LABOR:

Another Crossroads

As "peace" committees of both AFL and CIO begin preparations for their meeting to bring about labor peace both Philip Murray, CIO president, and William Green, head of AFL, issued public statements indicating that they favored the objective.

There were definite signs, however, that the method of reaching the objective might encounter some difficulty along the way. For in one of his statements on the subject President Green urged that CIO: "come back to the AFL, the House of Labor."

Later in a speech to the important CIO United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America, meeting in their convention in Chicago, Philip Murray avoided all reference to this statement. But he did say: "... I hope, I pray, that their (the AFL's) attitude will have changed, that experience has taught the need for giving recognition to the aspirations and objectives of those organizations

RUSSIA:

Crisis Mounts

Not only the oil resources of the Caucasus, but the fate of Marshal Timoshenko's southern armies as well were at stake in battles in which the Russ forces attempted to stem the Nazis' relentless pincer movements. The loss of the oil would be a crippling but not necessarily fatal stab at the Soviets. But the loss of Timoshenko's armies might well be a mortal blow to the Russians' future war effort.

The critical nature of the situation was underscored by the arrival in Moscow of Gen. Follett Bradley of the United States army air forces, with a personal message from President Roosevelt to Premier Stalin. The American air chief who flew to the Russian capital on his emergency mission made no effort to hide this nation's anxiety when he said: "America is gravely concerned with the situation in this country, which is regarded as the focal point of the war."

Meanwhile one section of the Nazi juggernaut had swept on toward the Caspian sea while another pushed steadily into the northwestern Caucasus below Rostov.

HOUSEWIVES:

Face Job 'Draft'

Spokesmen for the manpower commission intimated that one out of every four American housewives between the ages of 18 and 44 may be needed in munitions jobs for this country to attain full war production.

It was indicated that a nationwide occupational registration of women might be undertaken as a means of cataloging the country's total feminine adult resources.

Paul V. McNutt, manpower chief, has estimated that about 5,000,000 more women must be placed in war jobs by the end of 1943.

STEEL:

Probe 'Black Market'

In answer to charges that a "black market" in steel existed, where "immediate delivery was made from bulging warehouses scattered over the nation," two government investigations were immediately begun.

First probe was undertaken by Price Administrator Leon Henderson after charges made by Frank Higgins, associated with his father in a New Orleans shipbuilding yard, that which make up the Congress of Industrial Organizations."

Biggest stumbling blocks in labor peace talks for the seven years that the two groups had gone their own way had been personalities and the refusal or inability of AFL to recognize CIO's organization of unions by grouping all workers in an industry into one union. AFL continued with some modifications to organize their unions through the craft system. Just how these two systems could be dovetailed where there is overlapping jurisdiction is what a peace committee had facing it.

DARK CLOUDS:

For Silver Shirts

The nation's first important sedition trial since the outbreak of the war came to a close when a federal court jury in Indianapolis found William Dudley Pelley, founder of the Fascist Silver Shirts, guilty of criminal sedition.

Pelley's co-defendants, Agnes Marion Henderson, his secretary, and Lawrence Brown, were found guilty only of conspiracy. The three were indicted originally on 12 counts, but the government counsel dropped one charge because the army and navy, acting under wartime secrecy, declined to provide official figures in answer to false statements made by Pelley regarding losses at Pearl Harbor.

Pelley was found guilty on every count in the indictment, 10 of them charging him with making false statements with the intent to cause, or attempt to cause, insubordination, mutiny and disloyalty among the armed forces. The 11th charge accused Pelley and his co-defendants of conspiring to do these things.

The three were associated in the Fellowship Press in Noblesville, Ind., where they published the Galilean magazine.

Stern Justice

Even as the erstwhile dictator of the Silver Shirts braced himself for the penalties ahead, the American public demonstrated again its stern temper when Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle pronounced a death sentence for treason upon Max Stephan, Detroit restaurant owner, for betraying his adopted country by befriending an escaped Nazi prisoner.

