Meeting the tall, handsome and engaging Dr. Padilla for the first time at a recent press luncheon, this reporter put him down as something new among political or diplomatic envoys. This impression of uniqueness is perhaps due to the fact that his mind is at once luminous and poetic, and shrewd, muscular and combative. Dr. Padilla's talk was "off the record," but with his permission we are allowed to report its main outline. The world cannot and will not be reorganized on any basis of traditional imperialism. The alternative is cooperation, on the basis of a just and ration-allotment of world resources. This co-operation, Dr. Padilla is calmly assured, will come. It will mean a steadily rising standard of living, for all the peoples of the earth, automatically a safeguard against the glutting of trade channels and the rise of feverish nationalism which lead to war. There will be a genuine "culture and science" of living.

Dr. Padilla grew up in a remote mountain village in Guerrero, won a scholarship at the University of Mexico, and later one which took him to the Sorbonne. He continued his studies at Columbia. Returning to Mexico, as a deputy from his native state, he became secretary of public education, minister plenipotentiary to Hungary and Italy, and in 1940, minister of foreign affairs.

His showing of achievement both before and after Pearl Harbor ought to be a good prescription for insomnia, if any considerable portion of the populace is worrying about bombs. When General Jarman was sent to Panama in June, 1940, less than onefifth of the guns there could be fired, because of the lack of ammunition and personnel. By November of that year he had brought the artillery

When he began the organization of defense in the Canal Zone region he was warned that jungle workers would suffer disastrous mortality from malaria and that the operations should be preceded by a survey of means to combat the scourge. He called in the best available medical advisors, demanded a workable formula for immunization, got one, in a hurry-consisting mostly of quinine-and started building his posts deep in the jungle, including largescale housing units for his men. The general's whirlwind progress brought him a call to the States and upped him to the anti-aircraft command, under Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the First army.

He is tireless in exploring the urgent requirements of his job and nothing is ever finished, so far as he is concerned.

Morale is one of General Jarman's specialties and his communications with his men are entirely colloquial. He likes to stroll through a mess hall and ask the boys how they like the food. If one of them replies that the chow is getting pretty schmalsk, or words to that effect, he listens, investigates, decides and acts, if need be, or, if he finds that the soldier is just grousing on general principles, he tells the soldier to take what he gets and like it. Both Japan and Nazi Germany were reported to be suffering bad attacks of the jitters, the former because of air raid expectations in a country badly equipped to withstand them, the latter because of the impending menace of an American-

British invasion of Europe.

Reports had reached Norwegian circles in London that several divisions of new troops had been rushed to Norway. It was known that vast labor battalions were engaged feverishly in building de-fenses along the channel coast.

As to the Japs, they were said to be having air raid alarms constantly, even when no enemy planes were in sight. Many of these reportedly had been caused by their own planes in practice or patrol flights.

Believing the American ships which raided the Jap mainland had come from Eastern China, Japanese planes had lashed out at various towns there which might have harbored American bombers.

Unquestionably the raids upon Nipponese cities were a serious blow to Japanese morale. Their "sacred was not immune to outside at-

Many believed that if Hitler was to win the war at all, it must be in 1942, and that the practical abandonment of a grand-scale offensive on all fronts at once was really a confession of defeat.

GOP:

Comity, Co-operation

Following their Chicago convention, the Republicans had gone back to their homes somewhat surprised to find themselves with a platform of internationalism, to find that they had abandoned isolationism and that this program was written and put over by Willkie, an ex-Democrat.

However, they went back resolved to try their utmost to win a few elections this year, and some of the leaders were frank in saying they hoped for new life for the party from the change of heart.

The national committee chairman Joseph W. Martin Jr. said:

"The Republican party may well be proud of its accomplishment. It was a great day for the party when apt to center on this or that the Willkie resolution was adopted."

Some observers had felt during the battle against it that Mr. Martin wasn't so pleased as he expressed himself afterward. But in the main the GOP was confident and lively about it all.

The big paragraph in the platform was number three, which read: "We realize that after this war the responsibility of the nation will not be circumscribed within the terri-

Outside of this, the party pledged itself chiefly to an attempt to hold down non-war expenditures.

