Fine Planting Record at Camp Silver Creek

The boys at Silver Creek camp are justly proud of their fall planting record, having planted over a million and one-half trees on the Huron National Forest during the two month period.

Reducing this planting summary to dimensions which can be grasped by the layman, A. Don Anderson, project superintendent, said "The trees planted would be sufficient to provide seven rows of trees from Tawas to Detroit, with the trees in these rows planted only four feet apart."

SHOOT POWER LINE DOWN; FINED $200

Two Flint Deer Hunters Admit Guilt In Blackout

Herman L. Vandebek and Robert Muzzle, of Flint, paid fines of $100.00 each and costs, when brought before Justice H. E. Friedman Saturday.

The "blackout" occurred Sunday, November 16, when a broken insulator released a high tension wire about two miles from Cook site.

Last Friday Sheriff Moran and Trooper James McDonald located Vandebek and Muzzle at Flint. The two men readily admitted that they had been hunting near Cook site, and that a bullet fired by them had hit the insulator.

While a young child she came to Isosco county with her parents who settled at Oscoda, later they came to this community. On December 26, 1881, she was united in marriage to Fred W. Rollin who preceded her in death August 1, 1936.

Dear Santa Claus:

This year I want to ask you for something extra special. Please tell my Mommy to do her Christmas shopping early so we can have a little peace around our house.

She just remembered, too, that there wasn't enough time left to mail any presents to Uncle Ted and Auntie Amy or Cousin Lou.

And, Santa, she wasn't a bit nice to Daddy or me. Daddy had to help me get supper every night, for Mommy just went to bed with a cup of tea and a headache.

Your friend, GINNY.

Mrs. Mary A. Rollin, widow of the late Fred W. Rollin, well known pioneer resident of this city, passed away at six o'clock last Saturday morning at her home in this city.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Mechanized Troops Fight On in Libya As Nazis Show New Power in Russia; Arming of American Merchant Ships Indicates Change in Convoy Plans

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Above photo shows the first United States merchant ship as it was being armed under permission granted by terms of the recent congressional revision of the neutrality. Armed merchants are now permitted to pass through war zone to belligerent ports. This picture was taken at a yard near New York city as the gun was being lifted to the ship shown in the background.

JAPAN: Formula

As a Tokyo war cabinet framed its reply to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's "peace" formula reports began coming in from Shanghai telling of a southward movement of Japanese troops and war materials in a thrust at Thailand. Following a White House visit by Saburo Kurusu, special Nippon envoy, the state department announced that there were no further conversations scheduled with Japanese diplomats seeking an answer to the Far Eastern situation.

BRITISH: Libyan Push

Those who had expected a swift and continuous British victory in Libya, similar to the great push by General Wavell's army which swept the Italians back into Tripoli, were doomed to disappointment.

It was evident that there was plenty of fight in the German mechanized forces, even when apparently hopelessly trapped.

Yet Berlin had not been cheering over the situation. The British sweep at least temporarily had knocked the German-Italian formations back on their heels, and there was little evidence but that the Rommel army would be extremely fortunate to extricate itself from the trap even with heavy losses.

But there also was evidence that the British tanks, many of them of American manufacture, were unable to cope on better than even terms with the German machines.

The battle, once the two armies had made actual contact, was confusing in the extreme, and it showed in sharply etched lines just how possible it is for very small groups of mechanized forces to throw much larger bodies of men into complete confusion.

A rather large South African contingent was so knocked out by a German mechanized attack, even within the so-called iron ring of the British that it was practically disbanded, though some parts of it were able later to attach themselves to the New Zealand forces.

Yet this very Nazi group which had accomplished the maneuver later was shot into hurried retreat and practical dismemberment by a smaller group of British tanks. It seemed that the element of surprise and speed counted for far more in modern warfare than did numbers of men or machines.

Chief favorable report from Libya on the British part was that all reinforcements sought to be brought up by the Germans had failed except those furnished by air.

There was considerable hope among the British that this factor might decide the battle, perhaps very swiftly. Some Nazi tanks were found immobilized because of lack of fuel, and there were reports that the Germans were forced to fly supplies to their men by transport planes towing gliders.

But the British losses admittedly had been heavy, and only a complete victory would be regarded as reward for the expenditures of men and material in the sudden and dramatic drive.

STRIKES:

The sudden end of the coal strike had been followed swiftly by the announcement that the threatened strike of the long-distance telephone operators also had been removed from the picture by a reported $3,000,000 pay increase.

That there was to be a new trend in the picture was seen when President Roosevelt called together majority and minority leaders in congress, and gave them the "green light" as far as anti-strike legislation was concerned.

Entering Protest

Mathew Woll (left) and William Green, vice president and president, respectively, of A.F.L., pictured as they called on President Roosevelt to protest against anti-strike legislation. Bristling with defiance, Green stated that A.F.L. has been co-operating with the defense program but that now it is in a position of being penalized for "acts of some irresponsible leaders" outside his organization—presumably a dig at the C.I.O.

COMMANDOS: Make Sortie

The British Commandos tipped in these columns as about to become active again, worked a sortie on the Normandy coast, and returned with only one man wounded.

British sources felt that the official recognition by the Germans of the attack made by the group was the best proof that at least some of its objectives had been accomplished.

