British Open New Offensive in Libya In Attempt to Divert Axis Attention And Create Second Front for Russia; Demand for Strike Legislation Grows

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

BRITISH: Second Front

British tank units armed with U. S. military supplies opened what London termed a "second front" against the Axis powers when they opened a smashing drive into Libya in North Africa.

Berlin sources denied London's claims that (1) the attack was a surprise and (2) that it really amounted to a second front. Berlin said that what Russia had been hoping for was not a drive in Africa but a campaign on the continent of Europe so that Nazi forces would have to be diverted from their efforts against Leningrad, Moscow and the southern Russian fronts.

But Britain's campaign in Libya did take most world capitals by surprise and first reports indicated that 750,000 British troops aided by the R.A.F. had started their attempt to drive all Italian and German forces from North Africa.

First objective was the relieving of the besieged British forces at Tobruk, Libya. Here a British garrison had been holding out against the Nazis and Italians since mid-April.

STRIKE: 'Unsound Premise?'

The breakdown of negotiations between President Roosevelt and John L. Lewis over the "captive coal mine" strike had been followed by the actual walkout of some 53,000 miners, an immediate loss to the involved steel companies of close to a million tons of coal.

The walkout had come to cap a previous climax reached when the house was considering the neutrality act. This found the members openly deserting the administration, feeling that the President was too lax on labor, and was letting Lewis dictate to the White House.

The President, who long had kept thumbs down on anti-strike legislation, had stood his ground although the pressure on him to give way to the popular congressional demand for such a law became terrific.

Was his premise unsound?

He made strong statements on the issue, charging Lewis with an unsound premise in demanding a closed shop for the miners in captive pits simply because the Appalachian agreement in the coal industry had given the closed shop in commercial mines.

There had been evidence that the strike which began in the steel-owned mines would spread to commercial mines as well, on a "sympathy" basis.

The expected stories of violence and disorder appeared, but still there had been no immediate move to call out the troops, the only such maneuver being the mobilization of two companies of the Alabama home guard.

There also had been threats of sympathy strikes in steel plants, but one of these was called off on the plea of members of the United Mine Workers themselves, who urged the steel employees to stay on their jobs until the mine strike was settled.

REPERCUSSIONS: From Walkout

The expected aftermath of the actual strike, particularly in view of what had gone before in the way of pleas from the President and refusals from Lewis, was widespread excitement concerning the labor situation, particularly as strikes were threatening which would involve thousands of other workers in vital industries.

A railroad strike, which would call out 1,200,000 workers, for instance, was impending and mediation was having tough going.

Also there was a threat of a strike of the long distance telephone employees, and it required little imagination to conceive of how disastrous that would be to defense work.

To it all the President said, in his message to the C.I.O. convention which backed up his foreign policy: "We need guns, tanks, planes and ships and we must produce guns, tanks, planes and ships without delay and without interruption..."

SPEED: In Production

W. AVERILL HARRIMAN
Messenger of cheer.

W. Averill Harriman, American lease-lend expert, had arrived in the British capital, full of enthusiasm for American production and found himself overwhelmed by the speed British production had attained.

Having set himself to deliver messages of cheer to the British over the American pace of manufacture of war materials, Mr. Harriman instead declared he was beginning to worry lest the United States might fall behind Britain in this field where America was supposed to be pre-eminent.

Mr. Harriman said that United States' aid to Russia was proceeding well, but that again he felt the country was behind the scale at which the British have been sending aid.

CHANGE: In Leaders

The reply of the British government to demands that changes be made in the war leadership, which had frankly meant members of the war cabinet, came in the form of a change in generals, effective Christmas day.

Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, 58, a specialist in mechanized warfare, was to replace Gen. Sir John Dill as chief of the imperial general staff.

Dubbed a "wizard" in this form of warfare by his fellow officers, General Brooke had been commander of the home defense forces since July, 1940.

There was little significance to be found in the change except for the fact that General Brooke was two years younger than Dill. Sixty was described in the British press as a "normal retirement age" for an army general.

Brooke was a winner of the D.S.O. in the last war, is a steely eyed, dark mustached northern Irishman, and was commended for his brilliant direction of the Second corps during the battle of the Low Countries in 1940.

He is credited with being the inventor of the barrage map for artillery fire. He also is quoted with a statement that he would "welcome an invasion attempt" as it would afford an opportunity of "throwing the Nazis into the sea."

MISSION: To Soviet

A large number of American army officers soon will have a close-up view of the actual conduct of the German blitz against Russia.

It had been learned that a big military mission was being formed and will be sent to Archangel, Russia. Plans are being kept secret about the mission, but news was obtained that Maj. Gen. John N. Greely of Fort Sam Houston will head it.

The mission not only will observe the front, but will be actively in charge of the distribution of America's lease-lend aid to Russia, seeing that the goods and materials go to the proper spots to do the most good.

August 26 a similar mission was sent to China. The sending of one to Russia emphasized the close cooperation with the Soviet that was now America's full policy.

