Jap Dreams of Easy Conquest Fade As U. S. Aid to Australia Grows; President's 'Victory Plan' Depends On Successful Offensive in Pacific

VICTORY: For Navy Forces

Almost coincident with the arrival of General MacArthur in Australia the first great word of an offensive against the Japanese had been received, and the U. S. had hailed a great naval victory in New Guinea.

First reports had been of the sinking of 23 Japanese vessels, a dozen of them vessels of war, and though few details were announced, it was obvious that it had been a battle of the air rather than of the sea.

Important in the first dispatches had been the word that they were "island based" forces of the United States and Australia, and this had been comforting in the extreme, for until this point America had not known that there were any island bases left to us in the Pacific theater with the exception of Hawaii.

It had been learned, of course, that the Japanese, after taking Wake island, had later abandoned it, but few believed that our own navy had moved back in there.

Aside from speculation about where the base was, a fact the Japs would like dearly to know, the victory itself was important. In the battle of Java sea we had lost one heavy cruiser ourselves, and our allies had lost four.

In this battle the Japs had lost two heavy cruisers, one light cruiser and other ships of war of lesser import. The rest of the ships sent to the bottom or put out of action were freighters, some of them being used as troop transports.

OFFENSIVE: Aussies' Viewpoint

Almost coincident with the arrival of General MacArthur, his chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Sutherland, and the rest of his party, official Australia began to talk and think in terms of an offensive against the Japs on a scale hitherto not dreamed of.

As to the Japanese themselves, after having previously reported, weeks ago, MacArthur's flight from the battlefield to Corregidor and other untrue stories about the commander, they were considerably taken aback by the news that the commander was in Australia.

They did just what President Roosevelt had predicted, and declared that General MacArthur had "run away" from the Philippines, and then went on to say that "American resistance in Australia would be short-lived."

PRIME MINISTER JOHN CURTIN
"American aid is doubly welcome."

The resistance in Bataan had stood as a monument to Japanese falsehoods and false hopes of easy conquest, and some believed that MacArthur's assignment to Australia might give the Japanese pause in going through with the invasion.

At any rate, Prime Minister Curtin had said:

"It is most gratifying that the American troops are now here in force. Their numbers are most substantial."

"We are the base from which to strike at the enemy."

"American aid is doubly welcome because Britain could not carry the burden of the Pacific while engaged in a life and death struggle with Germany and Italy."

"Our nation must demonstrate to history that it has the moral and physical stature to stand up and trade punches with the enemy not for six weeks or months but year after year if necessary, giving odds, but fighting the enemy to a standstill."

"If we fail ourselves, nothing will save us. We have to show ourselves worthy of aid."

His sentiments were echoed all over Australia, and in the halls of congress at Washington, senate and house leaders joined in. Chairman Snyder of military affairs said, after the applause had died down:

"I hope from now on many of our 'swivel chair generals' will remember that on this day many things are under way which will be just as pleasing to them, when they find out about them, as is the change in General MacArthur's status."

MAC ARTHUR: And His Job

The sending of MacArthur from Bataan, where the man in the street had regarded him as a sort of "dead hero"—certainly a hero, but condemned, apparently to either death or a Japanese prison—to Australia, where he could start with a clean page in the defense of that continent had been greeted with wild enthusiasm from one side of the nation to the other.

Paeans of praise had resounded not only in the press but upon the streets, and the general view was that the whole move had been made cleverly, because while General MacArthur had given his Bataan job into the hands of General Wainwright, he was still technically in command, as the Philippines were placed under his jurisdiction.

No less was the delight felt by the Australians, who had demanded MacArthur to lead them. The American public regarded it as significant that the move had been ordered in late February, but had not been carried out until mid-March, thus showing that MacArthur was not rushing after personal honors or safety, and that he would not leave his command until he had been given time to arrange things to suit him. MacArthur was accompanied by his chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Richard K. Sutherland, and by Brig. Gen. Harold H. George of the air corps.

Considerable editorial praise had been heaped on Mrs. MacArthur when it was learned that she and her son had not chosen the comparative safety of Manila and internment, but had chosen to go to the battlefield with the general, and then to take the long and perilous plane journey to Australia with him.

As to the general's job in Australia, it was the toughest of the whole war. That was conceded on all sides. For he was taking on his shoulders the command in an area where all had been defeat thus far.

The Japs were figured to attempt the Australia blitz, despite the fact that they had learned that American troops "in force" were on the continent and that more were on the way.

The Australian occupation was so vital to the Japanese, however, that they were apparently ready to risk the showdown battle that would surely ensue.

There was little question but that Australia was poorly prepared, for Prime Minister John Curtin had been stressing that since the beginning. But with considerable American aid it was hoped that the defense could be carried out successfully.

Strategically, however, MacArthur's job was even bigger than defending Australia, for if President Roosevelt's victory plan were to be carried out, it was up to him not only to defend Australia successfully, but to be "in at the death" of the Japanese hopes in the Pacific, and to carry on, from Australia as a hop-off spot, the successful offensive that would, at least so America hoped, knock the Nipponese out of the war.

MacArthur, on his arrival, had found more than just American troops on the ground, he had found an air force which was carrying out his own ideas on Bataan—striking often and fiercely at the enemy before he arrived on the scene.

