DOOLITTLE:

Secrets Well Kept

Three questions remained unanswered when President Roosevelt pinned the Congressional Medal of Honor on the breast of Brigadier General Doolittle in an unheralded White House ceremony commemorating the recent history-making American bombers' raid on the Japanese mainland.

Where did daredevil Jimmy Doolittle's squadron take off from? Where did the Yank fliers land after they bombed Tokyo and sowed a whirlwind of fire, death and destruction in their wake? By what route did Doolittle reach Washington?

HOOVER URGES:

More Power for FDR

Former President Herbert Hoover urged that President Roosevelt be given additional "dictatorial economic powers" as a means of winning the total war.

"There must be no hesitation in giving them to President Roosevelt and upholding him in them," Mr. Hoover said in an address before the 26th assembly of the National Industrial Conference board.

Economic dictatorship, however, must not encroach on civil liberties, he declared. "From a philosophical viewpoint," he said he would like to see the "sixth columnists given a little more liberty."

"Criticism of the conduct of the war is necessary if we are to win the war," he added. "We want the war conducted right . Democracy can correct mistakes only through public exposure and opposition to them."

Mr. Hoover did not define specifically the new dictatorial powers he advocated for President Roosevelt. He said, however, "We must start our thinking with a cold, hard fact; that the economic measures to win total war are just plain Fascist economics."

REDS VS. NAZIS: Soviets Still Ahead

Stubborn battles on which the decision of World War II appeared to hinge still persisted on the Kharkov and Kerch fronts.

On the Kharkov front the Russian armies under Marshal Timoshenko continued their advances in the face of stiffened German resistance and sharp counterattacks. On the Kerch front, the Russians denied Nazi claims of a clean sweep to the gateway of the precious Caucasus oil fields.

That the Red army was keeping alive its offensive in the Kharkov sector at a swiftly rising cost to the Nazis in men, heavy weapons and supplies was indicated by the latest war bulletins.

"On one sector near Kharkov," said a report, "our troops annihilated 1,650 German officers and men and destroyed 27 tanks, an ammunition dump and a gasoline dump. Booty captured included 37 guns, 57 mortars, 10,000 shells, 40,000 rounds of ammunition, three wireless stations and other material."

In commenting on the situation on the Kerch peninsula in the Crimea, a communique said Russian forces were barring the way to the Caucasus in a way that resembled the long American defense of the

NAZI FOOD RATIONS: To Be Smaller

MARSHAL GOERING

Following stories of conditions in Axis countries by diplomats and newspaper men released from internment in Germany and Italy came an announcement by Reich Marshal Herman Goering, war time Nazi economic commissioner, that "a temporary reduction in the food rations" of Germany would be necessary because of an unfavorable crop outlook.

Addressing 137 war workers as-sembled at the chancellery in Berlin to be awarded service crosses for the first time in history, Goering

"Three extremely hard winters are behind us. The elements have not been kind to us. Last year's harvest was bad. Now, however much we enjoy the warm sun, we are longing for rain to bring what the farmer

Goering termed the present war the hardest Germany has had to

"The winter campaign has been terrible. The Fuehrer suffered deeply for his troops, but he knew he must not yield. There was no question of giving up our front positions because behind us there was only a heap of ruins."

cautious indication that increase of United Nations striking power might bring victory sooner than was formerly expected, brought comfort to many an American family and generated new optimism over the war effort in official Washington. Mr. Hull had been asked at a

In reply he pointed out that the powers To help Americans pay heavy in- and facilities of the United States come taxes that would affect mil- have been developing on a more and scale, not only for offensive-defensive operations, but for outright offensive war.

Making no effort to disguise the fact that he was increasingly impressed by America's growing power, the white-haired secretary suggested it was only natural that calculations as to the duration of the war should be made in the light of this fact.

Observers pointed out that a numper of factors re-enforced Secretary Hull's views. Among these were the steady rise in armed personnel, unprecedented increases in production from factory production lines, growing air and naval strength and the uninterrupted flow of men and materials abroad.

