Rainbow Service.

LADIES LEAGUE

Silver Valley vs. Tawas City Recreation. Yellow Jackets vs. Wild Cats. Del Mar vs. Bay View.

MINOR LEAGUE

Bauer's Bar vs. Hi-Speed. Ford Sales vs. McLears. Tawas Herald vs. Moeller's Grocery.

Losco Man Kills Bear At Mackinac Island

A four-man posse, headed by Conservation Officer Ray Walker, tracked down and killed a 150-pound black bear which had been frightening horses and endangering people at Mackinac Island. The search for the two-year-old bruin was opened at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday and culminated at eleven o'clock that morning when Joe Schneider, of National City, 68-year-old woodsman, sighted the bear in the brush about 165 feet away and brought him down with one shot from his .30-30 rifle.

Joseph H. Thompson, chairman of the Mackinac Island State Park Commission, requested Conservation Officer Walker to rid Mackinac Island of the bear as it had been frightening horses which hauled passengers on tours of the Island, thus endangering human life and limb.

Walker enlisted the services of Harry Miles, Joe Schneider and James Campbell as a posse to find and kill the bear. The deed was accomplished when the bear was sighted about a mile north of British Landing emerging from some brush on the north shore of the island. Walker said the bear had likely swum from Boise Blanc or perhaps the mainland. He had been seen on the island regularly during the past week.

Walker brought the bear to St. Ignace where it was viewed with interest by hundreds of homeward bound tourists Tuesday afternoon.—The Republican-News, St. Ignace.

FOUR IOSCO BOYS ATTEND 4-H CLUB CAMP

Annual Event Held at Camp Shaw in Upper Peninsula

Clayton Johnson, of Hale, Bud Bissonette, Robert Fullerton and Gelason Heins, of Oscoda, are spending this week at the State 4-H Conservation camp at Chatham in the Upper Peninsula.

These four boys are representing Iosco County's 4-H conservation club members at the fifth annual camp held at Camp Shaw which is located upon the Michigan State College Upper Peninsula experimental farm near the small "Finnish" town of Chatham.

The camp is made possible each year by liberal contributions from the Federal Cartridge Co., of Minnesota, the State Conservation Department and the 4-H Club Department of Michigan State college.

A group of boys numbering more than 100 gathered at the Chatham camp Monday afternoon, September 8, and represent conservation club members from approximately fifty counties of Michigan. The numerous representatives come from 4-H clubs in Forestry, Forest fire study, deer yard study, stream improvement and pheasant raising, however, the Iosco county boys won their free trip through their careful work and keen interest in the deer yard study project which they completed last March.

The Iosco representatives were selected by state club leaders at the past spring Achievement Day which was held at the Prescott high school, Tuesday, May 6, 1941.

The group, while at camp, are under the direct supervision of District 4-H Agent L. H. Rhodes.

SUPERVISORS WILL SUBMIT LABOR POLICY

12 Called Back to Work During Intervention Truce

Twelve county road workers have been called back to work following the truce established Tuesday between the men and the road commission. The members of the commission and the county road employes have agreed to overlook their differences until a report can be made by a committee selected by the Board of Supervisors at a special session held here today (Friday). It is thought that the committee will report at the October meeting of the Board of Supervisors.

The commission, during the two-weeks layoff of the men, had refused to negotiate with representatives of the C. I. O. or of the State Labor Meditation Board, but readily agreed to the plan adopted Tuesday. This plan was suggested by Probate Judge H. Head Smith, special counsel for the commission. Capt. Jos. Kearney of the Michigan State Police, acted as intermediary in the negotiations between the men and the road commission.

In the negotiations, the commission offered, at the suggestion of Judge Smith, to submit the problem to a committee appointed by the Board of Supervisors. This committee to investigate the action of the road commission in laying off its employes, and the entire labor situation involved, and make recommendations to the Board of Supervisors. The recommendation accepted by the Board of Supervisors was accepted by the road commission. In making the offer the members of the commission said that they felt their actions in the labor dispute had been justified, but they were willing to accept any recommendations for the protection of the interests of county road employes approved by the Board of Supervisors.

The plan proposed by Judge Smith and the road commission was accepted by the county road men by a majority vote. Immediately after the negotiations had been completed arrangements were made for a portion of the men to go to work.

Handmade Rainbows

Kathleen Maguire is helping her mother with a dinner to be given that night for the Newsiums, whose son Jaid, is engaged to Shirley, Kathleen's sister.

Kathleen's eyes smarted. It seemed to the girl such rank injustice that Laura should have to patch and glue and nail things together to make them do. It wasn't as if she had been born to make-shifts. She had grown up in considerable luxury. But she had had precious little of it since her marriage, especially the last few years.

It had never worried Kathleen until lately. All the things her mother did without. But somehow in the past few months it had become a sore spot in the girl's consciousness. She supposed she was growing up. If so, it was a harrowing process. One that was shaking her foundations pretty badly. She said nothing. It hurt to criticize her father. She had always been his favorite. And he had been her particular, shining hero. Just of late had she begun to think he could have flaws. She was essentially a fiercely loyal young person. It made her feel dreadfully let down to be considering Mike with resentment. She didn't want to. She most terribly didn't want to. And yet—

"I saw Mrs. Mays this afternoon."
"Yes?" murmured Laura.
She was arranging the irises in a graceful low white Wedgewood bowl which would stand on a mirror in the center of the table.

"Her limousine almost crowded me into the curb outside Jensen's. Her chauffeur was bringing out a box of hothouse flowers. A box as long as a hearse. Is she entertaining tonight?"

"Yes, didn't you hear? Mrs. Newsium said they'd have to leave before nine for—quotation marks—a little intimate bridge at Mrs. Mays'."

"Aren't you invited?"
"I'm not exactly intimate with that crowd any more."

"Because you haven't the money to keep up with Lizzie?"