What made the landing on the French coast particularly notable, however, was the issuance of a statement of sharpest criticism against the British high command by a retired naval officer and hero of the last war, Admiral Keyes, founder and trainer of the Commandos.

He accused the staff of preventing the use of this body of men for several months when their use properly "might have changed the character of the entire war."

Also included was a brief description of the Commando which made the Normandy attack, men wearing black uniforms, their faces blacked with burnt cork, choosing a moonless night, armed with Tommy guns, Bren guns, knives and clubs, and sworn to achieve their objective no matter what the outcome.

They returned with only one man wounded slightly through the arm by a machine gun bullet. The Germans said they "had been repulsed with heavy losses."

EXPLOIT: By Nazis

Two Nazi airmen will go down in history as two of the most daring and imaginative of prisoners of war.

Escaping from a British prison camp, they got British flying coats, copied the buttons by carving them from wood, and covering them with tinfoil, and had them sewed onto their under uniforms.

They then walked brazenly into a British airdrome, announced they had been assigned to bomb Dutch airports, got into a bomber and took off. Knowing they needed more fuel to get to their destination, they landed again 100 miles away and asked for gasoline.

Suspicious airport attendants suggested they have a bath and a luncheon before taking off. The Nazis were reluctant to take off their clothing.

While they were in the bath their garments were examined and the false buttons discovered. They were arrested and sent back to the prison camp.

BULLITT: A New Job

William C. Bullitt, former ambassador to France, had been given a new and important assignment by the President, that of special envoy to the Libyan area, especially to study lease-lend needs.

The former ambassador's mission was to cover the entire Near East, including the Nile river area, the Red sea and possibly the Persian gulf.

The campaign in north Africa, President Roosevelt felt, is an important and severe testing ground for American-made arms, and the ultimate success of the effort there may depend on the rate at which replacements of damaged machines can be made.

The President was asked by the newsmen where Mr. Bullitt's headquarters would be, and where he could be reached. The President chuckled and said "In a plane."

Bullitt was to fly there and fly back and make his personal report on his observations to the President as soon as possible.

BRIEFS:

Paramaribo: American troops occupying Dutch Guiana in behalf of the government in exile, received a hearty and simple welcome. French press reports pointed to the incident as a forerunner of American attempts to occupy Dakar. The troops in Dutch Guiana were sent there to protect bauxite mines.

Chicago: Twenty-five hundred A. F. of L. freight handlers ended their strike here under terms of an agreement which gave them a 12½ cent an hour pay increase.

Assisted by regular firemen, air raid patrol workers are shown using rescue ladders in the "air raid" drill staged in Union Square, New York City. Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, national director of civilian defense, watched the boys douse "incendiaries" and rescue victims.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK—On the bestowal end of the Maria Moors Cabot Latin-American Journalism award, recently presented, is the 80-year-old Dr. Godfrey Lowell Cabot of Boston, also a generous contributor to democratic enterprise. For many years, he has been a steady ground-gainer against the disturbers and trouble-makers, not in political theory, but in his activities in the field of science and the humanities. He not only bankrolls progress, but helps it over the hurdle by his own resourcefulness and inventiveness—the true Yankee genius here.

South America ought to be particularly interested in Dr. Cabot's now successful and working scheme to bottle sunshine and keep it in the cellar, like jelly or preserves. His 1937 grant of $616,773 to Harvard university was a great help in storing solar energy and today, in Florida and other southern states, household hot-water rigs, fuelled by trapped sunshine are almost as common as oil burners up north.

The next year, Dr. Cabot gave a similar amount to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for the same purpose. His many contributions to the useful arts of peace, including his enthusiastic co-operation with aviation, may well be put down as an antidote to war. He learned to fly a seaplane in his late years and invented a system by which a plane can pick up fuel in flight.

He attended M.I.T. two years, finished at Harvard in 1882 and, after laying the foundation of his fortune manufacturing lamp black in Worthington, Pa., branched out in gases and carbides. He has always insisted that democracy, to survive, must plow a lot of its gains back into the business—which he steadily does. His Latin-American journalism awards are in honor of his late wife.

IN 1913, Carlos Davila covered murders and fires for El Mercurio of Santiago de Chile. He was a good reporter and told what happened, rather than what he thought ought to happen. Later, as president of Chile and ambassador to Washington, he maintained much of this same detachment.

One thing that he observed in 1936 was that the world was going to hell in a hand-basket unless there could be a successful collective "organization of peace." He also observed that it would be foolish to think that treaties would be an effective stopgap against the oncoming apocalypse. He was away out in front in urging bold affirmations and aggressive action, instead of pacifistic negotiations as the survival technique of democracy—in which he is a fervent believer.

One of the four Latin-American recipients of the Maria Moors Cabot prize in journalism, Dr. Davila has exemplified his faith in a militant and crusading democracy, which faith he expounds in the public functions attending the prize award: As editor of the Editors Press service, he is possibly the most important journalistic liaison in the new cultural and, to a degree, political entente between North and South America.

After becoming editor-in-chief of La Nacion, he came to Washington as ambassador, in 1928 at the age of 34. He became president of Chile in 1932, in a period of political upheaval, helped incline his country to its present liberal trend and landed back in the United States where his daughters were educated and which he considers the world's hope for democratic leadership. It is doubtful whether we have in South America any U. S. A. citizen who can match Dr. Davila's penetration of the mind and institutions of another country.