Boom Towns Struggle With Labor Influx

War Industries Tax Normal Facilities in Smaller U. S. Cities.

Released by Western Newspaper Union. In the turbulent economic wake of conversion and war production, a thousand patriotic towns and villages anxiously seek answers today to a multitude of new problems concerned with accommodating Uncle Sam's mobile armies of war

There isn't anything spectacular about these problems that are keeping village presidents up nights and putting furrows in the brows of town councils and boards. They're as commonplace as dishwater, hospital beds, school desks or fire engines. But their solution is very important indeed in the nation's fight to smash the Axis.

Populations Doubled.

Things aren't the way they were before Pearl Harbor in these thousand towns. All-out war production has turned scores of them literally overnight into 1942 versions of boom areas. Crossroads hamlets have had their populations doubled between one sunup and the next.

War boom towns in Illinois, Michigan, Alabama, Washington, Ohio, California, have had to figure and plan as they never did before to provide the most meager housing, transportation, health and educational facilities for in-migrants needed to man the new machines of war. Even large industrial centers have felt the pinch of providing decent accommodations on the home front for the new legions who are taking their places behind the men behind U. S. guns.

From 5,000,000 workers directly employed on war production as of last December 7, the number has risen to more than 8,500,000 today and minimum requirements by the end of 1942 are expected by federal officials to exceed 15,000,000.

American towns and villages are daily demonstrating that they are more than willing to do their part in the all-out effort to produce the tools for victory for the United Nations. But the doing often is beyond the means of an individual locality, and the problems are complex and Serious Medical Problems.

In a Michigan town, medical authorities recently warned that an epidemic of tuberculosis was breeding in the very heart of the suburban factory district, 10 miles from a huge bomber plant. A report on overcrowding in the area stated that "more than 4,000 patients, 450 of them tubercular, are jammed into hospital space designed for 2,500." Officials pointed out that added to the danger from this source is a lack of suitable sanitary facilities for the mushroom community.

The authorities of an Illinois village suddenly awoke to the fact that many of their wells no longer reached the water table in that area. due to the emergency drilling of numerous other wells by war production plants surrounding the village site on three sides; a village in Minnesota found that the increased number of war workers and their families moving into the community necessitated the hiring of another teacher, a part-time janitor and the purchasing of new supplies of books and other equipment.

'Grand Hotel'—1942 Emergency Model

Because of insufficient living accommodations, these weary workers in a small Virginia town are forced to sleep around the stove of a general store. This condition exists in many other crowded defense areas.

In a Pennsylvania town, jammed with war workers, a pumper and fire fighting equipment were required immediately to reduce the hazard of possible general conflagration; a Kentucky hamlet had to arrange for an extension of its sewerage facilities or suffer the consequences; a Colorado town, a Wisconsin city, and a Texas county were confronted with the need for new schools at

The patriotism and morale of these workers are high, but so are their American standards of living. For their families, these war workers ask for livable quarters, good water and sanitary facilities; there dren, recreation, beds in hospitals for them when they fall sick.

Congress has recognized both the needs of the mobile armies engaged in war production, and the problems of the localities affected through the enactment of the Amended Lanham act. In the hands of the Federal Works agency the legislators have placed a great part of the job of keeping ahead of the vast community requirements of these industrial legions of Joneses, Cohens, Murphys and Kozlowskis.

Title 2 of the Amended Lanham act provides that in any area or locality where an acute shortage

All-out war production has brought living conditions such as these in a midwestern town to hundreds of communities from coast to coast. Many trailer communities lack proper sanitary facilities and a large number of them try to accommodate too many trailers for the space.

'Top-Kicks' Trained in Eight-Week School

WASHINGTON .- A school which | field. Its first graduates are now prepares soldiers for the exacting job of top sergeant in the American army has won its chevrons at the Signal Corps Replacement Training center at Fort Monmouth, N. J. Within an eight-week period, this school transforms soldiers into "topkicks" able to cope with the endlessly varied problems of adminisserving with Signal corps units.