There were few who believed MacArthur, even by a miracle of strategy, could prevent Japanese landings on Australia, even as he was unable to prevent them on the Philippines. But many hoped that he could and would find some method of striking such forces such terrific blows as to drive them into the sea and prevent their organization into any sort of a successful land army.

PRODUCTION:

A demand by congress that WPB Director Nelson report formally on production had followed some apportioned output which, in turn, had come to light after a vital resignation within Nelson's group.

Nelson himself had come out with a fighting statement, threatening coolly to "knock down" any individuals or groups that showed any tendency to interfere with the smoothness of national war production.

RUSSIANS: Clamp Down

The Russians, having carried out their continued offensive during the coldest of the winter, had clamped down on several important points, including Kharkov and Vyazma, and claimed that 200,000 German troops were trapped in the latter area.

The Germans also, the Reds had asserted, were steadily giving ground in the Kharkov region, dubbed the Pittsburgh of Russia.

There also had been considerable favorable military activity in the district of Smolensk, which for a time, rumor had it, had been Hitler's personal headquarters.

In the meantime the Russians had taken over the suburbs of Kharkov and had started what they described as the fiercest sort of house to house fighting.

In each of these encounters the Russians had been able to mass well-trained troops in superior numbers over the Germans, and in the Staraya Russa sector they had asserted that the Germans were refusing to yield, and were gradually being exterminated.

Even in the southwest, where Hitler was supposed to have ordered a counter-offensive, the Russian machine was still moving ahead, Moscow had reported.

SUICIDE: Confirmed

A roundabout method of confirming the suicide of General Homma in the Philippines by the hara-kiri method was discovered by Carlos Barry, a Chilean newspaper man stationed in Tokyo.

He sent a dispatch to the newspaper El Chileno in which he said the suicide of "General Masaharu Homma for failure to destroy the American and Filipino defense forces had been confirmed."

He did not say that Tokyo confirmed it, but added: "The confirmation came through the fact that his successor General Tomoyuki Yamashita was announced officially."

This, under the rules of the Samurai, can have only one meaning. Homma would not have been permitted to live through this disgrace. He must, according to the code, retire to his room and retire himself with a sword.

LOTTERY: Number Three

Washington's selective service heads, aided and abetted by draft boards from coast to coast swung into the task of classifying and calling up 9,000,000 men, drawn in the third draft lottery.

The word had gone out that not all would be drawn for military service, but that many might be drafted into defense industry.

In the nine millions of men between the 20-44 age limits were many of the older men, more settled—the heads of businesses and owners of property, and their reaction to the draft had been just as enthusiastic as had that of the younger men in the previous groups.

In this lottery, as in those previous, there had been some small errors, two numbers having turned up missing, 6,342 and 2,069, and one being duplicated, 2,885.

MISCELLANY:

Washington: In order to improve the war spirit of the people generally, President Roosevelt had said that he would like to see more military parades. "It is time to wave the flag," the President said.

Moscow: The Russian press dismissed with one paragraph the news that General MacArthur had been made supreme commander in Australia.

Montevideo: Street rioting followed the announcement that an Axis submarine had sunk a ship of Uruguayan registry.

Boulder City, Nev.: Forest rangers were searching for two "swarthy men" who had fired on a soldier-scoutmaster and his troop of Boy Scouts, out for a hike.

San Francisco: All machinery was in progress for the moving of 90,000 Japanese from the Coast to interior points. Bargain hunters were having field days in Chinatown, as the Jap stores, having to move, were selling out at terrific reductions.

Nothing Stops War Pipe Line Gang

When a petroleum pipe line is being built to supply war industries with the precious fluid, nothing stops the pipe line gangs. Right: A rock ditch being blasted at a river crossing somewhere in the Carolinas. Left: A gang prepares to bend a 12-inch pipe in the mountain area of Alabama. Bending the pipe to conform with the terrain is tough work. The completed Plantation Pipe line, from Baton Rouge, La., to Bremen, Ga., and Greensboro, N. C., has some 1,200 miles of pipe.

Argentina's Bumper Crop—of Bayonets

Argentina is keeping her military machine well oiled, for she knows she will not be spared from attack whenever the Axis powers deem it advisable. The perfect marching order of these marines shows a high potential of precision and fighting power. Inset: A few of Argentina's modern warships. Fortunately Argentina has more than a token navy to safeguard her shores.

Their Job to Hide Armament Plants

In the piping times of peace, these stylists and expert technicians devised luxury lines for new passenger cars. Now they are working in a large Detroit automobile company's camouflage section, developing means of disguising important buildings so enemy airmen cannot spot them. It's a tough job to hide a 10 or 20-acre munitions plant, but these boys can do it. Above, they are working on a diorama, changing the appearance of the entire countryside.

Chinese Cadets Feted in Phoenix

Chinese cadets are receiving advanced flying instruction under the expert tutelage of American air instructors. In honor of these cadets, residents of Phoenix, Ariz., gave a party for the boys at the Central Baptist church. Photo shows Capt. ## WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—Anthony J. Dimond, Alaska's delegate to congress since 1933, has a chance to say "You should have listened to me," and Asked Alaskan Air Bases; Settles for Road Linking U. S. He begged long and earnestly for air and army bases in Alaska, didn't get what he wanted, and now settles peacefully for that road linking Alaska, Canada and the U. S. A., work upon which has just been begun by U. S. army troops. Mr. Dimond did the best he could.