REWARD: Slaying Suspect

For the first time since the slayings of German soldiers of occupation started in France, the German authorities named a murder suspect, identified him, and offered unusual rewards for his capture.

The name, oddly of German sound and spelling, was that of Gilbert Brustlein, 22, and he had been described as "an exceptional dangerous evildoer."

Any informant of his whereabouts was offered not only large sums of money, but also the Nazis offered to set free any prisoner of war that the informant might name.

Brustlein, it had been reported, was the man responsible for the killing of Lieut. Col. Paul Friedrich Hotz, German commandant of the district of Nantes.

Thus, after 188 Frenchmen had paid with their lives for this crime, and the execution of another 100 had only been averted after there had been a worldwide condemnation of the procedure, even including adverse comments by one of Germany's partners in warfare.

Nevertheless the "terrorism" and the acts of sabotage against railroads and factories, and the setting afire of crops continued.

The reward for Brustlein did not require his capture, but any informant "which might be likely to lead to his apprehension."

Our Sky Fighters in the Pacific

Looking something like a football cheer leader, a signal officer aboard a U. S. navy aircraft carrier in the Pacific gives the "go" sign to a fighter plane (at right) about to take off from the flight deck. Photo at left was made from a plane which had just left the flight deck of an unnamed U. S. aircraft carrier somewhere in the Pacific. It gives you a bow-on view of the floating airdrome.

'Somewhere on the Eastern Front'

An ammunition dump in a forest somewhere behind the German lines in Russia is shown in lower picture. Men are stacking giant aerial bombs near a bomber base, whence Nazi planes go out to blast Russian positions. Above: Long lines of Russian war prisoners, carrying their worldly possessions in a sack, are being marched to an internment camp somewhere on the eastern front by the Nazi army.

Coal for Strike-Bound Yale

Picket at gates of powerhouse of Yale university, New Haven, Conn., moves aside when truckload of coal arrives for the strike-bound university. Maintenance employees at the university struck an hour before the state board of mediation was scheduled to meet with the C.I.O. to discuss settlement of union shop dispute. Inset: Phillip Murray, C.I.O. president who, on the same day resigned from the national defense mediation board because of an opinion rendered on "captive" coal mines of the bituminous coal industry.

'Plaything'

The German caption says that these are Russian children playing about the remains of a Red army bombing plane, shot down somewhere in occupied territory. The red star, Soviet insignia, may be seen on the fuselage. What strange "playthings" war has brought to children!

Giant Flying Ship Nears Completion

First of a fleet of giant four-engine flying ships built for American export airlines, non-stop Transatlantic air service, nearing completion at Vought-Sikorsky aircraft, Stratford, Conn. The planes have a top speed of 235 miles per hour and a maximum non-stop range in excess of 6,000 miles and accommodations for forty passengers.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK—There was once a hill-billy girl who walked 10 miles over the mountain to borrow a hammer. She said her pappy was figuring to Little Candles build himself Still Burn in a house next Darkening World fall. It was an act of faith, not to be cynically regarded, in spite of small beginnings and remote eventualities, and quite comparable to the brave hopes and contrivances of sundry men of good will today.

Paul Van Zeeland, former premier of Belgium, is one of them. He sees a world of decentralized power after the war, with small, autonomous states of economic and political groupings, associated in regional collaboration—diverse enough to allow a "localization of function" in world economy and compact enough to form a stable political equilibrium.

He presented his plan to the New York conference of the International Labor organization, and, simultaneously, there issued from the conference a proposal for a bloc of nations, comprising Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Greece, for post-war rebuilding and for collective defense.

M. Van Zeeland, holding both earned and honorary degrees from Princeton university, is widely and favorably known in this country both as a political philosopher and banking economist. He was a soldier in the World war, and in the ensuing years was an experimenter and innovator in financial theory and practice in a desperate effort to sidetrack a doom which he thought might well doom Western civilization.

Here in 1937, as unofficial envoy of Europe, he tried to sell the United States a bigger cut in the bank for international settlements, with the quite plausible idea that a freer flux of money throughout the world would cure bellicose nationalism. Nothing came of this, but M. Van Zeeland keeps on bunching.

The son of a prosperous merchant of Soignes, he was educated at Louvain and Princeton, returned to Belgium to practice law and won eminence as an economist and banker—a director of the Bank of Belgium and professor of law at the University of Louvain.

BACK in the days of the militant suffrage campaign, this reporter asked several of the leaders whether they intended to maintain

Militant Women a political solidarity of women after

Out for Equality getting the vote. They said they would do just that. The emphasis was on the effective pressure group, rather than on widely diffused social responsibility among women.

Considering that that is the history of pressure groups, of both genders—how to get power, rather than its social uses and implications—there is news interest in the simultaneous arrival of two distinguished women leaders of foreign countries each of whom has stressed social responsibility, along with the "liberation" and political education of women. They are Miss Caroline Haslett of Great Britain and Senora Ana Rosa S. de Martinez Gorrero of Argentina.

Miss Haslett is an engineer and adviser to the British ministry of labor, somewhat comparable in her career and achievements to our Lillian Moller Gilbreth of Montclair, N. J. She will study the participation of American women in the defense effort and will deliver some addresses on the technical and industrial mobilization of British women in the war.