Living in New York off and on for quite a few years now, he mixes around casually, knows a lot of people, speaks quite a lot of our idiom and demonstrates hemisphere solidarity in his small, compact, alert person as few North or South Americans have ever done.

Bombs and bullets were sometimes an obligato to his rapid rise in Chilean statesmanship. He helped build the Chilean state and knows that democracy is not easily come by. He says we were soft, but are toughening up and getting back our "crusading spirit and stoic fiber."

THE FOUR HORSEMEN OF THE APOCALYPSE

The four horsemen of the apocalypse, war, hunger, disease and death, are again at large in the world. To insulate this country against their ravages is one of the most important tasks before us. If the enemies of freedom and democracy can be overcome without our active participation in the war, we will be spared the casualties of battle and bombings.

In the United States of America there has been very little starvation ("hollow hunger") yet few have been as well nourished as were almost all of the people from 50 to 100 years ago. This all too common "hidden hunger" is caused by the modern methods of producing, processing, preserving and preparing foods; by the fashions, fads, familial habits and advertisements that influence the selection of foods.

This "hidden hunger" is the cause not only of pellagra, scurvy, rickets and other recognizable deficiency diseases, but also of many sub-clinical deficiency states.

Nourishing Foods.
What are the foods that must be grown and distributed to the people if all are to be well nourished? Every child should have at least one quart of milk a day and every adult at least one pint or its equivalent in milk products. Milk used in cooking of foods is included in this ration. In addition the moderately active adult should have one egg, two ounces of meat, fish or fowl; three servings of vegetables, one of them leafy or yellow, including potatoes; two servings of fruit, one of them raw; 1 1/2 patties of butter; and sufficient other foods to bring the caloric value up to the 3,000.

In spite of the limited "hollow hunger" and the too prevalent "hidden hunger" and the many who have been ill-housed and ill-clad, the standard of health is here, the highest in the world. Many diseases such as cholera, typhus and yellow fevers and plague have been practically eliminated though they are still common and at times epidemic elsewhere.

Measles, mumps, chicken pox, meningitis, epidemic influenza and pneumonia frequently become epidemic in the camps. Tuberculosis, rheumatic fever, carious teeth and the sub-clinical and clinical deficiency states will continue to be common as long as many of the people are ill-housed and ill-clad and ill-fed.

The members of the medical and public health professions are aware of these and other dangers that arise when the "four horsemen" are at large. They are doing all in their power to combat these perils to health but must be "free men with fearless minds" and must have the full co-operation of all the people to accomplish their objectives—less disease, fewer deaths, better health, and greater happiness for all.

Serious Labor Situation Hinders Defense Effort

Members of Congress Also Demanding Facts On Charges That Big Business Plays Favorites in Defense Contracts.

By BAUKHAGE
National Farm and Home Hour Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

The explosion in the defense setup in Washington foreshadowed in these columns two weeks ago is about to take place. At least, as this is written, the fuse is being laid if not lighted. Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Representative Coffey of Washington are both demanding facts connected with charges that big business is playing favorites in the defense contracts.

But an equally amazing story lies behind the way labor has been dealt with in the defense program. Part of the facts have leaked out piecemeal, some are still very much under cover. Put together they make an amazing revelation of what was behind the President's delay in taking action in the captive mine strike and also how bungling all along the line forced the administration into the worst labor situation that has arisen since the defense program started.

The trouble began when it was decided to take the settlement of certain labor disputes out of the United States Conciliation Service and place it in the hands of the Defense Advisory commission with branches headed by William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman. Up to that time from 95 to 98 per cent of the labor disputes were settled by the Conciliation Service. But the remaining 2 to 5 per cent were slowing down defense and it was decided that Mr. Knudsen's staff representing industry and Mr. Hillman's staff representing labor could settle the recalcitrants. The theory was that Knudsen's men would crack down on industry and Hillman's on labor. But it didn't work that way. Each favored his own kind.

Mediation Board Founded
So the National Defense Mediation board was founded. All went along smoothly for awhile, although more and more criticism was heard that the board was exceedingly pro-labor and achieved settlements by the simple process of conceding to labor's demands.

Then the board made a mistake. It handed down one decision which opened the way for the United Mine Workers union shop demands which smashed the board, threatened the administration's foreign policy and created the worst labor crisis that the country has faced in many a long day.

The decision I refer to was in the case of the Bethlehem shipbuilding plant in San Francisco. The A. F. of L. union demanded a union shop, that is, that any man working for the company a certain period would have to join the union. The board granted this demand, thus forcing 20 per cent of the plant's non-union workers to join the A. F. of L. One member of the board, Cyrus Ching, representing industry, held out against the decision. He foresaw that it would create a precedent. When the decision was announced it was stated that it should not be taken as a precedent. This pious statement was like giving the baby a piece of candy "if he won't ask for another."

Once the A. F. of L. had received this concession the C.I.O. stepped up and said: "I want one, too." The result was the famous Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company case of Kearny, N. J., this time a shipyard on the East coast. Against the vote of the members of the National Mediation board representing industry, the union was given "maintenance - of - membership" which is a diluted union shop. The company refused to accept the decision and the navy took over.