FLEET:

Of France

Interesting discussions, most of them theoretical, over the possible future activity of the French fleet, assuming that Laval was turning it over to German uses either directly or through Vichy, had reached the press, some figuring the fleet an important addition to Nazi might, others saying it would be of little help if any.

Cheated out of thousands of miles of service, these tires failed and were rejected at inspection station because of:

- 1. Bad wheel bearings, loose king pin bolts and badly worn tie-rod ends.
- 2. Loose front end.
- 3. Bad camber condition.
- 4. Boot substituting for tread and fabric.
- 5. Toe-in and low pressure.

"Never mind us. Take care of the tires first!"

That was the command gasped out to two stretcher bearers when (in a cartoonist's imagination) they attempted to give first aid to the injured occupants of a badly wrecked automobile.

The cartoon, published in a nationally-read magazine, may exaggerate the situation, but it demonstrates beyond all doubt that 1942 will go down in history as the year when rubber became more precious than rubies.

"rubber stockpiles," Talk of "crude rubber" and "carry-over tonnage" leaves the average motorist cold. He doesn't understand all the technicalities behind the current rubber shortage. But he does know that when his present tires wear out, he will be forced to leave his sixcylinder, 1937 Blue Streak standing idle in his garage.

Checkup by Experienced Operators. It is possible that more motorists are going to maintenance stations to have their tires checked than ever before. (This incidentally, is one of the essential DO's.) Motorists there will learn that their tires are unsafe (alas!) if the fabric, breaker strip, or outer body ply is exposed. Also that if the tire has cuts or snags greater than an inch in any direction and deep enough to expose body fabric, it is then in the unsafe condition. Furthermore, if the tire has a bulge it is dangerous to use, for patches or boots are not sufficient protection. Then, too, another way to learn if the tires are unsafe is either to look over the wheel and tire yourself, or or if the rim or wheel flange is defective. Then after you have made sure that your tires and wheels are OK, your next best procedure is to get yourself in the habit of using war time driving rules to conserve your

Recapping, which is partially remaining tread, and retreading, which means stripping old tread off the tire and replacing it with a new tread and vulcanizing onto the casing, is done with the greatest of economy and safety when the following rules are remembered:

Use only tire cases which have no cracks, punctures or flaws. Recap tires that are not worn

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, believing herself to be the heir to Alakoa, the island estate of her grandfather, finds herself no heiress at all, when the old gentleman, Garrett Waterson, there was the son th son, turns up after a long disappearance. Meantime she and her lawyer have been engaged in a dispute over the rights to the property with the Wayne family who have been in possession since the old man left, many years before. Richard (Tonga Dick) Wayne has fallen in love with Karen, as has also the lawyer, John Colt. After she quarrels with Dick, Karen decides to leave Alakoa with Colt. Old Garrett Waterson has arrived at Alakoa and is very ill has arrived at Alakoa and is very ill with fever but expresses a wish to see Karen. As Tonga Dick goes to find her he sees that she and Colt have put out to sea. He is determined to bring Karen back to see her grandfather. Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER XIV

Even yet, behind the beach of Alakoa, continued the music and dancing which was an extension of the wake for the death of James Wayne; relaxing now into an emotional deb-acle which had forgotten the reason that it began. Consequently the crew of the Holokai, held on the vessel when they had expected to go ashore, was in resentful and surly mood. From that frustrated and dark-skinned crew any skipper could expect a sullen handling of lines and gear, and the uneasy, heavy-weighted obedience of men who like nothing about their work. But this time as Dick Wayne swung aboard the Holokai something different happened.

Tonga Dick came aboard relaxed and smiling, and every move that he made was lazy. The easy droop of his whole figure would have seemed, at first glance, to be that of a man upon whom anybody could impose. And yet, as soon as he stepped aboard, a peculiar and unexplainable discipline came over the whole length of the Holokai. The crew forgot the doings behind the beach, and the drinking they had missed, and the girls they had missed; suddenly they wanted nothing except to be out of range of the inevitable explosion.