For approximately six weeks, the men are trained in Fort Monmouth classrooms and drill fields. Besides company administration, they study infantry drill and physical training, defense against chemical and air attacks, sanitation and hygiene, first aid, training methods, basic signal communications, map readtration, supply, and company lead- ing and sketching, and morale and ership which will face them in the supervised athletics.

of public works or equipment for public works necessary to the health, safety or welfare of persons engaged in national defense exists or impends, FWA is authorized, with the approval of the President, to relieve such shortage. This authorization is conditioned on evidence that the necessary works or services could not "otherwise be obtained when needed, or could not be provided without the imposition of an increased excessive tax burden,

Need for Construction.

Assistant FWA Administrator Baird Snyder, acting for Administrator Philip B. Fleming, has pointed out that: "Inseparable from the lives of modern industrial workers and their families-for transportation, education, health and recreation-are prosaic roads, sewers, schools, hospitals and many other types of public construction.'

War as an industrial process, says Mr. Snyder, means that community facilities have to be built not only to accommodate expanded armed forces, but to take care of the mobile and increasingly numerous armies of war workers.

another in fruitless search for deperative war needs. Today, throughout the nation, this federal agency | Eighth avenue. is building or ready to build all the war works that can be provided tions are available.

The Man with the shears in West, for instance, is Markley Shaw, former assistant to the director of the old FWA defense housing division, who casts as personal representative of the administrator.

Full-Scale Wartime Basis.

"Public works are now being handled on a full-scale wartime basis,' explained Mr. Shaw, whose headquarters are in Chicago. "My instructions are to let nothing stand in the way of prompt, efficient development of war projects. Under new regulations no federal funds will be allotted for the construction of a permanent building under the war public works program, if a temporary or semi-permanent one will suffice. This applies even though the applicant proposes to contribute the full amount of the difference.

"Except where a structure is an addition to an existing facility, negotiations will be opened on the basis of simplified standard plans of the Federal Works agency. Elimination of all building material beyond absolute necessity in war public works construction recently has been ordered throughout the nation, and this step is expected materially to reduce the use of critical war materials as well as to free man-hours of labor for other war production.'

Assistant Administrator Snyder has listed the following types of projects directly attributable to war activities as eligible for federal allotment of funds: Schools, hospitals, health centers, detention hospitals, fire department buildings and certain equipment except radio equipment, recreation buildings, water and sewer facilities, and maintenance and operation of schools and hospitals where necessary.

In recent months, the Federal Works agency has built or contracted to build scores of community facilities in every section of the nation where production wheels turn. The U. S. Public Health Service, in co-operation with the state departments of health, is intensifying the application of general health plans in strategic localities.

Co-operating in the general plan to assist individual localities and provide living facilities for war workers is the National Housing agency, which is building thousands of houses and dormitories.

Commencement Time

There's a last-minute flurry of hair brushing and straightening of ties as Jane and Billy get ready for their gradua-tion exercises. Yes, this is really the year the children are getting through with school. It's hard to believe, isn't it? It seems like just yesterday that they started school!

Your role is that of sitting back and beaming at their accomplishments, but, just as important, providing the children with a party and refreshments after commencement. Simplest way of taking care of refreshments is setting up a table in the porch or dining room. Then fill this with assorted breads and cold cuts, add a few relishes for good measure, and you have the makings of a successful party. The informality of this setting will please the children, and at the same time relieve you of extra serving. Let the children help themselves and take their own time about it, for there will be plenty of conversation to go with refreshment time.

Lynn Says:

Did you know that it is perfectly proper to wash the American Flag? Of course, you know it is disrespectful to display a badly soiled one, but perhaps you were a bit worried about trying to A recent survey made by professional laundries reveals that flags made of woolen material should be washed and rinsed as other woolens: squeeze the flag through rich suds whipped up with a mild soap and warm, softened water of not more than 100 degrees Fahrenheit. Rinse in two or three changes of lukewarm, soft water.