Laura shrugged her shoulders. Kathleen studied her with narrowed eyes. She wished she knew whether her mother really did not mind missing out with old friends.

"Mrs. Mays has never quite forgiven you, Laura, because she'd never have got Eugene Mays if you hadn't given him the air."

It was common knowledge that Laura Maguire could have been Mrs. Eugene Mays had she liked. She had indeed had considerable trouble eluding the banker in favor of Michael Maguire. And Mays had been the catch of the town. He still was Covington's richest man. His big, three-storied house was a show place, set in stately grounds. His wife never had to darn tablecloths or make over last year's hats.

Again Kathleen scrutinized her mother's averted face.
Did Laura ever think she had made a mistake? Would she do it the same way a second time if she had the choice? Kathleen's throat ached. Her mother had rejected Eugene Mays—and real pearls and an impressive home and servants and a new car every year and trips to New York—because she was in love with a charming Irishman. Up to six months ago it had never occurred to Kathleen that Laura had paid high for love. Or that she might regret her bargain. Somehow Kathleen had taken it for granted that her mother was thrilled to death to be poor and shabby and overworked. But was she? Or did she feel that love and life and Michael Maguire had cheated her?

Kathleen shivered. Her mother had thrown the world over for romance. Yet it appeared to Kathleen that somewhere on the road Laura had been defrauded. Because there was nothing very romantic about darning Mike's socks and fishing his dirty shirts out from behind the clothes hamper where he invariably threw them.

"If you ask me," said Kathleen Maguire outside her sister's door, "this love racket looks more like a skin game than anything else. You get a few mad thrills—maybe. But you pay for them by taking it on the chin the rest of your life."

And in her heart she had a panicky feeling that her mother must long ago have reached the same conclusion although she was too game to whine.

CHAPTER III

Shirley Maguire snapped off the electric iron as her sister entered. "Oh, hullo, Kath," she said, becoming suddenly very busy with one of the ruses on Laura's ecru orandy frock.

But although she averted her face, Kathleen could see Shirley's violet eyes in the mirror over the dressing table and they were blurred.

"Let me finish, Sis. You look tired to death."

Kathleen elaborately pretended that it was merely fatigue and the heat which had drawn shadows on Shirley's delicate cheeks. The Maguires had been brought up to respect each other's reticences. And so Kathleen did not refer to any tears Shirley might have been shedding. And neither did Shirley.

"I've all finished, Kath, thanks.

INSTALLMENT TWO—The Story So Far

Kathleen had just returned from a trip for wild flowers to save a florist's bill. The rear tire of the old car had gone flat, and a strange young man helped her fix it. Like her father, Mike, he was a happy-go-lucky newspaper man. His assurance irritates her. He seems amused and kisses her.

But you can hang this in Laura's closet if you will."
"Surely."
Shirley was employing a subterfuge to be alone and Kathleen knew it. But she obediently trotted across the hall and she took her time about the errand. When she returned, Shirley had bathed her face and powdered her telltale eyelids and was curled up on the foot of the bed, manicuring her finger nails as if she had nothing on her mind but the last development in liquid polish.

"Mother thinks you ought to take a cat nap," suggested Kathleen, digging out her red evening sandals which needed cleaning.

"I'm not sleepy," said Shirley.

Kathleen bent over her task. She didn't want Shirley to think she was tampering with things which did not concern her. But the trouble was Shirley hadn't been sleeping nights either. Kathleen had not told anyone, not even Laura how often Shirley rolled and tossed or slipped out of bed to sit in the window and smoke a cigarette. Maybe she thought Kathleen did not know. She always lay perfectly still and said nothing. But Kathleen knew. And it had her a little ragged.

Shirley just did not deserve the break she was getting. Kathleen was beginning to think that fate takes a special delight in being malicious to the wrong people. She could think of a number of girls it would be a pleasure to see knocked off their pedestals. But Shirley was not one of them. Kathleen admitted she was partial. All her life she had secretly thought that Shirley was a bit of all right. Probably because she was four years older. Perhaps because they were so different in looks and in temperament.

Kathleen was pretty and vivacious. She looked "slick," to quote herself, in snappy clothes. She could wear extreme haircuts and get by with impudence and a general air of being more hard-boiled than she was. But Shirley was beautiful. Really beautiful. She had wide, smoke-blue eyes and radiant gold-brown hair and the loveliest cream and rose skin and exquisite hands and feet. She looked just as pretty in a bungalow apron as in an evening gown.

And Shirley was quite as beautiful within as without. She had high standards and she did not betray them. She was never petty nor malicious nor envious nor capricious. If Shirley had wild ugly impulses, she mastered them in secret. They never cluttered up the neighborhood. Kathleen passionately coveted Shirley's ability to put her soul through its paces without an outward ripple. Shirley was proud and disciplined and reserved and self-controlled. She kept her emotions firmly under lock and key, as if they were dangerous explosives.

Kathleen, sitting flat on the floor with cleaning fluid and a rag, vigorously massaged the heel of a frivolous red slipper and wished she were as thoroughly the master of her frailties as her sister. But watching the dimple come and go in the younger girl's vivid, mercurial face, Shirley Maguire knew with bitterness that her capacity for silent anguish was the point of her grave peril.

Far better, she thought, to be able to boil over like Kathleen than to keep agonies corked up in your heart. To poison and ferment.

The diamond on Shirley's slender white hand winked at her mockingly as she fled her ring finger. Shirley had a strange feeling that the stone laughed when it caught her eye. But she brought herself up sharply. She simply must not indulge in morbid fancies. It was unhealthy, almost indecent. It came from solitary brooding. If only she could break through the cell of her reserve! But Shirley could not produce the skeletons from her mental closet for the inspection of others.