Tonga Dick didn't see any of that. He didn't notice the unaccustomed smartness with which deck Kanakas got out of his way, nor the naval precision with which Inyashi attended him-not too close. The rail felt unnatural as he swung over it because his hands were cold and trembling; and he was seeing nothing except the wavering lights of the Seal, probing out through a channel which no one aboard her knew.

The tall rollers that came across two thousand miles of Pacific were breaking low upon the coral reefs. No one could make his way through there who had not been born among those reefs-not as the tides lay now. Certainly Captain Ramey, bad navigator and weak pilot, could not find his way through. Dick watched plates. Presently, he believed, he would take the people off the foundering Seal, and put them back where they belonged-where he had told them to stay. He waited for the reel of the Seal's lights, the sick check of her motion which would mark the physical concussion between John Colt's will and the actualities of land and water.

There was a moment, suspended in hair-breadth contest, in which he knew the Seal could not live-that the one-eyed Ramey had made one mistake too many. Then, unaccountably, by a whim of the sea, the Seal shook off the reef through a course in which no vessel had ever succeeded yet-and was free in open water. Even the broken-toothed coral seemed to have failed Dick Wayne.

"Take your anchor up," Dick said. His voice was so low that Inyashi, waiting near as he was, had to ask him to repeat.

"Weigh your anchor, and give me the Diesel! What is this? Doesn't anything I say ever stick any more?'

The Seal was in the open sea; but now the Holokai was coming out, brought by a shorter and easier way. When Dick Wayne had brought her through the treacherous and angling channel he set his hip against the wheel, letting the Holokai buck brokenly against the cross chop.

"Inyashi," Dick said, "that is our boat."

"Our boat, Captain?"

"I'm going aboard that boat and bring her back," Dick said.

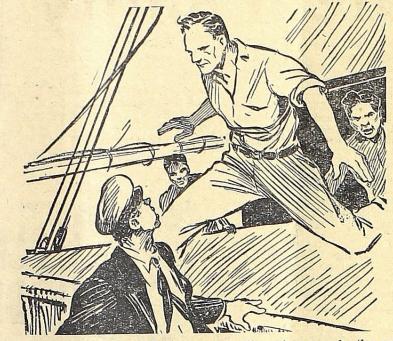

Something special showed in Inyashi then. Sometimes people wondered why a squatty little yellow man, who looked like a clerk in a Japanese dry goods store, should be right-hand man to Dick Wayne. If they had been watching, they might have found out something about that now. Inyashi's face wrinkled in a peculiar grin; it was deferential still, but a peculiar drawing of the lips made the eye teeth show, so that all at once, without ever step-

them up to the wheel which Dick | gleam of a long knife in the belt of a still held. These were slovenly looking men, not very well washed. Their faces were dark; the hair of some of them had a crinkly bush; the noses of some were nothing else but flat, and the lips noticeably thick. A Polynesian who, on a surfboard, seems the image of a god, can look like scum in dungarees.

'You see that boat up there?' Dick said.

None of them said anything, and their faces were inexpressive. The question was rhetorical. Whatever these brown-skinned men might miss in this world or the next, they never missed anything on the face of the sea.

"We're going to come up close on that boat in a minute," Dick said. "We're going to swing so close to her that maybe we'll smash her rudder off. I'm going aboard, and I'm going to take her back to Alakoa. After I've gone aboard, the Holokai is going to stand by for maybe ten minutes. Within ten minutes the malahine boat will turn and go back. If it doesn't turn-"

Dick Wayne stopped a moment, while he turned the Holokai more carefully into the wake of the Seal's lights.

"Then, Captain?" Inyashi prompted. In the undistinguished yellow face the canine teeth were showing in Inyashi's peculiar new smile.

"If," Dick said, "the Seal does not turn in ten minutes after I have boarded her, the Holokai will come alongside the Seal and lash fast."

"And then-?" Inyashi said again. "One way or another," Dick said, 'I'm going to take the Seal back to Alakoa."