Cotton flags should be rubbed lightly, but only lukewarm soft water should be used for the suds. Both wool and cotton flags should be air-dried.

Textile experts at professional laundries also point out that flags raised outdoors naturally deteriorate more quickly than those displayed indoors. If a flag launders well, its service period is increased with frequent washing.

1 cup light corn syrup 2 eggs, unbeaten

Add 1/4 of the flour and beat until smooth and well blended. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each. Add remaining flour in thirds, alternately with milk in halves, beating well after each addition. For best results, beat cake very well after at each stage of mixing. Add vanilla. Michigan Bell Telephone Company

"Lindy's in!" Cruger, at his desk, heard that cry from a ground-worker passing the open window. He smiled as he looked up from his time sheet. There was always a note of triumph in the call of the port boys when Lindy came in Cruger got up from his chair and crossed to the doorway, where the sunlight fell flat against the river slopes and proclaimed that spring had come again to the North Country. He stood there until he caught sight of his long-legged bush pilot swinging up from the landing dock.

Cruger went back to his desk and his figure-stippled time sheets as the long legs strode into what was overgenerously known as the Administration Building of Norland Airways. It was a place of plain boards and tar paper, with only the two poles of its radio antennae to crown it with any passing sense of dignity.

Slade, when he stepped into the map-hung office, again made Cruger think of a panther, but this time it was a panther in a cage. He seemed too big for the room.

"I'm glad you swung back early," said Cruger. "And I want to tell you, first crack out of the box, that we're going to take the crepe off the door."

"What does that mean?" questioned Slade.

Cruger, instead of answering, took up an official-looking envelope.

"Before we begin," he casually observed, "you'd better give this the once-over." He surrendered the envelope. "You know what it is?" "I've an idea," said Slade, after inspecting the insignia. "You're a quick jumper, aren't you?" retorted Cruger, his eye on the weathered young face that held a touch of discontent somewhere.

Slade's smile was wide yet noncommittal. "They yelp for flyers," he said, "and while they're yelping they turn me down." He got up from the safe and paced the narrow floor. "I must Cruger's shrug was a condoning

"I'd say it's because you're good," he parried. "Good enough to be needed right here on this northern run. And those tin hats happen to know you hold a key position.'

Slade turned on him. "Did anyone in this outfit broadcast that, just to block my enlistment?" was his indignant demand. Again Cruger shrugged.

Who are we to interfere with the War Office? It ought to be big enough to make its own decisions." But Slade didn't seem to hear him.

"They hot-air about wanting men who're hard-trained and resourceful. Well, I ought to ring in on that. I've kept more than one lemon-crate up when every law of aeronautics said it ought to be down.'

'You're resourceful, all right," acceded Cruger, "but you'd be in clink with a broken heart after two weeks of army rules." "I'd learn," said Slade, "along with the other leathernecks." "But they'd all move too slow for you," contended Cruger. "That fight doesn't look slow to me. And I ought to be over there while the show's still on." Cruger smiled the smile of a man with an extra shot in his locker.

"There was a time," he observed, "when bush flying seemed to stack pretty high with you." "But if you can't get a little excitement in your day's work," Sladewas saying, "you may as well give up. And you said, two weeks ago, we'd have to."

"Before we go into that," retorted Cruger, "we ought to check up on the all-round dullness of this bush run of ours. I s'pose there was no excitement in that mercy flight of yours to Murray Bay when you picked up those two frozen huskies? Or in finding your Flying Padre when he was stymied on Lac de Gras last winter with a busted propeller and a factor's wife in labor and delirious with flu all at once?" Slade had his own memories of that event. But his smile remained morose. She had her baby in the plane, four feet behind me high-tailing it for the Fort Smith hospital," he acknowledged. "The nose-over on the lake ice gave Doc Morlock a bad arm, so his girl Lynn had to get busy.'