It was on March 28, 1938, that Mr. Dimond managed, by considerable effort to fudge a $2,000,000 allowance for an Alaskan air base into the $447,000,000 war department appropriation bill. Congress made mincemeat of the bill and Mr. Dimond's $2,000,000 was an almost unnoticed casualty. He said that if a plane wandered up that way it couldn't find any place to roost over night and reminded congress that it might not be a good idea to leave matters of national defense to the budget bureau. The year before congress had killed a $10,000,000 allowance for an army base in Alaska.

Mr. Dimond was a Palatine Bridge, N. Y., school teacher who showed off to Alaska in the gold rush of 1904, and in Valdez, a settlement of about 300 persons, has been pretty much owner and operator of his little principality. For about eight years he was engaged in mining and prospecting, and in 1913 took up the practice of law. He was a mayor of Valdez and member of the Alaska Territorial senate from 1923 to 1931. In 1916, he married a Valdez girl and they have three children.

Mr. Dimond is a born joiner and mixer—an Elk, Eagle, Moose and what not. He is satisfied with his friendly wilderness and long has insisted that it is worth defending—aside from its importance as a stepping-stone to Canada and the U.S.A.

IT MIGHT have been better if we had sent Japan xylophones instead of scrap-iron. An eight-foot xylophone, made in Chicago, diverted Yoichi Hiraka from his career as an economist and brought him to New York for the edification of a 7:45 a. m. radio audience, for nearly 12 years.

The Pearl Harbor bombs blew him out of his job and now Mayor LaGuardia, his Kew Gardens neighbors, members of the New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra and sundry others are urging NBC to restore his inspiring early morning tinkle to the program. It is more than that, however. He was the first man to arrange Bach, Handel, Haydn and others of the great masters for the xylophone.

His friends now cite his aid to the U.S.O., the Red Cross, the Y.M.C.A., the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind and other Patriotic and welfare organizations. It is apparent that the petition in his behalf must fail. NBC officials think there are too many listeners who remember Pearl Harbor.

While studying economics at the University of Keio, in Tokyo, he played the little two-foot mokkin, the Japanese version of the xylophone. He heard an American phonograph xylophone record and borrowed $500 from his sister for the eight-foot specially designed Chicago job, big enough for the classical romp of his dreams.

With such a lure at hand, it must have been hard for him to keep his mind on his work, but, in 1930, he was graduated in economics, with honors.

The western musical classics fascinated him. He walked out on the "dismal science," and persuaded his merchant father to buy him a boat ticket to New York. He landed with only his xylophone, and faced the necessity of hastily converting his talent into food and lodging.

His neighbors' petition cites him as "an American in loyalty and devotion, in thought and in deed." We once saw him work—a small, lithe man whose body seemed both fluid and precise as he swept the instrument board with bewildering swiftness or hovered over it with a gentle caress. A few shiploads of big Chicago xylophones might have turned many Japanese economists, or militarists—they are all one these days—into more cooperative world citizens. Also they might have awakened somebody at Pearl Harbor that fateful morning.

Wanna Buy a Horse?

A few months ago this question, if addressed to an automobile owner, would bring a laugh. Today the horse has the laugh. Out in the West and the Middle West horses are still plentiful, but in the East they are scarce. And yet there is a firm of horse auctioneers operating in Greater New York—Potters and Greenberg—where private sales on horses are held every day of the week and special auctions on Fridays. Photos show you what goes on.

This might pass for a picture of the Axis high command, but actually it is one of some of the steeds waiting to be auctioned off.

FIRST-AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger B. Whitman

Roger B. Whitman—WNU Service

MISPLACING HOUSE ON LOT
A HOME owner is much troubled because his new house is not squarely in the center of his plot. The house is the first one in a section, and the building of a second house two plots away has made him realize that his own house is 14 inches closer to one side of his plot than it should be. He is greatly worried about it, for he feels that the appearance is so affected that the value of the property is reduced. He feels so strongly about it that he is considering selling, although this would not be to his advantage. As a matter of fact, I think that his worry is most unnecessary, for I doubt if an outsider would notice that the house is misplaced. Actually, the only difference that it might make would be in the location of the driveway. As far as appearances are concerned, foundation planting and landscaping could completely conceal the error in the location of the house. To many people, in fact, having the house off-center on the lot would be an advantage and an added attraction, as getting away from too much symmetry. Other methods for curing what the owner considers a defect would be to add a bay-window, or what would be still simpler, to make a paved terrace beside the house, shielded by a permanent awning.

Rusting Furnace.

Question: My house is heated by hot water, with a rectangular boiler and an oil burner. I have had trouble with rusting of the smokepipe and of the furnace, and am taking your advice to take down the smokepipe during the idle seasons, and to spray with oil. If I do this, is it also necessary to leave the boiler doors open?

Answer: Rusting during an idle season is due to the fact that chimney draft draws cellar air through the boiler openings. The air is damp, and there is heavy condensation if it is forced to go through leaks around closed doors. Taking down the smokepipe cuts off the draft and stops this cause of condensation. Even so, I should leave all the doors open in addition to taking down the smokepipe. The whole boiler will remain at the temperature of the cellar air, and condensation will be at a minimum.