Another Precedent
Here was another precedent, whether the board meant it or not. And it didn't take long for John Lewis to take advantage of it and put in his demand for the union shop in the captive coal mines. If he had planned it that way he could not have been provided a better opportunity to vent his ancient grievance against the President and set himself right in the middle of a national issue.

If the case of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding workers was good, Lewis' was far better. C.I.O. has a 95 per cent membership in the captive coal mines. But not the kind of a 95 per cent that most people think it. Not 5 per cent non-union workers scattered here and there in all the mines. But full 100 per cent membership in many mines and none perhaps in a very few small ones.

The National Defense Mediation board voted down Mr. Lewis' demand for a union shop and pandora's box flew open. One of the things that emerged was a highly paradoxical and highly painful situation. For the board, by taking this rare anti-labor step, had virtually left the operators in the position that if they had yielded in the later negotiations they would be in the position of supporting Lewis against the government. Still the situation might have been saved if something had not happened when the President called the operators and Lewis and Secretary-Treasurer Kennedy of the United Mine Workers to the White House.

When the men came in the President did what his labor advisors hoped he would. He made a brief appeal to both sides to get together and settle the question, since a strike must be avoided. If he had stopped there all might have been well. But he went on and said what Lewis felt was prejudicial to his case. This not only woke all the smouldering anger in the breast of John Lewis but when the committee of 200 C.I.O. advisors heard about it they were just as mad. His feeling was reflected when he turned down the President's later proposals.

President on the Spot
And the President was on the spot. Congress was insisting on strike legislation. Speaker Sam Rayburn had promised it. Others were demanding that the troops be sent into the captive mines at once. That, wiser heads who knew the temper of the miners believed, would mean a strike in all the mines and the army would have to beat its bayonets into pickaxes.

So the President paused, wrote a conciliatory letter to both parties. Meanwhile, congress could stew but the President was pretty sure that its members would not take the initiative of alienating the labor vote with primaries coming up in the spring and elections next fall. The prospective candidates for reelection wanted the onus to be placed squarely on him.

Whether the Conciliation service could have handled the captive mine strike as it is still handling the other 98 per cent of the cases of labor disputes no one can say. But it is clear that it was mishandled by the Mediation board and it is likewise clear that if critical congressmen finally crack down on Mr. Knudsen's dollar-a-year men for showing favors to business they have plenty of grounds for cracking down on Mr. Hillman's stalwarts who created the pattern of labor partisanship that came near severely injuring not only the defense program but the administration's foreign policy as well.

A Rip-Snortin' Texan Comes to Washington

Another Texan has come to Washington and the moment of his arrival was an historic one. We have had a lot of rip-snortin', ringtailed wildcats from all parts of the country, some human, and some not quite. Now we have something that will make even the Texas delegation in congress sit up and take notice, for this unwilling delegate from the Lone Star State is the wildest of them all.

He is a Texas long-horn. A steer with an eight-foot spread of horn. He is 12 years old. He weighs 1,200 pounds and he is admittedly wilder than anything in the zoo where he has been given the place of honor—right up near the entrance.

Most people do not know that the Texas long-horn is rarer than the buffalo which he once displaced on the Texas plains. He is a direct descendant from the wild cattle which the Spaniards brought to America when they came. Those cattle could walk endless miles to water. They were bred and developed to meet conditions that existed a hundred years ago in the great Southwest. Then water was piped and ditched into the great ranches and the fatter, easier going Herefords were introduced. The long-horn had the muscles and the endurance but he did have the meat, so he began to disappear.

George Stimpson, a Washington correspondent from the Middle West, who is also a correspondent for Texas papers and a keen devotee of America's flora and fauna, started out three years ago to get a Texas long-horn for the Washington zoo.

He had his troubles. He simply could not get hold of a real, simon-pure long-horn. There were semi-domesticated beasts but none of the real, wild-eyed, rip-roaring variety that have made the long-horn as much a symbol of America as the eagle itself.

Fir, Spruce, Pine Share Popularity At Christmas Time

Christmas trees aren't snobbish. They are willing to share their glory with trees of any "nationality," whether they be oak or spruce, elm or tamarak.

Although any kind of tree can be a "Christmas tree," most people feel that they must be evergreens. Even here there are many different kinds which can be obtained for this purpose.

Several different types of evergreens have been singled out as "favorites" for this important annual role. The "aristocrats" are the firs, mainly because of their fine pyramidal shapes, beautiful deep green color and soft fragrant needles which do not shed easily after the trees begin to dry.

These trees can usually be recognized by their flattened leaves which are arranged in two rows on the horizontal branches. Each needle is a shiny dark green above, and except for the prominent midrib is silvery white underneath.

The species of fir available vary with the locality, but the most popular kind offered in the East is the balsam fir, the bark of which yields the well-known Canada balsam used in medicines and perfumes. In the southern states the Fraser fir or the balsam, very similar to the northern balsam fir, is common on the coast the favorite is the handsome white or color fir.

Competing with the firs for Christmas popularity in the East are the spruces with their scattered four-sided needles, that seem to point in all directions. Spruces are often confused with pines, but they are easily distinguished by the fact that pine leaves always occur in groups of from two to five, while spruce leaves grow singly.

Frequently used for Christmas trees, if for no other reason than that it is much more widely distributed and much less valuable as lumber, is the small, scrubby jack pine and its numerous related species.