Dick Wayne didn't even look at the faces of the Kanakas-he knew what was there. They were looking the Seal swing perilously in the rip at each other then, but not in sullenthe Seal swing perilously in the rip of the tide; he waited confidently, even hopefully, knowing what kind of rock was reaching for the Seal's leather, weathered by a thousand it—and see what happens to you! tropic suns; but now there was a curious drawing up of the faces of the first man and the third-different from a smile, and at the same time nothing else-as if the deep-skinned leather had been drawn up by inner

If any haole had anything these men could understand, Dick Wayne had it; and they understood him Without looking at them at all, he knew that they would take the Seal, if he named the Seal, no matter what else happened after that. Dick had to grin a little, but not without affection, as he recognized that he was perfectly certain of what these men could be counted on to do.

"Get your buffers out to starboard.'

The Seal was all out, and, as Dick already knew, Ramey's boat had a surprising turn of speed; but there was nothing she could do to get away from the Holokai, in the open sea. The Holokai had been built for sail, but she had taken to her power with a surprising surety, so that under her Diesel she went over the water like a thrown shell. Definitely and steadily, with an arithmetic accuracy, the Holokai came up on the Seal; and nothing that men's intentions or present emotions might do could effect that steady overtaking. She could overhaul the unhappy Seal tonight simply by a mathematics of oil and iron contrived by forgotten designers, some of whom were dead . .

"I have to go now," Dick said to

"You mean-you mean-"

"Take the wheel, and throw her so close that you pick her wheelman's teeth with the buckle of your belt."

"What are you going to do?" Inyashi demanded.

"I'm going to leave this rail, and go aboard this other boat," Dick

"Tonga," Inyashi said, lapsing into the name under which he had first known Dick, "if I miss the swing, even by inches—it just can-not be done."

"You go ahead and do it. Take the wheel."

The Holokai's deck crew were lounging against the weather rail as Dick left the wheel. They appeared look like much as Inyashi brought to be resting; but Dick caught the boy who looked the laziest of all. "Stay back," he warned them.

'Stay back until your time comes!' Nobody moved on the deck of the Holokai as Dick went over the rail of the Seal. Everyone of those seariding men must have known what inspiration was in Inyashi's hand as he drew the Holokai past the Seal, against the restless swell of the countering sea. But they stood, waiting their turn, while Dick made his jump across better than a fathom of open water; and, gaining the Seal's deck, signaled Inyashi to stand clear.

The one-eyed Captain Ramey was waiting at so nearly the exact spot where Dick took the deck that he had to jump back when Dick came down over the rail.

"What's this. What is this?" "How would you like to turn your boat?" Dick said.

"Listen-wait-listen!" There was a frantic expostulation in Ramey's voice, not without its note of appeal. "You can't do this! What are you going to do? Damn me, you can't do it! You know I hardly ever get a decent charter, and when I do, do you have to butt in, and—"

Everyone upon the Seal had known that the Holokai was coming from behind, had seen Dick Wayne come aboard. There was a ring of faces, now, all around Ramey and Dick Wayne. Through the quick fog that action makes he saw that John Colt, too, was there. "You can't do this," Ramey said again. "I'll hang you higher than a kite in any court-'

Dick saw now where Karen Waterson was. She was leaning against the bulkhead of the cabin, detached still, with an unreadable face. "You don't even know what I'm going to do."

"Sure, I know," Ramey said with Will you, now?"

"You have your choice," Dick said. "You can turn back, if you're willing to turn back.'

John Colt spoke then. He said, "I really don't understand—"

"Shut your head," Dick said crudely. He spoke across them all, to Karen who stood against the bulkhead of the cabin; and although he did not raise his voice, no one could have mistaken to whom he spoke. "You're going back now," Dick "You're going back, and said.

you're not even asking why.' John Colt said, with a singularly decent poise, "Are we to understand-?' "You wouldn't understand this. An old, dying man wants to see what his grandchild looks like. I have guaranteed that he will. The girl is going back." "If you mean Miss Waterson," Colt said, "she is going where she chooses to go."

"Sorry." The sound of the sea was all around them, but within it there was a peculiar silence, in which nothing human had anything to say. John Colt stepped forward across the swaying deck, into that ring of

"This isn't a hundred years ago. We're not in the days of Captain Cook; we're not even in the days of Henry Morgan. We're not living in the old days, Wayne."