"The table looks spiffy," observed Kathleen, from the floor. "Honestly, isn't Mother a genius at making any old thing do in a rub? I don't believe even Kitty-Cat Newsium can find a thing to sniff at."

Shirley flushed faintly. Kathleen eyed her from under lowered lashes. She knew quite well that Shirley would never have applied such an epithet to the lady in question. Although Shirley had more reason to resent Jaid's mother than had any other person on earth. If Shirley's dreams did not perish of dry rot it would be through no fault of Mrs. Blake Newsium.

"Give Mother two hours and a bunch of wild flowers and she could entertain the Duke of Windsor in a style he'd love," said Shirley.
"Sure, and she'd have time left over to remind Mike to wash the printers' ink off his paws before he shook hands with the Duke," chorled Kathleen.

Shirley smiled. "Mike will never grow up."

"Not so long as he can get by without it," said Kathleen, frowning.
Shirley glanced at her quickly. There had been a note in her sister's voice Shirley had never heard Kathleen apply to their father. In their several ways all his children adored Michael Maguire. But it was no secret that he had always been Kathleen's special god. As a child she had been ready to battle anyone who dared intimate that anything about Mike could be improved. No longer ago than six months Kathleen had threatened to box Fatty Bonner's ears for saying on the stump that Maguire didn't deserve to be elected mayor of Covington for the tenth time because he was no howling success at handling his private business, so why entrust him with running the city?

It was a bit of a family joke, Mike's being lord mayor of Covington. The office paid next to nothing. In fact Mike never broke even on the deal. His salary failed completely to equal what he laid out on entertaining visiting celebrities who invariably called on His Honor when in town and expected to be wined and dined. To say nothing of the parades and the conventions and the charity drives to which Mike was supposed to lend his moral and financial support.

The city budget appropriated all it could stand for such eventualities. But by November of every year, the fund was depleted. From that point Mike was on his own. Many a time His Honor was reduced to the expedient of opening the Community Fund Ball on the proceeds of a pawned watch and chain. To be redeemed when city taxes were paid.

Secretly, although he made comical remarks about it, Mike adored being mayor of Covington. He liked to preside at banquets and throw out the first ball at the opening of the baseball season. He got a great kick out of securing the new civic auditorium by a determined drive on the purses of bankers and politicians and the like. He was as pleased as a small boy with a little red drum over the modest but complete municipal hospital for which he had schemed for years.

He admitted it might be a luxury, but he wouldn't have traded jobs with any ruling nabob. And although he had determined opposition from the political machine, Mike went on being elected year after year. The people had an indestructible faith in his integrity. Other mayors had waxed rich. By distinctly unscrupulous methods. Mike lost money every time he was sworn in.

His children teased him about being a big hoptoad in a very insignificant puddle. But deep down within, none of the Maguires thought it funny to be lord mayor of Covington. They might wisecrack about it among themselves, but they were quick to defend Mike from an outsider's aspersion. Kathleen had always been especially sensitive to any unflattering criticism of their father. And yet today Shirley for the first time had detected a bitter note in Kathleen's reference to Mike. But at her glance Kathleen sidestepped the issue. She might in her own mind have reached the stage where she was uncertain about values which she had accepted wholeheartedly all her life, but she could not bring herself to bare her slipping loyalties even to Shirley. So Kathleen changed the subject with an evasiveness which reminded Shirley of herself.

"Did you know the Newsiums are leaving at nine? To bridge at Mrs. Mays'?"

Again Shirley reddened slightly.

"Yes."

MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR LEFTOVERS!
(See Recipes Below)

TRIMMED TO TEMPT

Leftovers on purpose! There are so many delicious ways of using leftovers, why not call them "planned aheads"? Casseroles, meat loaves, salads, soups and so on will do much to turn the tag ends of day-before-yesterday's dinner into mealtime "come-ons."

The trick is not to serve the same old hash or stew in the same old way, but to give leftover foods fresh faces with fresh recipes. Like many thrifty homemakers, you, too, can discover the economy, both in time and money, of buying and preparing a large roast, or more than enough vegetables, with leftovers in mind.

You can't always make mealtime foods come out even. So, let's be practical about the situation. If you serve roast chicken or baked salmon for Sunday dinner, plan to do all sorts of things with the leftover portions for weekday meals.

Here's a roll call of leftovers and how to fix them—proof that "day-after" foods can be not only good, but delicious!

Summer Meat Pie.

- (Serves 6)
2 pounds beef neck or shank or
2½ cups leftover meat, cubed
3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons lard
1 small onion, sliced
1 green pepper, chopped
1 cup carrot slices
Sliced mushrooms
Salt and pepper

Have the beef neck or shank cut into 1-inch cubes. Dredge in flour, seasoned with salt and pepper. Brown meat in hot lard with onion and green pepper. Cover with hot water and let simmer 1 hour, with kettle tightly covered. Transfer to baking dish, add carrots and mushrooms. Thicken meat liquid, pour over meat and vegetables. Cook in moderate oven (350 degrees) about 40 minutes, then pipe a border of mashed potatoes around the edge, and bake till potatoes brown.

Salmon a la Ring.

- 4 tablespoons butter
4½ tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
½ pimiento
½ small green pepper
2 cups flaked salmon
2 egg yolks
½ cup mayonnaise
Salt and pepper to taste

Melt the butter, blend in flour, add the milk and cook slowly, stirring constantly until thickened and smooth. Add green pepper and pimiento cut into strips. Add flaked salmon. When hot, add egg yolks which have been beaten, cook a moment, then fold in mayonnaise and seasonings. Heat again and blend thoroughly. Serve this mixture in the center of a rice ring which has been turned out on a serving platter or chop plate. Garnish with the buttered peas and sprinkle with paprika.

Ham Souffle.