Concrete Porch Floor.

Question: Would you advise putting concrete over an open deck porch of a brick veneer house? Would it be lasting?

Answer: Although you do not say so, I take it that the present floor is wood. In that case, a concrete covering would not be satisfactory; for if it is thick enough to have the necessary strength, it will be too heavy for the supports. You will do better to cover the floor with deck canvas, which you can get from a dealer in building material, or with a kind of insulating board impregnated with asphalt, to be had at a lumber yard.

Chromium Plate.

Question: I have chromium plated faucets in my new bathroom, and to keep them looking new I used metal polish. To my sorrow this took off the silvery surface. How can I restore it?

Answer: Chromium plate can be kept clean and polished with no more than a cloth wet with warm water. The polish that you used removed the plating. You can have it restored in a plating shop; any garage can tell you of one in your neighborhood. For this, the faucets must be removed, of course, so the simplest procedure is to have the whole job done by a plumber.

Peeling Bricks.

Question: Bricks under stone window sills are peeling. What is the cause and cure?

Answer: Leakage around the window and frame is keeping the bricks soaked with water. To stop the trouble you should close all leaks, which are likely to be in the joint between the window frame and the outside wall.

Killing Trees.

Question: What can be done to kill a diseased tree, so that near-by trees will not be harmed? I do not want to go to the expense of cutting it down.

Answer: A tree can be killed by cutting through the bark to the wood, forming a ring around the trunk. This will prevent the flow of sap. The tree will then die quickly.

Swollen Door.

Question: In rainy weather, our front door swells so that it cannot be closed. It is made of birch, 2 1/2 inches thick. Can this be corrected?

Answer: In a stretch of clear weather, when the door is thoroughly dry, put paint or varnish on all of the edges, for those are the places where moisture soaks in and causes all the trouble.

Not a gift horse. Deftly the buyer takes the horse's tongue in one hand and examines the teeth, to determine age.

Horses have many foot ailments, and seasoned horse traders know all about them and just what to look for.

Frequently a piece of harness goes on the block instead of a horse. Here you see a halter going to a bidder for three dollars. Auctioneer Greenberg is knocking it down.

This man has taken on the difficult job of selling a horse to the auctioneer.

When bidding lags on a horse the animal is made to strut his stuff, as shown here.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ONE of the most important films ever made in this country will be released shortly to motion picture houses throughout the nation. It is "Hidden Hunger," starring Walter Brennan, presented by the Federal Security Agency as part of the National Nutrition Program. A simple story of better eating for sound health, it's not just a picture with a message; it has a lively and amusing plot, it's highly entertaining, an excellent, two-reel production made by experienced producers, directors and actors.

Jean Bennett has revived the old-fashioned "quilting bee" on the set of her current Columbia film, "Highly Irregular"; she's organized 65 elderly ladies into a group to knit and sew for men in the service. The gossip's modern, Hollywood variety!

William Lundigan thinks his lucky breaks began when he left Syracuse university in his second year there to take a job in a radio station. An RKO executive whom he interviewed on the air told him he ought to be in pictures; when a New

WILLIAM LUNDIGAN

York friend fixed up a test for Universal, he just had to stand and talk as he did for radio. He made pictures for Universal and Warner Bros., then was signed by Metro—and had the luck to land in the starmaking "Andy Hardy" series, as the new boy friend of Andy's sister in "The Courtship of Andy Hardy."

Jean Arthur was in a scene with Ronald Colman and Cary Grant for "Three's a Crowd"; three soldiers who'd been watching rehearsals had just left. Suddenly an overhead "spider"—a multiple electric switch box—blew out, showering them with sparks. Jean promptly scuttled away. "Where you going?" shouted Director George Stevens. "After those soldiers," she replied, "to put out the bomb!"

Lucille Norman, blonde and 19, went east to go west. She left Steele City, Neb., to win a place as radio singer over a Cincinnati station while trying out there for the Metropolitan Opera auditions she was spotted by a movie talent scout, and now she's in Hollywood.

Johnny Johnston, young singing guitarist of radio fame, was picked by Paramount for a co-starring role with Ellen Drew in "Priorities of 1942"; it's a musical film with the activities of aircraft plant workers for its story background.

Recently before "Henry Aldrich" went on the air a petition was circulated asking the right to smoke backstage. Just before the broadcast it was slipped into "Mr. Aldrich's" script for safekeeping, and he very nearly read it over the mike.

Note for baseball fans: The Brooklyn Dodgers didn't want that picture about them to be called "Them Lovely Bums," so remember that it will be offered to the public as "It Happened in Flatbush" unless somebody thinks up a better title.

Just before the war department forbade the use of rubber latex Paramount got under the wire, so you'll see a three-foot latex balloon as a prop for Martha O'Driscoll's bubble dancer scene in "My Heart Belongs to Daddy."

Al Pearce of the air waves is interested in adding Marie Blake to his radio gang. She's Jeannette MacDonald's sister, and you probably saw her somewhere in the "Dr. Kildare" series of pictures—she played the telephone operator.