The softened note on the name did not escape Cruger. But he let

"She knew what was needed, all right. When we were swinging over Lesser Slave Lake I heard that baby give its first squawk."

"But you saved two lives, didn't you? I suppose there wasn't any excitement in that?"

The shrill of the desk 'phone cut off Slade's impending response. And while Cruger answered the 'phone the man in the flyer's jacket walked to the window and looked out. Beyond the rough-boarded hangar and the landing docks he could see the friendly cluster of planes on the

"I'm glad you swung back early," said Cruger, "We're going to take the crepe off the door."

But what held his eye the longest was the smaller blue monoplane that looked faded and weathered and sadly the worse for wear. That, he knew, was the plane of the Flying Padre, the mercy-flighter and man of medicine who was sometimes known as the Grenfell of the Outer Gulf. And in it the Padre's daughter had gone along as pilot and helper. But never again, Slade remembered, would the clear-eyed Lynn Morlock take over the controls while her tired father held back the hand of Death two thousand feet above the lake-spangled Barrens. That, he surmised, was already a thing of the past.

Cruger, as he hung up his receiver, caught the passing look of raptness in the Viking blue eye.

"It's just about as big a game, Lindy, as a man could get into," he said out of the silence. "It's still as good as dog-fighting Messerschmitts. And we're both going to stay in it." Slade swung about and faced his partner.

"That wasn't the tune you were singing two weeks ago."

Cruger's laugh was slightly defiant.

"They had us backed against the wall two weeks ago. I told you our shoestring was wearing thin and we couldn't buck the big companies another month. But Norland Airways is going to stay on the map."

Slade's face lost its diffidence. "What's changed the picture?" Cruger's answer to that was not a direct one.

"We've both got all we own in this one-horse outfit and we can't afford to see it fold up. While you were out fighting head winds I've been in here doing a little fighting of my own. And I've just got my hands on a reconditioned Lockheed that'll give us a second air truck and release Abbott and his Postcraft for Winnipeg and Toronto passenger traffic. You'll like that Lockheed. They've slapped a fresh coat of aluminum paint on her."

"What'll she carry?" asked the

"A pay load of thirty thousand pounds a trip if she has to."

"Where'll you get your pay loads?" exacted Slade, remembering how war conditions had put a sag in sub-arctic mine work.

"I'm coming to that, stick-jiggler. The traffic's still there, if you're willing to go after it. And I've gone after it. I've under-bid the big outfits and corraled enough business to keep us busy till freeze-up. I've got Fort Norman oil and a new slice of the Yellowknife stuff for you. I've got a renewal of the Coppermine contract. And what's more, I've got a Santa Claus in spectacles who's handing over enough ready dough to keep our cash tank from running dry.'

The Viking blue eye became more alert.

'Who's your Santa Claus?" "He's a passenger," said Cruger,

"you're going to fly into territory that'll make London look like a tearoom on a rainy afternoon. Cruger sat back, apparently waiting for a question. But Slade, with his world to reorganize, merely walked to the window and looked

"You're flying," Cruger was say ing, "into the Anawotto country." Slade's turn, at that information, was quick. "What nut's going into that wilderness?" he demanded. "They go into some queer places, these days," observed the older

"But the Anawotto's as empty as Sahara. Why, the only human beings north of the Kasakana are two frost-bitten old quartz-pounders, two half-demented old derelicts who've been bushed for three years and would bump off if I didn't tote 'em in their flour and sowbelly.'

"You're going well past the Kasa-kana this time," Cruger announced. 'Into country you've never seen before.

"For what?" asked Slade. Cruger took his time about answering.

"For swans' eggs, I understand." Slade's sun-bleached brows came a little closer together.

"Just what does that mean?" Again Cruger took his time.

"It means we've got a simpleminded naturalist out there, an ornithologist answering to the name of Frayne, who wants to be flown north so he can find the breeding ground of the trumpeter swan. I never saw a trumpeter swan. Did you?'