- 2 cups scalded milk
3 tablespoons butter or other fat
3 tablespoons flour
½ cup bread crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
Buttered bread crumbs
2 cups ground cooked ham
3 eggs
Grated cheese

Make a cream sauce of milk, fat, flour and salt. Add bread crumbs and cook 3 minutes. Add ham and egg yolks and carefully fold in whites beaten until stiff. Turn into well-greased baking pan or casserole, spread top with buttered crumbs and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake about 30 minutes in moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Serve at once.

Meals that follow holiday feasts can be made beguiling by clever use of foods left from the feasts themselves.

Salvage leftovers from the relish tray, grind or chop them, moisten with a little salad dressing and out comes a brand new sandwich filler. Spread some between hot toasted rolls or bread slices at snack time.

Romantic Meat Pie.

- (Serves 6)
A very nutritious kind of pie is this one, with crescent biscuits riding a sea of meat, vegetables and gravy. And it's an excellent way to serve leftover meat. Almost any of the thrifty cuts can be used. You'll need:
4 tablespoons fat
3 tablespoons chopped onion
2 tablespoons green pepper
½ cup diced celery
1 cup diced cooked meat
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk or meat stock
½ cup diced cooked carrots

Slowly brown onions, pepper, celery and cooked meat in cooking fat, stirring often. Add flour slowly, stirring constantly until brown. Add remaining ingredients. Heat thoroughly. Pour into well-greased baking dish and cover with baking powder biscuits which have been cut in crescent shapes. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) about 15 minutes, or until biscuits are browned.

Why not try this sweet potato leftover which is sure to be a hit with either fish, fowl or meat: Mash the potatoes and shape into ½-inch cakes. Sprinkle with flour and brown quickly in hot fat. Then serve.

Sure, it's a big problem to figure ways of using assorted flakes and bits of yesterday's meal. But, don't eye them coldly—show them the heat again. Your family will love you for it!

LYNN SAYS:

When brown sugar hardens so that it cannot be measured accurately, spread it in a shallow pan and heat it slowly in a 275-degree F. oven. If too high a heat is used, the sugar caramelizes. Stir and mash it with a fork. Only enough sugar to be used at one time should be softened, as it hardens again as soon as it is cold.

To sour one cup of milk, put one tablespoon of vinegar in a cup and fill the cup with sweet milk. Stir well.

To clean silverware, mix one tablespoon soda and one tablespoon salt with one quart of water. Boil the silverware in this in an aluminum kettle until the tarnish is removed. Rinse and rub dry.

Give the baby his cod liver oil in the bath tub to avoid the brown stains on blankets and clothes that are so hard to remove.

DISCHARGING A RESPONSIBILITY

A Statement of Employee Policy by the Central Western Division of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co.

The privilege of leadership in any industry carries with it heavy responsibilities and obligations. Honest discharge of these duties, we feel, is imperative to the maintenance of an orderly, going business—a business in which management shares with its employees and customers savings effected through efficient operation. Such a business is ours.

The necessity of taking stock is recognized in all business by employee and management alike. In the A&P organization, however, there is considerably more to this routine "must" than counting the number of cans of foodstuffs on the shelves of our stores; the tea, coffee and butter poundage. Stock-taking with us means consideration of all the interests of our customers, suppliers and our employees.

Officers and directors of A&P are confronted by this tremendous responsibility every day. Careers, human personalities and scores of other "intangibles" are in the balance. Shelves are easily restocked; not so these other factors.

After a series of "stock-takings," with pardonable pride we announce that, effective this week, all of the some 4,500 full-time store clerks in this area will share with fellow employees from coast to coast what we believe is the first 5-DAY, 48-HOUR WEEK in the history of the retail food industry, labor contracts and other local variables permitting.

To our employees in this division whose untiring efforts and efficiency have made possible the position we enjoy in the food industry, and to hundreds of thousands of satisfied customers whose cooperation we respectively seek in making our new work schedule a success, we take this opportunity to reaffirm a few of the cardinal principles upon which A&P was founded 82 years ago by the late George Huntington Hartford, father of its present day owners.

The new work schedule is in line with a long-standing policy of A&P to give its employees the shortest working hours and the highest wages in the industry. It provides that wages of all employees will be the same as for the 52-hour week which has been in effect for several months.

It was in the cracker-barrel period a quarter-century ago that A&P boldly defied tradition and broke with the dawn-to-dusk hours of the grocery business by reducing the work week from 72 hours to 65.

Regardless of the highly-competitive nature of the food business, A&P has always felt work hours of retail food store employees were too long. It has constantly sought ways and means of reducing them so that A&P employees could enjoy more leisure and, to a greater degree, the warmth and comforts of home life with their families.

Our recent decision to further reduce employee working hours once again has paced the industry in raising the living standards of retail clerks. But the management is confident the continued efficient support of its employees will prove, as it has in the past, that better working conditions, fewer hours at the store and more at home, and higher wages will in no way endanger the savings we have always made available to our customers.

Wage increases and added compensation during the last year, coupled with a recent shortening of working hours, have given A&P employees the best average wages and the shortest general working hours in the industry—dramatic evidence that through efficient operation it is possible to achieve both low prices to consumers and good working conditions for employees. Wages of full-time clerks in the Central Western Division alone have risen approximately 65 per cent since 1934, at which time they exceeded appreciably the average for retail food store employees in all sections of the country.

During the last decade, A&P has effected a considerable reduction in working hours, inaugurated vacations with pay, provided free and additional group insurance, sick benefits, half-days off, hospitalization and compensation to employees joining the nation's armed forces as well as many and frequent increases in the wage scale.

The A&P management has always been keenly conscious of its responsibility to its employees, many of whom have devoted their working lives to its interests.

The company will continue to maintain the same interest in its employees' welfare it has always shown. Additional improvements in working conditions and benefits will continue as rapidly as increased efficiency in operation make them possible.