Three other trees are also used as Christmas trees in a few homes throughout the country. These are arborvitae, a familiar ornamental species with flattened, scaly foliage, the common red cedar or juniper, and the Douglas fir or Douglas spruce.

Gallackers Gather Christmas Greens
Christmas is coming, and a vast army of North Carolina "gallackers" are happy. Demand for their harvest of leaves, evergreen "sprays," trees and other decorative material is now at the year's peak, and the prices are firm.

"Gallacking" is the business of collecting galax leaves and other decorative greens. Thousands of persons make all or part of their living harvesting the leaves, tips, roots and herbs of the Appalachian region, and this is their busiest season.

Gallacking is a year-around occupation, because the leathery, durable galax and laucothoe leaves and other greens are put to constant use by florists and other decorators. The demand widens at Christmas to open a market for balsam and spruce trees, and for laurel twigs.

Most of the evergreen collecting in the mountains is done sporadically and according to the press of other work. Whole families move into the forests on sunny days, taking their "crop" home for sorting, grading and tying into bundles. Hundreds of buying agents purchase this material direct, shipping them to dealers.

Dozens of little backwoods shops are now springing into activity because of the seasonal demand for immediate processing. Here the native evergreens are turned into various wreaths, trees are packed and trimmed, and thousands of yards of "rope" are made from spruce, pine, laurel and hemlock.

Druids Credited Mistletoe
With Miraculous Virtues
Mistletoe, or "All-Heal" as it was called by the Druids, was thought to hold many miraculous virtues. The Scandinavians dedicated it to their goddess of love, Friga. This goddess of love is probably responsible for the custom of kissing under the mistletoe.

The superstitious believe that a maiden who is not kissed under the mistletoe will not marry during the coming year.

Barnum Had Plugged Holes And Was in the Money

When P. T. Barnum, as a young man, left Danbury, Conn., to make his way in the world, he left numerous unpaid bills behind him. To one creditor the imaginative showman said with great intensity: "I'll pay you what I owe you as soon as I get rich."

The other laughed and eyed the youth disdainfully.

"That will be when a sieve holds water," he jeered.

But in a few years the master showman was well on the road to success, and with great satisfaction wrote the man the following note:

"Dear Sir: I have fixed that sieve."

Following the business meeting, Ray Kessler, sixth grade teacher, gave a talk on "Organized Recreation in connection with Boy and Girl Scout Groups."

Because the December meeting conflicts with Christmas holiday preparations the next meeting will be held January 15.

Food is very important in the present emergency. Mr. Wickard says, "Food will win the war and write the peace." We in Isosco county have our share in this task to assume. Some ways in which we may accomplish this increased production of food and the percentage of increase our government is asking of Michigan, will be shown in the film "Food is Strength," at the Whittemore Home Economic and Agricultural classes at one o'clock, and at eight o'clock at the Hale P. T. A. meeting at the school house, Monday, December 8. Everyone interested is welcome. We wish to have a record attendance. Mrs. Rose F. Lake, field-woman.

INSTALLMENT FOURTEEN—The Story So Far

Laura Maguire, wife of happy-go-lucky Mike, editor and mayor of Covington, a mother of four children, hit by the depression:

Tom, who separates from his wife, Mary Etta, when she refuses to give up her secretary job, to join him in the smaller town after his real estate job peters out.

CHAPTER XX

Shirley took a quick step forward, then paused abruptly, her knees trembling as Jaid went on.

"I found a second-hand clothing man who relieved me of my dress suit and studs for thirty dollars. But I've nothing else to sell, Joe. And you gotta be reasonable. A hundred and fifty's all this hole is worth. There it is on the table. Take it like a good boy and call it a deal."

"No! No!" cried Joe violently. "Two hundred dollar! Not a cent less."

"But, Joe—"

"No can do."

"I'll pay you the rest so much a month."

"All cash, no credit."

"But, Joe, have a heart." Jaid's voice was hoarse. "You don't know what this means to me. There's a girl. I love her better than—she's everything to me. Everything! And I'm losing her because we can't get married. You say there's a living in this place. If a man can make good by sweating his heart out, I will. Maybe she'd laugh in my face if I asked her to move into a dump like this. But it's my only chance. For God's sake try to understand. I'm losing the girl I love and I can't do anything about it."

"Two hundred dollars," insisted Joe.

"And I thought I'd found the way out," muttered Jaid with something that was almost a sob.

"You have," whispered the girl in the doorway to the rear room.

"Shirley!" At first he could only stare. At her radiant eyes, her tremulous lips.

"I sold your ring, Jaid, for a hundred and twenty-five. Here it is. Give Joe his price and tell him to clear out."

She was in his arms. They clung together. "It will be hard work and everybody will laugh at us," he whispered.

"Do you mind?"

"I don't mind anything when I have you in my arms like this."

"Neither do I," whispered Shirley.

Again his laugh rang out exultantly. He added to the pile of bills on the counter.

"Pack up your duds and beat it, Joe. This place has changed hands."

They hung out a sign, "Closed Temporarily for Repairs" and visited the dollar store. They had some working capital, that precious seventy-five dollars above the cost of the place. Shirley selected pale yellow dishes and green glasses with a low crystal effect and glittery new pots and pans that had green handles. They bought yellow oilcloth by the yard for the table covers and window drapes. Shirley knew how to scallop them with the scissors. Jaid purchased paint and hammer and nails.