ODDS AND ENDS—Bill Stern, radio sports announcer, will be seen in the Lou Gehrig film, "The Pride of the Yankees" . . . A fruit dealer who knows and admires Edward G. Robinson spells the "Big Town" star's name out in fruit on his stand . . . A Royal Air Force officer lent Franchot Tone the uniform Tone wears in Columbia's "Highly Irregular" . . . Rosalind Russell, who'll star in "My Sister Eileen," is singing for the boys on her tour of army camps in the Southwest, and they love it . . . Jack Benny has signed a new two-year contract, which will carry him into his tenth year with the same sponsor, and his twelfth as a broadcaster.

New Loading Coils Save Copper and Nickel for War

A LOADING COIL is a doughnut-shaped contrivance of copper wire wound over a ring of alloy containing nickel. Its job is to give your voice an electrical "push" as you talk over a telephone line.

There is about one loading coil for every mile of an average Long Distance telephone circuit in cable—nearly half a million in Michigan alone, besides about 200,000 on local circuits.

For years the Bell System's research has been making these coils progressively smaller, yet keeping them as effective as the larger coils. Now, as a further step to help meet the shortage of war materials, loading coils have been developed that use only about half as much copper and nickel as the former type. The pictures indicate the latest reduction in size.

From this single source, in 1942, the Bell System will save an estimated 40,000 pounds of each of those needed metals.

In spite of material shortages that make it increasingly difficult to satisfy all service requests as promptly as in the past, Michigan Bell is confidently determined that every war need will be met.

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

W-N-U-RELEASE

INSTALLMENT ELEVEN
THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, convinced by her lawyer, John Colt, that she has a claim to the island estate of her grandfather, Garrett Waterson, comes with Colt to Honolulu and meets Tonga Dick or Richard Wayne, a member of the Wayne family which has been in control of the property since her grandfather's disappearance. Dick's uncle, James Wayne, manager of this island, Alakoa, dies from overwork and Dick attempts to work out a compromise settlement of Karen's claim. This is refused. Meantime Karen has learned that both Colt and Dick are in love with her. On the island, one day, Dick reveals that Karen is not an heiress at all, but that Garrett Waterson is alive and is on his way to Alakoa. He and Karen discuss what attitude the old man may take toward her claim to the island.
 Now continue with the story.

"But you don't know that you've lost the island."

"I've been perfectly sincere. Dick, you just have to believe that!"
 "I do. But Garrett Waterson may very possibly believe, by this time, that the Waynes took unfair advantage of him when they bought Alakoa."
 Karen seemed strangely shaken. "Then nothing is settled at all, is it?"
 "Nothing. The key has passed into other hands—that's all."
 "And this fight has to go on, and on—"
 "Are you tired of this fight, Karen?"
 "Something's changed it for me. I don't know what it is. At first it seemed such a glorious adventure; it promised to open up a whole new world. But that's all gone. I don't know what's the matter. Somehow I'm not sure, any more, that I want Alakoa."
 "Neither," said Dick Wayne, "do I. You know that."
 She turned a little to look at him; and the young stars made her face a pale oval, mysterious and lovely, but her expression he could not see. "You don't want your island?" she asked quietly.
 He took her hands, and made her turn toward him. "You know what I want. You've known it all the time."
 "But—the island—your brothers—"
 "Haven't you?" he asked.
 "There isn't—there isn't any way—"
 "Haven't you?" Dick insisted.
 The resistance seemed to go out of her; she swayed forward, and rested her cheek against his chest. "Yes," she admitted; "I know."
 "There isn't any time to lose," Dick said. "I've had a radio from Waterson. He'll drop anchor in less than two hours. By that time it will be too late."
 "What are we going to do?"
 "We're going to run out on this show. We'll be married in Hilo. I don't care what happens after that. They can go on with this infernal squabble until they eat each other's last shirt."
 "It's impossible! I can't!"
 "Why? If you're still going to let John Colt—"
 "Don't you see what position I'm put in? Do you think I've so little pride that I'd try to seize your island, and fail, and then edge in by marrying the very man I tried to bankrupt—"
 "I don't believe you care any more about the island than I do."
 "You don't now. But some day you'd remember, and perhaps begin to doubt; and nothing could ever be—"
 "But you don't know that you've lost the island. Nobody will know until Garrett Waterson shows his hand."
 "Dick—if my grandfather takes the island, I'll marry you then, if you want me to."
 "No," he said. He released his hold, and she moved a few inches away from him. "No," he repeated. "I'm not going to marry an island either, Karen."
 "Then you see—it's hopeless, Dick."
 "In another hour or so it will be completely. This is the last time we'll ever have any choice. Because now we don't know. Right now one of us is as good as broke—but we don't know which. Perhaps neither one of us will ever have anything in the world again."
 "Maybe," Karen said, "that would be the best of all. Only—we can't make that choice either, Dick. Neither one of us has any choice whatever, in anything, it seems."
 Dick said gravely, "The choice is yours, Karen; and you have to make it now, tonight—before I leave this boat."
 "What is it you want me to do?"
 "I want you to come with me, now, on the Holokai. I'll throw the Holokai over the bar, and run to sea."
 "If only," Karen said, "I had a little time—"
 "Time? Good Lord, Karen!"
 "Even a few hours—"
 He saw that she was frightened; and he was pleased, because it told him that she wanted to come with him.
 "You have a few hours," he said; "you have days, if you want. I'll stay at sea as long as you want me to. Or, when we've talked it over, I'll put back. Or I'll take you any place you want to go. But now we've got to get out of here—quickly—if there's ever going to be any hope at all."
 She turned away from him and her hands gripped the rail hard; her eyes were on the Holokai, a dark tall shape, with her trucks showing against the stars. The moments ticked by, and the outrigger glided past twice, standing on and off, and it seemed to Dick that she was never going to speak.