Stores Will Be Open Six Days A Week As Usual
But No Employee Will Work More Than Five

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—It was quite by accident that little Dorothy Dale of Kansas became a sorceress and overthrew the Wicked Witch of the East and freed the enslaved Munchkins. We wondered why Lucy Monroe, the "star spangled soprano," kept reminding us of all this and now it is all clear. Miss Monroe's mother, Anna Laughlin, was the first Dorothy Dale, in "The Wizard of Oz," with Fred Stone, and when the daughter made her musical comedy debut in "Louie the Fourteenth," in 1925, old-timers in the audience, this one among them, were moved to poignant and all but tearful memories by the winsome daughter's resemblance to her mother. Little Dorothy Dale was forever young, still in a land of enchantment—that was all there was to it.

The sorcery of Miss Monroe, opera, concert and radio star, is, unlike that of Dorothy Dale, quite premeditated, and involves a somewhat wider outreach in world liberation, but at a time when people are hoping that somebody will pass a miracle. She has become our national patriotic songster and song-leader, here and there and everywhere, and at the convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars at the Philadelphia Municipal stadium recently, she led the second "community sing," in a series of great public invocations of old-time patriotism throughout the country. More than 30,000 persons attended the first one at Washington several weeks ago.

The "star spangled" phase of Miss Monroe's career began in 1937 when she was made official soloist for the American Legion. This stirred in her deep patriotic fervor which found a response in her audiences everywhere. She is an eighth-generation American, trained as a singer entirely in this country. She made her Metropolitan debut in "La Boheme," in the spring season of 1937.

IN THE first World war, facing a hurry-up job of army morale-building, they slammed Irving Berlin into a corner and told him to dish up a few red hot morale songs, right away. Here are a couple of lines from the first one:

Broadway Is Out, Osborn In, to Buck Up Army Morale

"Don't you worry, mother darling, Although the skies are gray, For there's always a little bit of sunshine, In the Y—M—C—A."

This time they pick for the bucking-up job a eugenicist, population expert, conservationist, business researcher, corporation executive, art connoisseur, banker, and traffic expert—all in the one distinguished person of Frederick Osborn, of New York. The war department names him as head of its morale branch, with the temporary rank of brigadier general.

The appointment may or may not have something to do with the recent disquieting magazine articles about unrest in the new army. General Osborn has been occupied, as a dollar-a-year man in Washington, as a consultant in various endeavors and has been chairman of the army and navy committee on joint recreation. Hence it is possible that his appointment to the army post had been decided upon before the recent flare-up about discontent among the National Guard and selectees.

Whatever the appointment may mean, the choice of a civilian for this office sets a precedent. General Osborn replaces Brig. Gen. James A. Ulie. Furthermore there is disclosed here a trend away from showmanship as an old-line, dependable morale builder. Billy Rose of Broadway was back in New York a few weeks ago, after a session with the army morale-builders. He was all fussed up. "Nothing happened," he said. "They told me my blueprints were wonderful, the ideas were wonderful and I was wonderful. Then they said good-by. That's all I expect to happen."

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Food Shortage in Europe This Winter Means Thousands Are Doomed to Starve In Most of Areas Occupied by Nazis; U. S. Court Obtains Spy Confessions

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

What Price a Mad World!

The scene is a street in Uniondale, N. Y. The country is not at war. It is, however, arming for defense. Arming as never before. For the menace, it is charged, is world wide. And so an army pursuit plane leaves Mitchell field, New York, one day. A few minutes later it crashes in Uniondale street. You see the wreck still burning. You don't see three children burned whose clothes caught fire. The pilot of the plane bailed out.

INCIDENT:

U. S. S. Greer Attacked

When the news was flashed that a submarine attacked the U. S. destroyer Greer while the latter was en route to Iceland, the words "incident of war" leaped to the thoughts of many. Still, there were other "incidents" and they did not bring war. The Greer was not hit.

FOOD:

For Conquered

Most were agreed that the coming winter will find starvation walking the lands of conquered Europe. Germany took the bull by the horns by stating her position clearly. Not only, said Berlin, was Germany not going to feed the hungry in conquered Europe, but she felt at complete liberty to feed herself from the stores of conquered countries. If anybody was to feed conquered nations, let Britain and the United States, who control the seas, do it, declared Berlin.

As long as this was the declared Nazi policy, it was a certainty that the United States and Britain would do no feeding of these populations, for if the food was sent over, Germany felt "at liberty" to feed herself with it. The food would just be going into enemy hands and doing no good to the starving millions, it has been held.

Assuming that the Russians in conquered sections of the Ukraine had not been able to flee, but had been likely to burn their wheat, as seemed likely from general reports from the area from both sides, then there were a few million Ukrainians in danger of starvation within the shortest possible time. Nor were the people in France, Norway, and the low countries in any better condition, and with the exception of the Rumanians, the Hungarians and the Croats, reportedly fighting with the German arms, and the Finns, coming down from the north into Russia, most of Europe was going to be hungry.

I talked with a Russian refugee from Paris, who had been conquered by the Germans but escaped to this country by a devious route, and he told of the French people eating dogs, cats—any meat they could get their hands on.

Starvation already was stalking the land in August, he said, when he escaped via Lisbon.

Medical men said this hunger would not point definitely to revolt, however, for starving people soon lose their ability to fight or to resist even the inroads of their own hunger. Starvation carries with it only apathy, finally coma and then death, they declared.

JAPAN:

Full Mobilization

Ordering a full mobilization of his country, and at the same time, according to rumor, bidding President Roosevelt to visit him "in the Pacific on a Japanese battleship," Premier Prince Konoye of Japan seemed to be throwing a monkey wrench into what little hope remained that Nippon might be peace-bound.

The tempest, which these sources figured the Nazis were stirring up in Japan on the question of the Siberian port, was raging full blast when Konoye issued his order of complete mobilization of the country.