They were back at ten. They hired an ancient Negro with a moth-eaten mule to cart off loads of rubbish. They scoured the floors and Jaid painted the walls an apple green while Shirley did the chairs in ivory. They tacked up the yellow oilcloth drapes and stacked the new green glasses and yellow dishes behind the counter. Jaid solved the bedroom problem by turning the hose on it and leaving the sun and air to do the rest. Late in the afternoon they moved the furniture back inside and Shirley made up the bed with crisp new sheets and a green crepe spread.

"It doesn't look half bad," said Jaid with a throb of pride in his voice. "You aren't weakening, are you, darling?"

"No! No!" exclaimed the girl in his arms.

Again they clung together. They were going to be married at last, after four years! This was their wedding night. Shirley's heart throbbed deliciously against her side. Jaid's face blazed with fugitive color. They locked up the place and walked down the street. Jaid's coupe had gone the way of his dress studs. But he had a marriage license in his pocket. His hand tightened on her arm. And they laughed above the tumult in their pulses.

Of course it was nothing like their plans, that quiet ceremony in the old Methodist parsonage. There were no bridesmaids, no flower-strewn aisles, no music. It was very still in the old-fashioned parlor. But the windows were flung open to the garden. The air was soft and sweet with dusk, the old minister's voice very gentle and reverent.

"I do pronounce you man and wife."

Shirley's hand closed convulsively on Jaid's. He stooped and kissed her. The old minister's wife wiped her eyes. She wasn't always happy about the couples who came unexpectedly to be married under her roof. But this boy and girl had meant it when they swore to cherish each other always—in sickness or in health, for better or worse, till death did them part. They were wedded to each other's hearts, those two. It shone from their eyes.

Laura, with Lou's aid, was setting the table for dinner when Shirley and Jaid came in. Their faces were a revelation. They did not need to say anything.

"You're married! And you didn't tell me!"

For a minute Laura felt she couldn't bear it. She had tried never to fail her children. And yet Shirley, her beautiful sweet Shirley had married without a word. In someone else's house. Laura had not even been there, or Mike. It wasn't as if they would have disapproved. Laura was glad, terribly glad that Shirley was married. But it hurt that in the biggest hour of her life she had not come home to her mother and father, had not even told them.

And then with a glance at her daughter's radiant eyes, Laura swallowed her resentment.

"You see," said Shirley when they had explained about the sandwich shop, "Jaid's mother will be furious. But she can't be angry at you, Mother, because you knew nothing about it. No one is to blame but Jaid and me. And I'm afraid we Altogether dinner at the Maguire house was not a happy occasion that night. Laura was glad when they rose from the table. Mike had a Council meeting. He was gone when Laura finished in the kitchen. Tom, looking drawn and white, went up to his room and closed the door. His haggard face haunted Laura. But it had not invited confidences. He wanted to be alone. She was his mother and she ached with his pain. But she could do nothing. Another woman had his happiness in her keeping.

Laura, with Lou trailing after her like a shy dejected shadow, sat down in a big wicker chair on the veranda and leaned her head wearily back. For once Laura's natural buoyancy deserted her. She had a wild desire to indulge in a few well-salted tears, a luxury she rarely allowed herself. Shirley was married, a bride this night in a hamburger joint. The bride's mother always weeps. Laura felt in the humor to do a lot of that. Only there was Lou, huddled in the porch swing, small, dejected, pitiful. Laura felt like swearing. She couldn't let down even for a minute and be just a plain discouraged human. She knew Lou would most likely faint with fright if her hostess put on a sob act.

"It's a lovely evening, isn't it?" murmured Laura, trying for the hundredth time to thaw the irksome ice between herself and her guest.

"Yes," whispered Lou.

"At least with Shirley gone I needn't inflict you with the couch," murmured Laura, thinking with a pang that Shirley would never again share Kathleen's virginal bed.

Lou's small hands clenched. "I'm going tomorrow," she said huskily.

Laura glanced at her quickly. The girl's eyes met hers. They were very unhappy and very apologetic, Lou's big blue eyes.

"Alec shouldn't have brought me here," she said. "And I shouldn't have come. I knew you'd hate having me."

Laura flushed. "I don't hate having you, Lou. It's just that I've been a little at a loss fitting you in."

"I know," Lou said. "That's why I shouldn't have come. I don't belong here. I've never had anything or been anywhere. I'm poor white trash and you—you're lovely and so kind, but I—I'll go away tomorrow."

"Where will you go, my child?" asked Laura very gently.

Lou looked away. "I don't know."

Laura reached over and laid her hand on the girl's knee but Lou shrank away.

"You'll stay here till I can work something out for you," said Laura. "I would never forgive myself if I let you go otherwise. And neither would Alec."

"He's ashamed of me," Lou burst out in a smothered voice. "He took me to the Airdrome on a bet. But he doesn't like me. He's just sorry for me and kind like you."

Laura drew a breath of relief. So there was nothing between Alec and the girl except his instinct to befriend a friendless creature. Laura remembered how all his life Alec had brought in crippled sparrows and dogs with broken legs and insisted on repairing them.

"I can't believe Alec is ashamed of you, Lou," she said. "It doesn't matter that you are poor. So are we."