 He picked Karen up lightly and lowered her over the rail into the moving outrigger; then himself vaulted the rail in time to light upon the canoe's stern as it swept past. The little craft reeled, and the canoe's whole outrigger lifted out of the water; then she steadied, and her sail flapped lazily as she came about and pointed for the Holokai.
 Karen stood beside Dick Wayne as he piloted the Holokai to sea. He was handling the wheel himself, as he always did in these reefs; but even while he was narrowly back-sighting his markers, the sense of her presence there had hold of every part of him, changing the meaning of the vessel, and the harbor, and the night. The salt spray that he loved had never, in all his life, been so welcome in the air he breathed.
 The Chinese mess boy poked himself into the wheelhouse and plucked at Dick's sleeve. He was in a white mess jacket, this time.
 "Captain Tonga, something is wrong, I think. Somebody is in your cabin, I think. You send somebody in cabin?"
 "Well, who is it?"
 "Captain Tonga, the door is fastened."
 "Oh, bunk! What's the matter with you. Seeing akua?"
 "No, Captain. Somebody is—"
 "Go tell the cook to make dinner for two—and make it good. Get out of here and do as I tell you."
 The big combers that lashed over the snag-toothed coral were close on the Holokai's bows, but Dick seemed sure of his way. He fired the Holokai at the channel like a shot; the big Diesel had small range of speed, so that under power the Holokai went full out or not at all. He spoke from the side of his mouth to the Japanese who served as first officer, bosun, and copper-smith.
 "Inyashi, get the night glasses out of my bunk."
 "Yes, Captain."
 "We'll very likely sight the Sarah coming in—that's your grandfather's other ship," Dick said to Karen, raising his voice over the roar of the shoals. "She's a good little vessel, but much slower than this. She must have started north no more than twelve hours after the Holokai, and you see how late she is. Did you know that 'Sarah' was your grandmother's name?"
 The Japanese quartermaster was back, bursting into the wheelhouse in the quick nervous way that marked everything he did. "Captain Dick, I cannot get the night glasses—you have left your cabin locked."
 "Locked? You're crazy—a the door's stuck, that's all. Give it a boot."
 Inyashi showed extreme embarrassment. "Captain Dick, I did. The panel split. I think it was poor wood, but I can fix it. It is locked—it is locked, I know."
 "Let it go. I'll send up the glasses. Get a Kanaka boy for the wheel—we'll be in clear water in a minute. Set a course for Kalae; watch for a ship—any ship—and report all vessels to me."
 "Yes, Captain!"
 "That last is for you," Dick told Karen. The wheel was kicking crazily, but he let go with one hand, and pulled her close against him. "I thought you might want to see the ship that's bringing him in, out of the south."
 "Out of the south," Karen repeated; "out of the sea, out of the past itself . . ."
 "You'll like him, Karen; I promise you that."
 "You and I have so much to talk about," Karen said. "I'm terribly eager to know more about my grandfather. I want to know where he's been, and what he does, and how he lives. I want to know what he's really like, and if you think he'll approve of me."
 "And," Dick said, "why he disappeared, and hid his name?"
 "Did he run from something, Dick?"
 "Only from his own pride. I understand it; I understand it well.