Konoye said "Japan is facing the greatest crisis in her history, and a total mobilization of the nation is necessary to overcome the emergency."

This statement was a far cry from his July 30 position that all Japan wanted was peace and prosperity in the Pacific, to "close out" the China affair, and to be friendly with the United States.

Dispatches from Washington said that diplomatic advances had been sent to Tokyo, probably the cause of Konoye's action, stating that this country was going to "stand firm" on its right to send lease-lend aid to Russia through Vladivostok, and to continue to send such aid as long as peaceful relations exist between Russia and Japan.

The same day Nichi Nichi, influential Japanese paper, defied the United States to "place any obstacle in Japan's rightful sea routes in the name of freedom of the seas." It continued:

"Japan will not hesitate to take steps against any obstacle such as this."

Complicating the issue at about the same time were two Russian seaplanes, carrying 47 Soviet airmen, flying over the Bering sea on their way to Washington to join the Russian mission to this nation's capital.

While Moscow disclaimed anything but a peaceful intent for this trip, another Japanese paper, the Times and Advertiser, took alarm at it, stating it was "an effort to establish a warplane service between the United States and Russia."

This newspaper said that Japan felt itself now encircled by the British and Americans on the south, through these countries' aid to China and the Dutch East Indies, and that any "effort to encircle Japan on the north" would be a matter for grave study.

SPIES:

First Trial

News readers turned their eyes to New York where 19 out of 33 members of an alleged German spy ring went on trial on charges of espionage.

The other 14 pleaded guilty, which made it improbable that the full story of their guilt would be told.

But the trial of the 19, prosecutors in the federal court said, "would unfold ramifications beyond belief." U. S. Attorney Kennedy said that much of the information in the possession of the prosecution had been obtained from those who had pleaded guilty.

One of these, Everett Minster Roeder, 47, pleaded guilty to "obtaining information and sending it to a foreign power." He worked in the plant of the Sperry Gyroscope company, makers of the famous secret bombsight of the United States army—one of the country's most prized war possessions.

But the airing of the secrets of the spy ring in open court promised news readers a delectable dish they were looking forward to. Sensational revelations were expected of fifth-column activities.

Get Going, Boys and Girls, Here She Comes!

This sequence of pictures is said to be among the finest ever made of a tornado. They were made by Mrs. Omar Shields as the writhing funnel-shaped cloud neared her home at Lincolnville, Kan. The first photo, taken from a distance of approximately three miles, shows the dark, twisting menace as it first struck the ground. The second picture (center) taken when the twister was but a mile away, shows the tornado at the height of its fury as it rushed towards Lincolnville. The third picture (right) was taken after the gale had leveled Lincolnville. The tornado is seen swerving from its path as it began to disintegrate. An instant after first picture was made the twister ripped through the Highland rural school and demolished it.

Start of 30-Mile Bike Marathon

A big field takes off in the 30-mile marathon of the National Amateur Bicycle Championships at Pasadena, Calif. The race saw Marvin Thompson (sixth from the right) of Chicago, finish second, after winning a three-mile sprint. Thompson won the senior crown with a total of 17 points. THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

By special arrangement with Collier's Weekly and Western Newspaper Union this newspaper presents in condensed form a series of four articles by President Roosevelt currently appearing in that magazine. The articles are taken from the President's newly written introductions to forthcoming volumes of his state papers. The first, condensed below, contains the President's own story of the fight for Supreme court reform.

THE FIGHT GOES ON "The Constitution Prevails"

By Franklin D. Roosevelt

(Copyright, 1941, by Franklin D. Roosevelt and by The Crowell-Collier Publishing Company.)

THIS was the year of the famous Supreme court fight—1937. This was the year which marked a definite turning point in the history of the United States. For, this was the year which was to determine whether the kind of government which the people of the United States had voted for in 1932, 1934, and 1936 was to be permitted by the Supreme court to function. If it had not been permitted to function as a democracy, it is my reasoned opinion that there would have been great danger that it might have been ultimately compelled to give way to some alien type of government—in the vain hope that the new form of government might be able to give the average men and women the protection and co-operative assistance which they had the right to expect.

For that reason I regard the effort initiated by the message on the Federal Judiciary of February 5, 1937, and the immediate results of it, as among the most important domestic achievements of my first two terms in office.

For two decades the Supreme court of the United States had been successfully thwarting the common will of the overwhelming majority of the American people; and had been diverting the functions and philosophy of government into channels which ran counter to the thought and objectives of progressive opinions throughout the modern civilized world.

The big choice before the American people in 1932 had been to determine whether they should continue the old type of administration or install a new one—definitely committed to the proposition that the federal government had not only the power, but the duty, to step in to meet with bold action the economic forces at play. The people had made their choice in 1932, and had emphasized it in 1934.

By the time of the election of 1936, however, it had become clear that this new concept of government and of its relation to economic and social problems was in danger of complete frustration. And the road ahead, for further, or even different, effective action to meet these problems, seemed to be completely blocked.

For a dead hand was being laid upon this whole program of progress—to stay it all. It was the hand of the Supreme Court of the United States.

The executive and legislative branches of the government had gone into action immediately in 1933. But they soon found that, athwart the path of progress along which they were moving, a majority of the Supreme Court of the United States was erecting a barrier which it was impossible to climb over, under or around. True, not everything had been destroyed by judicial fiat. But the whole question of the power of the federal government to handle these problems in an effective, decisive way had been placed not only in doubt, but in positive jeopardy.

In the struggle between the political power of the people as expressed by their representatives and the economic power of private property, the Supreme court, in the generation preceding the spring of 1937, seemed almost invariably to lean toward the latter.

NOTABLE EVENT

A series of articles by the President of the United States is a notable event in journalism. Seldom has any newspaper had an opportunity to publish anything under the name of any President. While the present series of articles is of historical rather than of current moment, it is a notable contribution both to history and journalism. This newspaper publishes the articles without bias as to the opinions contained in them.