"No," answered Tonga Dick, "but this is the sea." "Am I to suppose-"

"I don't care what you suppose. I have to take Karen Waterson back to Alakoa."

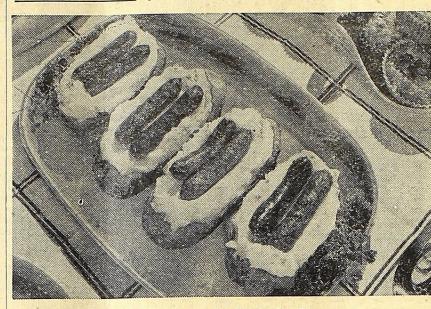

"This is an outrage," Captain Ramey put in. "I'll fight this through every court of admiralty that-" "You will be very happy," Tonga Dick said, "not to raise your head before admiralty at all. How would you like the admiralty courts to hear what happened at Lord Randolph's

"You mean to blackmail me?" Ramey screamed.

Wayne grinned. "You bet your life I'll blackmail you-if it's any good to me!" It was singular the way Ramey

The simple suppers at which a crowd gathers are pleasant for their warm friendliness, for the cozy talk which they inspire. They are especially easy to give if you plan to have each of your friends bring a dish for the supper - a pot

*Russet Half Shells.

(Serves 8) 6 medium-sized Idaho bakers ½ cup hot milk

2 tablespoons butter Salt and pepper to taste 1 large onion, chopped and cooked in butter until tender 12 small pork sausages

Scrub and bake potatoes at 400 to 450 degrees. Remove piece of skin from top of potato, or cut large potatoes lengthwise in two. Scrape out inside being careful not to break the shell. Mash thoroughly, or put through a potato ricer. Add butter, salt, pepper, milk and cooked onion. Beat well. Pile mixture lightly into shells, top with two small pork sausages that have been partially. sausages that have been partially cooked (boiled in a small amount of water) Return to oven and bake at 350 degrees until sausages are cooked through and browned.

Lynn Says:

Laundering Tips: With soap one of our prime, do not waste items, you will want to make the most of every scrap of soap you have. Save the small soap scraps from the bathrooms and kitchen, put them in a soap shaker so you will make use of them in washing dishes.

To have clean clothes even in spite of economical soap usage use your washing machine wise-Use only just so much water in your machine as the water line indicates and do not overload your machine. Six to eight pounds of dry clothes are about right for the average washing machine.

Mix the soap thoroughly with the water before putting in the clothes. About two inches of soap suds are necessary to do the job up right.

Water temperatures play an important part in laundering. Do not use very hot water for white clothes. For colored clothes, water comfortable to your hand is best. For synthetic silks, woolens, rayons, water should be eggs, add scalded milk. Add to salmon mixture. Make one or two salmon loaves. Bake in a greased pan placed in hot water at 325 degrees until loaves are firm. Make a green pea sauce by cooking frosted peas for 5 to 8 minutes in boiling salted water. Combine with white sauce. Pour over loaf when serving and slice the loaf.

Whisk any of these baked bean combinations into the oven and you have a quickie dinner dish if you have just hurried home from your defense training courses:

Pork Chops and Baked Beans Casserole. (Serves 6)

6 pork chops 1 large can baked beans 1 teaspoon sugar ½ cup tomato catsup

Fry pork chops until nicely browned on both sides. Pour baked beans over chops, add sugar and catsup. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 20 minutes.

Nothing equals the charm of home-baked, freshly baked bread that fills the surroundings with a delicious fragrance. That's why I give you this recipe for old-fashioned:

*Raisin Bread.