But it's a little hard to explain to quiet people, leading quiet lives."
 "Hard to explain?" she repeated.
 "No, not to me! Even from what little I know of him, I do understand. As if it had been myself!"
 He marveled a little at that. This utterly feminine girl, with her finely chiseled face and gentle small voice, could show flashes of something strangely reminiscent of Garrett Waterson; as if the mountainous and craggy fires of the old adventurer had perpetuated themselves in a thread of fine steel.
 "I can tell you most of the rest," he said. "I—"
 Dick suddenly spun the wheel hard over, and the Holokai yawed as the reef-rollers struck her in the bottle-neck of the entrance; then she steadied upon the easy swell of the open sea.
 Inyashi stepped forward, and Dick turned over his shoulder. "We can go below now, Karen. I don't think a whisky soda would do us any harm, do you? I have some of the same Scotch the British embassies use. And something to eat?"
 Below, he moved briskly about the cabin, switching on more lights. "This door back here in the stern is to my own cabin—pretty small, but the only one there is. It's yours while you want it; I can sleep on the settee. But—"
 It suddenly occurred to him that this was the first moment in which they had been alone since he had persuaded her to leave the Seal. He turned and faced her, his eyes gay. A hundred voyages among the islands of little known seas had brought him less adventure than he believed belonged to him tonight.
 For a moment she met his eyes and her smile was shy, misty; he had never seen her in this mood before, with her defenses lowered and the keen brilliance of her glance shadowed and softened. "But—but—" He forgot what he had meant to say.
 "But what?" she mocked him. "If you mean to suggest—"
 She stopped. Abruptly the smile left her face, and the softness, to be replaced by astonishment.
 After his first split second of surprise he saw that she was looking past him, and he whirled.
 The door of the inner cabin had opened, and Lilua was standing there—Lilua, with half-clad body and blazing eyes.
 She stood very straight, swaying with effortless balance to the lift and tilt of the sea as only the Polynesians can. She was wearing nothing but a wrapped skirt of tapa cloth—not even a lei, or a blossom in her hair to account for the odor of ginger flowers that came subtly into the cabin from the doorway where she stood.
 She spoke straight to Karen; it was as if she could not see Dick at all.
 "What are you doing here?"
 There was appalling silence, filled with the rush of the sea along the ports. "Lilua, this is ridiculous—it's fantastic!"
 "You stay out of this, Dick! It isn't your fault—it's this woman. You can't understand her because you're a man, but I understand her. What she can't steal she'll destroy. She'll eat the soul out of your body, Dick—and then go back to John Colt!"
 "Be still!" Dick roared.
 "I'll not be still! . . . Send her back to her own man. She has no right here. This is not her place!"
 Lilua was speaking to Karen, ignoring him again. Her voice was quiet, in comparison to his; yet somehow it cut his down, so that he stopped.
 "This is my man. You know that. Why don't you go back to your own? Do you have to have everything—the land, and the sea, and the fish, and all the men in the world?"
 For a moment a terrible exasperation half blinded Dick Wayne. Something that was worth more to him than the breath in his teeth had been altogether his, until Lilua appeared. She had come abruptly out of no place—unaccountable in her physical presence, but even more unaccountable as a factor in his life. Search his memory as he might, he could not recall ever having summoned her—not by so much as the trailing of his eyes.

Make a Delicious Spinach Ring With Leftovers (See Recipe Below)

Conserving Food

As the quotation "Food will win the war and write the peace" gains prominence, homemakers all over the country are beginning to realize that they must do their part in making the most of the food at hand.
 Your first step in conserving food will come when you plan your menus and shopping. If you are not in this habit, then start now to practice the true economy that comes only with this kind of planning. You will rarely have bits of leftovers that are difficult to fit into the menu if you provide a place for them.
 Your second step in conserving food will come in proper storage. No matter how careful a shopper you are, if you do not provide the facilities that keep food from becoming decayed, wilted, or soiled, you will not have done your part.

BUDGET

Refrigerator Storage.
 Milk, eggs, butter, cheese, meat, opened canned food, or leftover food, require the cold of a refrigerator to keep them in good condition.
 Fresh fruits and vegetables also retain their freshness and moistness in the icebox. Place them, after they are washed and carefully dried on the racks or in their special compartments. Lettuce and other greens keep best when stored in damp cloth bags.

Storing in the Cellar.
 You are extremely fortunate if you have a cellar for storing purposes. Now with home and defense gardening gaining in popularity, you may have vegetables to keep for later use. If the cellar tends to become warm, leave the windows open at night, closed during the day.
Cook to Save Food Values.
 Poor cooking may cause the biggest kind of waste in food. Perhaps you roast your meats at too high a temperature and cause them to shrink more than necessary. Be careful to watch temperatures and time in roasting or cooking meats. Meat, cheese, eggs and milk are all protein foods which should never be cooked too long or at too high temperature since this causes the protein fibers to become tough.

Measuring water carefully when cooking vegetables so you do not have to throw any out and lose valuable minerals and vitamins into the kitchen drain. As soon as food is cooked serve it immediately as standing or overcooking causes loss in food value.
 Cook with covers as much as possible except in the case of green vegetables which lose their coloring if covered. Starting the cooking of vegetables with boiling water will cut down cooking time.
 Our recipe of the day is a good example of how you can combine several kinds of leftovers into one delicious main dish. The spinach may have been left over from yesterday's dinner, the shrimp from a luncheon you gave, and the bread crumbs rolled from stale bread.

*Spinach Ring With Shrimp Sauce. (Serves 6 to 8)

- 3 cups cooked spinach
  - 1 teaspoon grated onion
  - 1 tablespoon butter
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
  - 1/2 teaspoon paprika
  - 2 eggs
  - 3 cups cream sauce
  - 1/2 cup fine bread crumbs
  - 1 to 2 cups whole canned shrimp
- Chop spinach fine and add grated onion which has been browned in butter. Season with salt, black pepper, paprika and add the well beaten yolks. Mix the spinach with 1/2 cups cream sauce and fold in well beaten whites. Place in a buttered ring mold and dust with bread crumbs. Place in a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate (35-degree) oven for 20 minutes. Loosen by pressing spinach from side of mold. Heat shrimp with remaining white sauce and serve in center of spinach ring.

Speed of Golf Balls

The United States Golf association has recently ruled no golf ball can have a velocity greater than 250 feet per second. The association has so ruled to eliminate the threat of causing present golf courses to become obsolete because of the far-traveling golf ball. The velocity of the balls can be regulated by controlling pressure on the core of the ball and tightness of the rubber wrappings.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.

● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in this feeling, this advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Two brothers, in appearance very much alike, were being registered at school.