Slade stood thoughtful a moment. "Yes, I saw a trumpeter, only last spring. I played tag with him over Lac la Martre. He must have had a wing-stretch of nine or ten feet.

"I'd call that quite a stretch," said the man at the desk. "You're telling me?"

"They may be impressive," said Cruger, as he opened a desk drawer, "but from what I can gather they're dying off. And this man Frayne wants to sleuth out their nesting quarters before they follow the dodo and disappear for good."

"And he's going in to the Anawotto alone?" Slade's brow-pucker seemed one of incredulity.

"No, he's taking an over-sized blond named Karnell along with him. "A blond?" croaked Slade. "You don't mean a skirt?' "Anything but. This blond is all male. He's square-headed and gorilla-jawed and looks like something that's been worked on by a snarling iron."

Slade found the picture unpalata-

"But who's your friend Frayne?" he persisted with a shrug of distaste. "Where does he come from? And why does he pick on us?"

"That's neither your problem nor mine. But he's the Norland's friend, all right. He may be a simple-minded crank. But he's so well heeled that money doesn't seem to mean much. And at this stage of the game we're going to handle a Christmas present like that with

Slade nodded his understanding. "But he must have a screw loose somewhere," maintained the younger man, "or he wouldn't be heading for what he's sure to get in that Anawotto country."

"You needn't lose sleep over that," contended Cruger. "He may be after birds' eggs, but he seems to have a working knowledge of subarctic conditions. I didn't find him much of a talker, but I stumbled on the fact he'd been trophy-hunting in the Himalayas last winter. And the winter before he hunted the snow leopard in Siberia and Tibet."

"Then I suppose he's English," said Slade. "One of those English big-game guys who go around with a monocle and a tin bathtub."

"He's got equipment, all right," conceded Cruger. "And he's paying us quite handsomely for flying

FRIDAY: THE DAY OF SUFFERING

LESSON TEXT-Mark 14:32-34, 44-46; 15: GOLDEN TEXT-Not my will, but thine, be done.-Luke 22:42.

Suffering such as no man ever faced came upon our Lord in the night between Thursday and Friday as He prayed in Gethsemane. Hatred and condemnation were poured upon Him as He went through the mockery of false trials on Friday.

The important events of last week's lesson had taken place, the precious words of comfort and assurance had been spoken, and now as midnight brings the darkness of night to its deepest hue, the Son of Man goes alone into the depth of the garden where we see Him

I. Sorrowful unto Death (14:32-34)

This Scripture portion uses many words to convey the depth of His soul's agony, as though it were impossible to express it in the faulty medium of speech. So it is, for our Lord here experienced something far more serious than a dread of physical death. He was not a coward. He was not afraid to die. But now His soul was about to have put upon its spotless sinlessness the stain and dishonor of the world's sins.

As Krummacher says: "Something approached Him which threatened to rend His nerves and the sight of it to freeze the blood in His veins." Little wonder that He was "sorrowful even unto death" (v. 34). It should break our hearts to see His loving heart break!

Since this was the road the Master trod, should not His servants tread it still? Service for Christ may call for passing through deep and chilling waters, but never as deep or as cold as those of Gethsemane.

Jesus took with Him into the garden the three who were closest to Him in the circle of disciples. He counted on their fellowship and sympathy in His hour of anguish. Merely to have them near Him, to know that they were there to watch and pray even though they could not share His holy burden, was to be a comfort to Him. How ignominiously they failed. The spirit was willing (v. 38), but the flesh took the upper hand, and they slept! He was alone with His Father when He prayed that if it were possible the hour might pass from Him, but in true and beautiful bridge?" submission said, "Not what I will, but what thou wilt."

II. Betrayed With a Kiss (14:44-46).

To betray the one who had done nothing but good, who had loved him and served him even in the washing of his feet, this would have een f expected of even the sin-blackened heart of a Judas. But he filled the measure of his ignominy to overflowing by betraying his Lord with the sign of affection-a kiss.