(Makes 2 loaves) 1 package fresh granular yeast

1 cup lukewarm water

½ teaspoon sugar 1 cup scalded milk 2 teaspoons salt

1/4 cup brown sugar (solidly packed) 1/4 cup corn syrup 5½ to 6 cups (or more) flour 6 tablespoons melted shortening

Pour the granular yeast into the cup of lukewarm water, add the half teaspoon sugar, stir and let stand about 5 minutes. Put the scalded milk, salt, sugar and corn syrup into mixing bowl. Let cool. When milk is lukewarm, add the softened yeast and 3 cups of flour. Mix well, then beat until smooth. Next add the melted (not hot) shortening and enough flour to have the dough cling together in a ball. Add the raisins which have been covered for a few minutes with very hot water, then dried in a cloth, and dusted with flour. Knead the dough thoroughly, adding only enough flour to avoid stickiness. Let dough rise in a covered, greased bowl in a moderately warm place (82 to 84 degrees) until doubled. Fold the dough down and let rise about 1/2 hour, then divide and shape into two loaves. Place in greased bread pans and brush tops with melted shortening. Let rise until doubled. Bake about 50 minutes in a moderately hot oven (375 to 380 degrees). If desired, brush tops with honey just before taking from the oven.

For an in-the-season, centerpiece note, besides its economical aspects, try this: A long, low, shallow bowl in pottery or glass such as you may have used for relishes, if large enough, use a snow-white cauliflower banked with parsley, eggplant, radishes or tomatoes.

If you like candles for the table, place these in little baking cuts or ramekins, at either side of the vegetable bowl.

A simple setting like this calls for gay, unadorned china and soft or bright plaids in tablecloth and napkins.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.) ON BECOMING OLD

Now that the span of life has been lengthened and the average is now about 66 years of age, it can be seen that there are more older individuals in proportion to the general population than at any time in the world's known history. This means that many men past 65, active mentally and physically, are being "retired" from their positions in indus-

What is going to become of these individuals physically aside from any financial considera-

Many of them are going to become "old" almost immediately because they are removed from their every-day habits of life. Some of our older folk are wise in that they have prepared themselves previously to meet their day of retirement by some definite daily occupation or

Dr. E. Breuler, in his book "Text of Psychiatry" states "Senility (old age) often becomes a disease only as a result of the sudden stopping of the ordinary attractions of life."

Postponing Old Age.

There is a worker in a coal yard in Pittsburgh who, at the end of 50 years service with one company, was called to the office and presented with a suitably engraved gold watch, a present of $500, and told that from that date till he died his wages would be paid but he need not report for work any more. He told his employers that he would accept the watch and the money but that he would report as usual for work every morning. This workman knew that his whole life was bound up in that coal yard and his fellow workmen. To remain in bed in the morning, have a late breakfast, or irregular meals, would upset his normal mental and physical habits-indigestion, constipation, depression of spirits-and bring on "real" old age.

The thought then is that while some who are retired may have to find work of some kind, those that can live in their own home or with their children should establish regular daily health habits as to food, exercise and sleep.

Asthmatic Children Yield to Treatment

When a physician investigating the cause of asthma in 329 cases in children is able to find the cause in 252 or over 75 per cent, it must be admitted that asthma has now passed the place where it can be called an incurable disease. Today, physicians, while giving the usual treatment for attacks, are patiently to learn the cause in each individual case.

Dr. A. V. Stoesser, Minneapolis. in Minnesota Medicine, reports his study of 329 cases and found that foods, pollen from plants, and other substances in the air were, as above noted, the causes in three of every four cases. Fifty-eight children had attacks of asthma associated with infections of nose, throat, sinuses, and bronchial tubes. Because tonsillitis occurred often in this group, the tonsils and adenoids were removed and 38 obtained definite relief. The remaining 20 were not helped by the operation and a few of them were made worse.

There were 122 children whose asthma was not due to food or pollen from plants but to house dust, feathers and cottonseed. Trying to desensitize these children by hypodermic injection was not very successful. The children sensitive to house dust were difficult to treat because house dust could not be completely removed from the household. The cases sensitive to feathers responded well to the thorough removal of feathers from the home.

At first children sensitive to cottonseed were also difficult to treat but with the reduction in amount of linter dust, good results were obtained. Some of the articles of furniture containing linter cotton were replaced by special mattresses and cushions made of materials free or almost free of allergic irritants.

Patients sensitive to fur or dan-druff were cured by removal of these animal substances from their surroundings.

Sudden changes in the weather did have some influence on the asthma, especially among children sensitive to house dust.

Thus it will be seen that the cause of the great majority of these cases of asthma in children was found.