"Are you two twins?" asked the teacher, smiling at the boys.

"No, ma'am, we're not," replied the lads in unison.

"You certainly look alike," returned the schoolmarm.

Then as the brothers filled in their forms, the teacher noted that they gave the same birthday.

"But you said you weren't twins, yet you have the same birthday?" she queried.

"That's right, we aren't twins," replied one, "we're what's here of triplets."

Tawas City School Notes

KINDERGARTEN—FIRST GRADE

Miss Brosi returned to school on Tuesday. Mrs. Ruckle has been taking her place.

We read another book. It was about some children who made a dollhouse. They made furniture for the dollhouse.

We wanted to make some doll furniture too. We asked Mr. Carlson for scraps of wood from the high school shop. He gave us a coping saw too.

Miss Brosi bought a hammer and some nails.

We made a table, a bed, a cupboard, two chairs and a davenport. Shirley brought two tablecloths for the table.

Miss Brosi made two little quilts. They are pink and blue.

Tuesday was Patricia Montgomery's seventh birthday. Clarence Lossing was seven last week.

THIRD and FOURTH GRADES

Those who had 100% on Friday's spelling tests were Frank Toms and Stanley Brown in the fourth grade, and Dorothy Freil, Jerry Grack, Carolyn Galliker, Wanda Fowler and Bruce Leslie in the third grade.

We are sorry to have Frank Toms and Delano Myles absent because of measles.

For several days our clock did not go, but Mr. Anschuetz has fixed it so now we know what time it is.

We are all enjoying some large maps that were in a case on our cupboard. It is interesting to find where the different people live.

UPPER GRADES

There will be no school on Good Friday. Rev. Metcalf will talk to the students on Thursday at a general assembly.

Miss Freegard, from the state board of control for vocational education, spent Tuesday in the home economics room.

The Ninth Annual Crippled Children's Stamp sale has started in our school. The children will sell them and sixth grades will sell them.

Hugh Prescott will celebrate his birthday on Wednesday by giving a birthday party at the Hotel Barnes. The basket ball team and the men teachers from the high school will be his guests.

The commercial students typed addresses on 750 cards announcing the smelt run. The beginners did much of this work.

COMMERCIAL ROOM

The home economics girls are still busy sewing and expect to be for some time. The fitting of patterns has been learned and the placing of the patterns on material has been accomplished. Most of the class has succeeded in cutting out the pattern and are working on markings, the art of managing the sewing machine is being attempted by some. Interest mingled somewhat with skepticism is the feeling in the room. However, hopes are still high.

No. 2 Continued from the First Page

Do You Know?

(By Dorothy Scott)

What things should be considered in garden planning? First, the size of the family and the quantities of vegetables and fruits necessary to supply its needs, amount and type of land available, whether team or hand cultivation must be used, whether the family potato supply is grown in the garden or in the field, the time available for gardening, and the number of persons who can help tend it.

What should you grow in your garden? Things you like to eat, but hitch your garden to a good meal plan. A great many of us are so limited in our likes that gardens have only a few old stand-bys, lettuce, radishes, cucumbers, peas, corn and onions. A survey in one county of this district showed that most farm gardens grow from 14-17 kinds of vegetables. We are told there should be 25-30 different kinds for proper variety, and that as many as 45 kinds are available to us, if we would use them.

In England the scarcity of food-stuffs has taught the people to make use of many substitutes, substitutes that sound odd to us, nasturtium leaves and flowers, rose petals, marigolds, and even fresh cut green grass. Carrots are used for sweetening, and mashed potato as a "fat sparer" in pastry, puddings and cakes.

We do not need to make these substitutions in our gardens this year, but we may find it a good plan to enlarge our list of "likes." For instance, if spinach seed is scarce or highpriced, substitute chard, mustard, kale, or turnip greens; while brussels sprouts and broccoli belong to the cabbage-cauliflower group.

Ask yourself what you like to eat when selecting seeds, and the answers will supply themselves.

Do I like cocktails? Tomatoes aplenty for me then.

Do I like salads? Lettuce, cabbage, endive, celery and tomatoes are musts.

Do I like appetizers? Radishes, celery, cucumbers, onions, carrots and beets will give me ample choice.

Do I like greens? Good ones are chard, spinach, turnip, kale and mustard.

Do I like starches? Lima beans, peas, sweet corn and potatoes are it.

Do I like sauces? That's easy—rhubarb and melons.

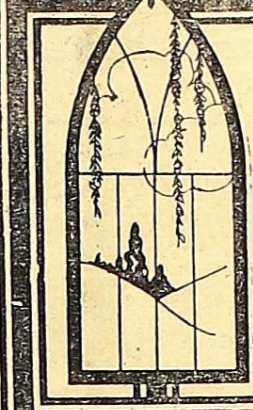

Do I like fruits? Strawberries, raspberries, watermelon and muskmelon in my garden.

Do I like spices? I can't always buy them, so I'll grow sage, dill, caraway, parsley, coriander, anise and horseradish.

There is available in our office this spring a handy leaflet put out by Michigan State College called "Produce Your Own Vegetables." In it you will find 36 of the most common garden products, with suggested varieties for each, and the number of feet of row necessary for the family of five in a normal season.