And the judicial process was being more and more frequently exercised by the court, to lay low the efforts of government to meet the pressing needs of the times in which it was functioning. In the first 70 years of our constitutional history, the court invalidated only two acts of the congress; in the next 70 years it nullified 58. Between 1920 and 1930 it declared 19 federal statutes unconstitutional. To climax this growth, the court in the three years beginning in October, 1933, set aside 12 statutes, five of which occurred in a single court year, October, 1935.

I have already discussed in the Introduction to the 1935 volume, the more important Supreme court cases involving New Deal legislation. Recapitulation will show how hopeless it looked, by the time I started the so-called Supreme court fight on February 5, 1937, that any really effective legislative program could withstand the assaults being made by the judicial branch of the government.

The first major blow had come in January, 1935. Our efforts to remove chaos from the third largest industry in the country—petroleum—were struck down. The oil-producing states had been unable individually to meet the problems which came from overproduction of oil, wasteful competition, and consequent bankruptcy prices. Only the national government could save the industry. It proceeded to try to do it. Pursuant to congressional statute, it prescribed quotas of oil for each oil-producing state, and permitted each state to prescribe fair quotas for each well within its boundaries.

It then prohibited any interstate shipments of "hot oil," that is, oil produced in excess of these quotas. The states alone could themselves never have prevented these interstate shipments. The decision of the court, however, was that the statute was unconstitutional as a delegation of legislative power to the President.

This was the first time that a federal statute had ever been nullified on such a ground. But, unfortunately, it was not to be the last. This new doctrine—nowhere specifically mentioned in the Constitution—added much doubt and perplexity to framing all future legislation. Some delegation is, of course, necessary if government is to function at all. But neither from the words of the Constitution, nor from the mouth of the court, came any standards to fix the amount of delegation permissible.

The next decisions were on the question of the government's power to abrogate gold clauses in private and public contracts. These decisions, therefore, involved the entire control by the congress of the currency of the United States, and the whole gold and silver policy of the duly elected government. This policy was, to a great extent, the basis of the recovery program—the means used to bring order out of chaos in foreign exchange and domestic currency, and to remake the unfair debt structure then in existence. It can well be said that, in these decisions, the court was passing on the validity of the whole American economy, which had been accepted by the business and financial world almost universally since the enactment of the statute a year and a half earlier, and which was then in process of adaptation to the changing world economy.

The congressional action was sustained as to private contracts—but only by a five to four vote. It was held invalid as to public obligations; but by technical legalistic reasoning, the disastrous results of such a holding were avoided by a conclusion that no actual damage had been proved. Even as to this conclusion, four of the nine justices disagreed.

By the slim margin of one human being, this very foundation of our recovery had been upheld. What a slim thread on which to hang the fate of a nation!

Then came, all in one day, May 27, 1935, a unanimous decision that the Frazier-Lemke act, designed to help farm mortgagors, was unconstitutional; a unanimous decision that the President could not remove a federal trade commissioner, although in an earlier case in 1926, the court had stated that the Executive could remove any officer he could appoint, even one with quasi-judicial powers; and a unanimous decision that the National Industrial Recovery act was unconstitutional.

This last decision was the most far-reaching. It again invoked the shadowy doctrine of unlawful delegation of powers to the Executive. If the court had stopped here, its job would have been done, and the damage would not have been wholly irreparable. But it went farther, and held that the statute and the code-making power under it were not a valid exercise of the power of the congress to regulate interstate commerce. This broad, sweeping assertion immediately cast a long shadow of doubt over everything which we had been doing, and were expecting to do, for the benefit of U. S. citizens, through the federal control of interstate commerce.

This shadow of doubt became more definite and certain when the court, on January 6, 1936, by a vote of six to three, invalidated the agricultural adjustment program. The statute thus set aside had been enacted in 1933, and had been absolutely essential to the survival of agriculture in the panic of that year. The states alone were powerless by themselves to cope with the reduced farm income, with the prevailing bankruptcy prices for farm products with the burdensome surpluses and overproduction of farm commodities. If one state tried by itself, the adjoining state could nullify its efforts. Only the federal government could help—and in 1933 it did, almost immediately. The widespread, beneficial results of our farm program enacted to meet the agricultural crisis of 1933 are well-known now. Its benefits extended not alone to the farmer; they spread to all sections and to all groups throughout the land, by furnishing the farmers with purchasing power with which they could buy industrial products and manufactures of all kinds.

But all this effort was destroyed. The basis on which it was destroyed was even more disastrous in its implications than the immediate decision itself. It was apparently set aside on the chief ground, among others, that overproduction of farm commodities and all the dire results of such overproduction were not matters of general welfare but purely a local condition, of purely local concern to the respective states.

To remedy this condition, it was held, the congress could not pay farmers for voluntary crop limitation, under the general welfare clause of the Constitution—which by its terms would seem clearly to give the congress power to tax and spend for the general welfare. The three dissenting justices characterized the majority opinion as a "tortured construction of the Constitution," and indicated how far reaching would be the effects of this kind of decision—a decision which was not based upon legal reasoning at all, but upon political and economic bias.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for September 14

THE ETERNAL GOD, THE SOURCE OF HELP

LESSON TEXT—Revelation 7:9-17. GOLDEN TEXT—Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.—Revelation 4:8.

A look into the future is something that would interest most of us, and we have it in this lesson. We agree with Dr. Wilbur Smith that "this is an excellent opportunity to bring to the hearts of our pupils some of these divinely revealed truths which the world, in its mad rush today, so easily and tragically puts aside."

The portion of Revelation, chapter seven, which is before us comes immediately after a section dealing with Israel. The Church is not mentioned. The ones spoken of have come out of "the great tribulation" (as the Revised Version rightly translates it) and are evidently Gentiles who have come to believe in Christ during that time of unparalleled tribulation described in later chapters of this book.