We know that we may not stand on the same ground as our Lord even here, for, whereas He had done nothing to merit betrayal, we at our best are not able to stand forth without fault. Nevertheless, great is the hurt when we face the betrayals of life. It may be one whom we have befriended, who has been the object of our loving thought and care, and who in the hour when he thinks to gain himself some advantage or avenge some fancied wrong strikes us in the back, even as he smilingly professes to be a friend. Shall we be embittered in soul and give like for like? God forbid! Let us rather say as Jesus did to Judas, "Friend, wherefore art thou come?" (Matt. 26:50).

III. Condemned by Hatred and Cowardice (15:1-5).

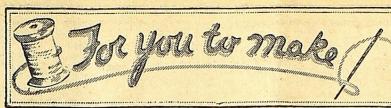

We have only a partial picture of the betrayal of Jesus in our lesson, but it is typical of all that took place, for it reveals the hatred-inspired false witness of the Jews, which, combined with the cowardice of Pilate, resulted in His being condemned to death.

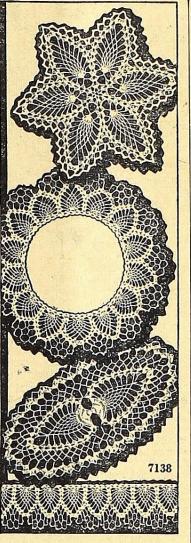

Pilate was convinced of His innocence, but because of the pressure by Jewish leaders he was in a difficult position. He was afraid to follow his convictions, feeling that it was more expedient to yield to the will of the populace. So he lost his great opportunity to write his name large among the heroes of history. Many there are who follow in Pilate's steps. They know what they ought to do with Jesus, but fearing the comments of friends or the possible loss of earthly advantage, they let Him be crucified afresh by their unbelief.

The Jewish leaders and those whom they had misled hated Jesus with a malicious hatred which made them relentless in their determination to destroy Him. Now they had their quarry at bay and they were determined to close in for "the kill."

They have their present day counterpart in those who have so long rejected Christ that they have become embittered against Him.

All This, We Find, Was According to Orders

Out for a drive in her pony-cart an elderly lady managed to get involved in some army maneuvers. As she approached a bridge a sentry stopped her.

"Sorry, madam," he said; "you can't cross this bridge. It's just been destroyed."

The old lady peered at it through her spectacles. "It looks all right to me," she murmured. Then, as another soldier came along, she asked: "Excuse me, but can you tell me what's wrong with this

The soldier shook his head. "Don't ask me, lady," he replied; "I've been dead two days."

Impressible Man

Every man, however obscure. however far removed from the general recognition, is one of a group of men impressible for good, and impressible for evil, and it is in the nature of things that he can not really improve himself without in some degree improving other men. - Charles Dickens.

Eternal Now

Above the indistinguishable roar of the many feet I feel the presence of the sun, of the immense forces of the universe, and beyond these the sense of the eternal now, of the immortal . . . There lives on in me an unquenchable belief, thought burning like the sun, that there is yet something to be found. something real, something to give each separate personality sunshine and flowers in its own existence now.-Richard Jeffries.

The problem of what to send a service man has been solved by the men themselves. Tobacco tops the list of gifts service men prefer from the folks back home, according to numerous surveys. If you have a friend or relative in the armed forces-Army, Navy, Marines, or Coast Guard-who smokes a pipe, or rolls-his-own, a pound of his favorite tobacco is very much in order. A big favorite with many service men is Prince Albert, the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco. Local dealers now are featuring Prince Albert in the pound can for the men in the service .-

JUST an old dresser with no mirror and one leg broken, but a new base gave it a modern air. Open shelves on top were the next step. The owner writes that she sent for scallop pattern 207, planning to have jig saw scallops cut for the shelves but she changed her mind and used the pattern for painted scallops instead. The whole piece was painted pale gray to match the kitchen woodwork; scallop designs were then chosen to fit drawers and cross boards at top and bottom of shelves. These, as well as base and drawer pulls were painted orange.