"But Alec's so wonderful!" breathed the girl with a little sob. "He's just as far above me as those stars up there, and always will be."

She got blindly to her feet and slipped into the house. Laura heard her going up the stairs, heard the bedroom door close behind her, and knew Lou was crying in that mute heartbreaking way she had. Of course she was in love with Alec. Laura sighed. And he hadn't come near her all day. Laura wondered where he was. She supposed he was helping Myra Boone massacre time as usual.

THE NATURE AND WORK OF THE CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 2:41-47; Ephesians 1:11-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it.—Ephesians 5:25.

The church, which is so much the center of life for Christians, is not as well understood as it should be. We have come to regard it as just one organization among many competing for the attention and interest of men, when it is really a divine, living organism established by Christ as His Body and representing Him in this world. Our lesson presents significant truth for both study and teaching. The church is

I. A Fellowship of Believers (Acts 2:41-47).

The church is made up of those who are saved (v. 47), those who have received the Word by faith and witnessed a good confession of their faith in Christ (v. 41). This is a fact to be remembered in a time when there is so much laxness in receiving members into the church. It is not a religious or social club. It is not a rallying place for those who wish to work for some economic, political, or social project. It is not a gathering of good people who wish to share common interests.

The church needs to cleanse its rolls of all unbelievers, all hangers-on, and get back to the purity which it had when only those were received who were manifestly "added" by the Lord (v. 47).

Such folk have many interests which bind them together in fellowship, devotion, and service. The early church was interested in sound doctrinal teaching (v. 42), an excellent thing. They had fellowship in prayer (v. 42); we need that too. They had gladness of heart (v. 46); do we not need a renewal of the song of the Lord in our midst?

They had such fervent love for each other that they established a communal system of sharing with one another, something which God had never commanded and which apparently failed with them, for it was later abandoned. But the point is that they really did love each other and thus showed their true discipleship (see lesson of last Sunday).

II. A Center of Christian Ministry (Eph. 4:11).

The church is God's chosen depository for spiritual gifts, among them being the special ministries mentioned here. The Holy Spirit calls men as He chooses. Blessed is the church which recognizes His choice of teachers, evangelists, preachers, and leaders and gives them liberty to serve the Lord in their calling.

It is God who calls men for these various activities in His vineyard. Self-appointed or man-chosen leaders and preachers are destined to fail, but God's men may be assured of His blessing and power.

III. A Place of Spiritual Growth (Eph. 4:12-16).

The purpose of the gifts of the Spirit is the edifying and building up of believers. A church should always be evangelistic in its efforts. The pastor should be a soul-winner, but essentially his ministry is to so edify and instruct believers that they may go out and win others to Christ.

Verses 13 to 16 tell us how this "perfecting of the saints" moves forward. There is unity of the faith and a growth in knowledge, a steadiness which keeps believers from being led astray by error or the cleverness of men. Thus kept from drifting, and being steadily enriched in knowledge of the truth, the believer grows up to spiritual manhood.

Do not miss the beauty and helpfulness of verses 15 and 16. Like the body "fitly framed and knit together," the church of Christ is to be a perfectly co-ordinated organism, every member performing its perfect service in building up the body in love for the glory of its Head—Christ.

This figure of the Church as the body of Christ and the working together of the members for the glory of the Head is further developed in I Corinthians 12, which the reader is urged to consider, especially verses 12 to 27.

Watching to See

With the Christian who takes the deep true view of his religion as a guide in all earthly matters, material or spiritual, there is never any feverish, blind-alley skirmishing in the face of threatened ill. He just waits vigilantly, trustfully, upon God, ready to do His will the moment it is made clear to him. "I will watch to see what He will say to me." Watching to see! In those telling words lies the whole secret of the thing that mystifies non-religious folk so completely—the inviolate calm and courage with which real Christians meet the worst adversities that can befall them in the world!

Farmer Needed No Help In Convincing Himself

Old Farmer Robinson broke his plow, so he decided to borrow one from Farmer Brown.

On the way to the Brown farm he started thinking: "I wonder if old Brown will let me take his plow."

As he got near to the neighboring farm he thought: "I doubt if he will lend me that plow."

Then as he knocked at the farmhouse door: "No, I'm certain he won't lend it to me."

Farmer Brown came to the door, smiled and asked, "Well, what can I do for you?"

"I just came to say," snorted Robinson, "that you can keep your bloomin' plow!"

Christmas givers who want to be sure their gift is well received have been turning more and more to cigarettes and smoking tobacco as gifts most appreciated by any smoker. Their welcome is always far greater than the modest cost involved. Naturally, Camels, as America's favorite cigarette, and Prince Albert, the world's largest-selling pipe tobacco, head the smoker's gift list. Camels have two gift packages—the carton of ten packages of "20's" specially wrapped, and a gay package containing four "flat fifties." Prince Albert is featured in the pound tin and the pound glass humidior, both handsomely Christmas packed.—Adv.

"HERE COMES CHARLIE"
Tonight is the last night of the Senior play "Here Comes Charlie" and many of you have not come to see this grand comedy. However, you can still see it tonight.

The proceeds of this play will be used for the senior trip next spring and the funds are badly needed. You really can't afford to miss this play, so we'll expect you at the auditorium tonight at 8:00 when the curtain rises on the first act of "Here Comes Charlie." Don't forget!!!