Our lesson therefore deals with a specific time and a certain people in connection with an event yet to take place. But we find in this passage the description of the experiences of those who, like Christians of our day, triumphed through their saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. We may therefore here learn something of the future blessedness of the redeemed.

I. Saved Forever and Ever (vv. 9-12).

Salvation is a reality, and we are never going to be more certain of it than when we, like this multitude, stand in God's presence to praise Him for what He has done in our lives. It is real. Praise God!

Notice that there was an unnumbered multitude from all nations. The good tidings at the time of Christ's birth were for all people (Luke 2:10), and some from all nations respond. Note too that the hosts of the Lord are greater than we might at first suppose.

These redeemed ones had immediate access to God's throne, offering their praise direct. They were clad in the white robes of God's own purity and bore in their hands the palms of victory. They, with the angels, the elders (possibly representing the Church already caught up into heaven), and the living creatures (not "beasts" as in A.V. They are divine beings of highest character), ascribed a seven-fold praise to God "forever and ever. Amen." It is a glorious picture of completed redemption.

II. Serving Day and Night (vv. 13-15a).

It should be observed that even those who came through the great tribulation did not look to their own deeds or faithfulness to save them. Their white robes of righteousness were washed in "the blood of the Lamb" (v. 14).

Now that they had reached eternity through peril, toil and pain, they would (according to many folks' idea of heaven) sit down for an eternal rest and retirement. Not at all—they found their joy in serving their blessed Lord "night and day"; that is, without any weakness or exhaustion, without any failures or defeat.

III. Satisfied Throughout Eternity (vv. 15b-17).

To be covered by the "tabernacle" of God (whatever it may mean) surely betokens the perfect and constant protection of His own presence. Everything destructive and disturbing will be gone. There will be no lack of any good thing needed to satisfy every desire. There will be no thirst unquenched and no hunger unsatisfied (see similar descriptive passage in Rev. 21:3, 4).

The redeemed are said to be under the tender care of the Good Shepherd Himself; the Lamb (our Redeemer) who is in the midst of God's throne shall lead them, not beside "the still waters" of the Twenty-third Psalm, but "unto living fountains of water." Thus in the beauty of figurative speech, we are assured that God's provision for His children, the redeemed in Christ Jesus, will perfectly satisfy every need of soul and spirit. There is no such satisfaction this side of eternity, but we shall find it there.

Then too, there is to be no sorrow. God Himself is the guarantee that there shall be nothing in that blessed land to cause anyone to shed a tear. Think what that means! Think of the weeping of boys and girls, men and women, who in this world of hatred, sin and suffering, shed bitter tears of pain or sorrow. Well, it were almost enough to know that heaven is a place where there shall be no tears.

Remember that the promises of joyous completed redemption for these, the Gentile believers of the great tribulation, will be for all God's children, for us who believe in Christ. Reader, will you not join us today if you are still an unbeliever? Take Christ now as your Saviour.

Army Wives May 'Blitzkrieg' Sea Base Home Builders

WASHINGTON. — Army authorities here fidget nervously as they await first reports on how Mi-lady, meaning the Colonel's lady, takes to life in the garrisons of newly acquired Atlantic bases. Their flap pockets bulge with horseshoes, rabbit's foot, and other charm pieces and they piously cross their fingers and hope for the best.

Due to the fact that much standardization is essential and time a precious element, they have good grounds for apprehension, as it was not possible to consult with the wives of the officers before the O.K. was given to the architects to proceed. Officers responsible for the base construction work are bracing for the shock, when the women learn they will have no opportunity to comment on room arrangements, closets, decorating and other items so dear to their hearts.

At the age of 22 years Mrs. Thornton (Miss Jessie McLeod) was married in East Tawas to Julius Webster. Three sons and two daughters were born to them.

All of this followed closely after the close of the Civil War. Returning veterans were young men. Always they marched on July 4th. It was in the time when Pine was King. Mrs. Thornton, attractive, graceful, a young gentlewoman of fine Scottish ancestry, was one of Northeastern Michigan's princesses of the pines for which this great region was noted.

Today at the age of fourscore she is an alert and charming hostess, often ministering to the small needs of her neighbors, a trait of the early days when life or death might depend upon the attitude of one's neighbors—who in those days never failed. She delights in showing a polished dresleaf dining table of solid black walnut which is almost as old as the Constitution of the United States. She displays a family Bible in two volumes published in Haddington, England, in 1819. It is well preserved. Henry Ford's agents sought from her a photograph of the walnut table which she was unable to supply.

The story of Jessie McLeod-Thornton is one of a beautiful person and character, a pioneer of Iosco, a Christian gentlewoman, who has seen a great and epochal era arrive and then fade away. Gracious in manner, unobtrusive and kindly, she has contributed much to the well-being of domestic life in her community during these eighty extended years.

125,000 Trout Planted In National Forest

Forty-five thousand brook trout and seventy-five thousand rainbow trout are being planted this week by the United States Forest Service in trout streams on the Huron National Forest in Alcona, Iosco, Oscoda and Ogemaw counties.

These trout, which were hatched at the United States Fish & Wildlife Service hatchery at Northville, Michigan, were reared to a four to five inch size in the Forest Service Pine River Rearing ponds, near Glennie, and are now being distributed by trained CCC crews in various trout streams of this locality in order to increase the supply of trout for the growing army of fishermen. Five hundred to one thousand are planted per mile of stream, depending on the size, amount of food available, and the fishing pressure in each water.

The young trout are planted a few at a time in protected locations along the stream so that the young fish are reasonably secure from predators and are not overcrowded.

Fish planting by the U. S. Forest Service is carried on in cooperation with the State Conservation Department. Certain other designated streams on the Huron are planted by the State Conservation Department.