NOTE—Scallop pattern No. 207 gives dozens of designs to fit any space. These may be cut out of wood, composition board, linoleum, oil cloth-or paper. They may be pasted or painted on wood or metal. The pattern may also be used to make novel finishes for curtains and other things of fabrics. Ask for pattern No. 207 things of fabrics. Ask for pattern No. 207, and address:

NEW TEST FOR LIVER

When we think of the work done by the liver most of us are likely to think of the manufacture of bile. The statement that life (and health) depends upon the liver has behind it the thought of the value of bile in breaking up fats, in keeping the liver itself active and healthy and in the prevention of constipation. The fact also that the liver can store sugar and proteinsmeat, eggs, fish products—for future use may also be in mind as we think about the liver and

However, one of the most important jobs done by the liver is the filtering out from the blood substances that would be harmful to the body, allowing only helpful products of the food to remain in the blood. Thus it can be seen how important to health is this filtering power of the its work.

The testing of the ability of the liver to filter out or remove substances from the blood has been done for a number of years by injecting a dye into the veins or taking the dye by mouth and finding how long it takes the liver to remove all this dye from the blood. Ever since the dye method has been used there has been a controversy as to whether dye taken by mouth or dye injected into the veins, is the more accurate method.

It is gratifying to know that a new test for liver function (ability) is reported from Cuba by Drs. A. Castellanos and J. Beato-Nunez, Havana, in the Bulletin of the Cuban Society of Pediatrics.

The patient takes fruits or fruit juices instead of breakfast. A small quantity of blood is withdrawn. Then an injection of colloidal carotene is injected into the veins, the amount injected into the venis, the amount injected depending on the weight of the individual. Five minutes later blood is again withdrawn. The amount of total carotenoids in the blood is separately determined in the two different blood specimens. If the specimen of blood withdrawn five minutes after the carotene is taken is the same as the blood withdrawn before the carotene was taken, it shows that the liver is normal, doing its work properly. Any increase of the carotene in the blood five minutes after the injection into the veins of the carotene shows that the liver is not doing its work properly.

These physicians found that this simple test is as reliable and better than the "classic" tests now in use.

Rheumatic Fever Foe of Children

There is a disease of children that destroys seven times as many children as infantile paralysis, and it seems only fair that we should know about these children and what public and private help be given them. I am referring to rheumatic heart disease. Dr. Alexander T. Martin, New York city, in the Journal of the American Medical Association,

"In one sense the child stricken with infantile paralysis is more fortunate than the child stricken by rheumatism, because the child with rheumatic heart disease may have more attacks which may further cripple his activities or even cause death. In fact, each fresh attack means the likelihood of further attacks. On the other hand, infantile paralysis, as dread a disease as it is, usually causes no further attacks and the afflicted child may expect some improvement. Many children who contract infantile paralysis recover completely. Very few children who contract rheumatic fever escape without some damage to the heart."

How can these crippled hearts be helped? Dr. Martin reports his investigation over a period of 20 years (1921-41) of 1,398 children with rheumatic heart disease who were given after care in three country homes. The average age of the first attack was from six to eight years.

Of this 1,398 children 431 were dead after 20 years. Of the 967 living Dr. Martin was able to follow about 90 per cent.

To show what watchful care in an institution or in a foster home can accomplish for these heart crip ples the report states that 357 are regularly employed at gainful occu-pations, 10 have irregular employment, 260 are in a regular or public school, 83 are in a special class in school for heart patients and 14 have a visiting teacher.

They tell mel it gets quite cold here in the winter. Sometimes they have to roll down their sleeves. But the houses have no provisions for artificial heating. The water all comes from one faucet—all hot enough to bathe in. We drink the same stuff.

The houses never have wall paper, nor clear glass windows. Never have urday. They hope to be able to bring screens to doors or windows. The windows have colored glass and are always left open. So they have either bambo screens or a cross between a venetian blind and the old fashioned shutters. All homes are set on poles from six to eight feet high of the ground. But they are always well