She is president of the Women's Engineering society, director of the Electrical Association of Women, founder and editor of the Woman Engineer and the Electrical Handbook for Women. With many variants and on many occasions, she has said: "Women once asked for equality of opportunity. Now we ask for equality of responsibility."

The career of Senora De Martinez Gorrero has been a close parallel to that of Miss Haslett in its repeated stress on social responsibility. She came to Washington to attend the annual meeting of the Inter-American Commission of Women of which she is chairman. A spirited evangel of Western hemisphere solidarity against totalitarianism, she tells the meeting that the mission of women is to "rekindle the flame of a living faith in democracy." Senora De Martinez Gorrero is the wife of a wealthy cattleman and the mother of three children.

BUICK BUILDS FOR DEFENSE
Our assignment: Building Pratt & Whitney valve-in-head aircraft engines for defense use.

THE needs of the defense program decide how many Buicks we can build for you in 1942.

But there is no limit on how well we may build with the materials at our command.

So we invite you to look upon this car not as you would any ordinary new model, but as an unusual vehicle built to square with unusual times.

Check into the strength we have forged and hammered and wrought into the frame, the chassis, the drive.

Look into the everlasting comfort which is provided in soft, all-coil springs.

Dig into the engine, and see how resourceful engineering has stepped up the efficiency of valve-in-head design with Domite pistons and FIREBALL compression—how it also enables you to conserve fuel while actually getting more power through Buick's exclusive Compound Carburetion.

But it is of utmost importance now that Buick knew how to strengthen rods for heavier duties without increasing weight—that Buick found a way to oil-finish crankshaft journals so as to double bearing life under equal loads.

Little of this special ruggedness shows in the suave outward look of this trim and steady-rolling Buick—the beauty you see there is merely the garnish on the solid substance beneath.

But examine such structural details and we believe you'll quickly discover one fact:

While there may be a shortage of cars and of materials from which to make them, there's no shortage in stamina in the cars Buick builds.

And what is more important in any car these days?

"BETTER BUY BUICK"

PNEUMONIA ATTACKS PEOPLE OF ALL AGES

The sudden chill, followed by fever, rapid and painful breathing, a distressing cough with the raising of bloody sputum, and blueness of the lips, that mark the onset of a pneumonia, strike terror to the hearts of all. In one or another of its types, it attacks all ages. Until very recently, one-fourth to one-third of those who had it died.

From 1921 to '23, its annual death rate among males was 81.9; among females, 63.9 per 100,000. Beginning about five years ago, the death rate from pneumonia has fallen rapidly. As a result of the use of improved sera and of the development of rather specific chemical therapy for its treatment, its annual death rate had for 1938 to 1940 fallen to 38.8 per 100,000 for males and to 23.9 for females.

The number of cases of pneumonia has, however, not been reduced appreciably, yet the sting has been removed as the death rate has been more than cut in half.

Some progress seems to have been made in the prevention of pneumonia by the use of a vaccine but for the conquest of the pneumonias, we still depend on improvements in the methods of treatment.

Developments have been so rapid in this field during the last few years that it is not possible to state definitely what the most effective method of treatment is. A few doctors depend chiefly on the various types of specific sera. Others use both the sera and the sulpha drugs.

Oxygen therapy which was largely responsible for the improvement in the mortality statistics prior to 1935, is also of great value.

Fortunately the new preparations for the treatment of the pneumonias seem to be equally effective in all age groups. The sulpha remedies are, however, sufficiently toxic to make them unsafe for indiscriminate use, are classed as dangerous drugs and can be sold on prescription only. The sera must of course be given only under the supervision of a doctor.

As pneumonias are commonly complications of influenza, colds, or acute bronchitis or follow such upper respiratory infections, anyone who catches one of these relatively minor respiratory tract infections must watch his step. If he remains at home and takes care of himself and so avoids exposure to pneumococci while his resistance is down, he will be less apt to get pneumonia.

Be Careful of Colds.

Those who try to work, to go to school and to keep all social and business appointments when they have colds or bronchitis, who fight the infection instead of giving in to it, are much more apt to develop a complicating pneumonia. This is especially true if there has been some fever during the course of the upper respiratory tract infection. One should never go out after a cold until the temperature has been normal for from 24 to 48 hours.

The maintenance of good health by avoiding undue fatigue, by eating foods containing adequate amounts of vitamins, minerals and proteins and only enough calories to keep the weight within normal limits, makes one less likely to acquire the disease.

So while the rapid advances in our knowledge of methods for its successful treatment have greatly reduced the death rate from pneumonia, we must still depend on general principles for its prevention.

The groundwork of all happiness is health.—Leigh Hunt in the Death of Little Children.

Linked to the Law

On Rossel island in the South Pacific, says Collier's, a man arrested for a crime, even murder, has a handcuff attached to one of his wrists and is set free until his trial. Wearing a handcuff, the natives believe, links him with the law and prevents his escape.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.

● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we appear as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.