BAND NEWS
The band members and Mr. Polycutt wish to express their appreciation for the splendid support given their band concert. With an attendance like that of last Thursday evening, they feel that all the effort and hard work involved in preparing the concert was not in vain. Thanks to Tawas City for its fine support!

DEBATING
The debating team are working for their next debate which is scheduled for December 10 in the assembly of the high school. They will debate against Harrisville. Having given the first two debates on the negative side, they must now prepare to give the last two on the affirmative side.

Members of the team have been making trips to Bay City on Saturdays with Miss Sutton, to obtain material from the library there.

SHOP NEWS
The eighth grade boys are making bread boards, bird houses, door stops and bench hooks. The ninth graders are making nesting shelters and match boxes. There have been four more evenings made during the past week. Most of the high school boys are making end tables and magazine racks. A shelf for the sharpening tools of the shop has been made. About one dozen boys have made house numbers for their homes.

It is general repair that keeps the furniture looking new. Factories build furniture. Homes use and preserve furniture. Used furniture requires upkeep and repair. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. With care and repair, age beautifies furniture. Without care and repair, furniture becomes old and worn.

COMMERCIAL ROOM
The first year typing class have been trying for increased speed and also for accuracy. Jeanne Moeller and Philip Ross are leading the class with a rate of 28 words a minute with no errors. They take speed tests three times a week and from these tests they choose their best timed writing. They received their error charts on which they record all errors made.

SENIOR NEWS
The seniors have been practicing for their play. They went to different schools and gave skits Tuesday, December 2. Advertising, costumes, tickets, stage properties and other things that go with the putting on of a play are keeping them busy.

TENTH GRADE
The tenth grade bake sale was a success and we wish to thank all of you for helping us out. There were two tenth graders on the scholastic honor roll this month. They were Norma Westcott and Neil Libka. Perhaps some of you can make the citizenship honor roll next month.

NINTH GRADE
This week, the school is participating in a contest of selling basketball tickets. The ninth grade hasn't been doing so good. The home economics has changed the meal subject to embroidering, soap carving and other hobbies. Wednesday, November 26, the class made fruit cakes. They turned out swell. In English, the ninth graders have been studying speeches. Miss Sutton says they have some pretty good speakers in their class.

EIGHTH GRADE
The eighth graders are proud of the results of their ticket sale. They have sold $29.90 worth of season tickets for the basketball team. This sale is not finished but in the end we hope to have 100%.

We are putting on a play for the next meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association December 11. Our English teacher, Miss Ricker, read us a Christmas story and we converted it into a play. The title is "We Heard The Bells on Christmas Eve."

In the near future we are making Christmas candies for home economics. If they turn out well we suspect we shall have to keep them under lock and key.

THIRD and FOURTH GRADES
Donna Bublitz has returned after several days' absence caused by the mumps. We are glad to have her here again.

Our club had election of officers last Friday. Frances Yanna was elected president; Stanley Brown, vice-president; and Frank Toms secretary. We change officers each month so that more pupils may have a chance to be an officer.

The girls and boys from our room who attended the band concert last Thursday evening said that it was an excellent entertainment. Our boys have two football teams which are very busy now days. The greatest trouble they seem to have is repairing cuts and bruises.

SECOND GRADE
We have new coat hooks downstairs for our coats. Our monitors help us to be careful to walk downstairs instead of running. Jim Minard brought us a Michigan road map. Dale Martindale, Agnes Martin, John McMullen and Walter Long were absent this week. Arnold Drumm and Glen Grove have moved away. Shirley Allen and James Minard had perfect spelling papers this week.

Mysterious Disease Menace to Cattle

For more than 30 years cattle and sheep in the upper third of the Lower Peninsula in Michigan have starved and in some cases died while facing apparently good quality hay and grain during winter stall feeding periods, yet some of the secret now seems to be solved with research by four men at Michigan State college.

They announce that what has been known as "Grand Traverse" or "Lake Shore disease" gives way to remarkable recovery in sheep and dairy and beef cattle when minute quantities of a cobalt salt are provided.

Indications are that the disease is essentially due to a cobalt deficiency, which leads to loss of appetite and a low concentration of red coloring in the blood of the animal. Corn and hay grown on farms in the affected areas has a lower cobalt content than that grown on farms in unaffected areas.

Preliminary recommendations have been made to farmers in this area. Tests indicate the suggestions are correct. Affected cattle or sheep are given access to a mixture containing one ounce of cobalt sulphate mixed well with 100 pounds of salt. In extreme cases, injections of the cobalt salt have been made by veterinarians.

Symptoms include general emaciation, incoordination in gait, and depraved appetite. The condition is termed "salt sick" in Florida, "neck ail" in Massachusetts and "coast disease" in South Australia.

According to County Agent W. L. Finley the disease is definitely known to have played havoc in some sections of Iosco county last year. He warns farmer to watch their herds and flocks for the above symptoms and if suspicion arises discuss the ailment with their veterinarian before it is too late. Probably heaviest losses during the last year were experienced at the old Saradella farm in Oscoda township where several head of both cattle and sheep actually died due to the lack of this food mineral, cobalt.

Lighter-Weight Bottles
There is a trend toward lighter-weight bottles in the glass container industry.