Stephan had previously been convicted by a federal court jury. His was the first death sentence for treason under a 152-year-old federal law.

CARGO PLANES:

Get Green Light

A "go-ahead green light" for the construction of vast cargo planes in months to come was given by both the army and navy.

Speaking for the army, Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, commander of the army air forces, told a senate military affairs committee that 21 per cent of all multiple-engine bomber planes to be produced for the remainder of 1942 will be cargo or transport carriers. Including all planes of comparable flying range, he added, 30 per cent of the total output will be essentially for cargo purposes.

LT. GEN. HENRY H. ARNOLD
 "Move paratroops; tow gliders."

General Arnold revealed that cargo and transport carriers now being produced are used to move paratroops and airborne infantry, to tow gliders and to carry supplies to combat zones. Planes are moving about 2,500,000 tons of material a week, he said.

Speaking for the navy, Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, disclosed that the navy is speeding a huge program for building cargo planes.

INDIA:

Saint or Sinner?

Mohandas K. Gandhi, saint or sabotaging politician?

That was the enigma most Americans confronted in attempting to assay the character of the benign-looking Indian leader. For when Gandhi's All-India Congress stood pat on its determination to carry out a civil disobedience movement if independence were denied, the British government made public a collection of confiscated documents which it said indicated that Gandhi advocated a deal with Japan for Indian independence.

Answering charges of "appeasement" Gandhi said:

"I purposely incorporated the sentence about negotiations with Japan and if ultimately it was dropped and I associated myself with its deletion, I did so out of regard for my co-workers—not because I was uncertain as to what I meant to do." What Gandhi meant to say was that he was using such a threat as means of bargaining with the British.

VICHY:

Heeds Pope's Plea

The voice of Pope Pius was raised in a protest to the Vichy government of their treatment of Jewish refugees in France. Speaking through the papal nuncio at the temporary French capital, the pontiff said he "neither understands nor approves" treatment given Jews and asked the Vichy government to stop "those inhuman arrests of defenseless people."

In consequence of the pope's protest, Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, chief of state, asked the German occupation authorities to limit the arrests of Paris Jews to those of non-French origin, to cease deporting French Jews to Silesia and to stop breaking up French-Jewish families.

It had been reported earlier that German and central European Jewish refugees, including those in concentration camps, had been marked for arrest.

The Pope's message to Marshal Petain was delivered by Mgr. Valerio Valeri when the Nuncio was seated beside the aged soldier-statesman at an official luncheon at the Vichy government headquarters.

SUBMARINES:

Lull Near U. S.

That American coastal waters are no longer a soft spot for German submarines was the view expressed by British officials in a communique from London. Consequently it was believed that Axis U-boats had been forced to seek other waters in which to prey on United Nations' commerce.

Adoption of the convoy system in the Panama and Caribbean areas plus increased air defenses were cited as coinciding with a decreased scale of submarine attacks.

American military authorities commenting on the recent drop in submarine sinkings, warned, however, that the Nazis might now be preparing to bring the full brunt of their overseas attack against the heavily convoyed supply lines across the North Atlantic.

Increasing Allied effectiveness against submarines was said to be due to the fact that the "bottleneck" regarding engines for submarine chasers, defensive craft and dirigibles has been broken and defensive craft are coming forward in greater numbers.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
 Consolidated Features—WNU Release.

NEW YORK—It would appear that the blizzard of report forms with which war agencies snow under business isn't entirely premeditated and somebody ought to do something about it, if anybody can. At any rate, the War Production board co-operates with a committee of business men who will try to cut down the paper overhead, by evolving simplified systems of reporting and accounting. They are waist deep in government blanks and battling their way out. The government seems 'ympathetic.

Hearing the newly organized defense forces against the paper blitz is W. J. Donald, president of the American Trade Association Executives. He is chairman of a special advisory committee which will work with the WPB, a King Canute wielding a valiant broom against the paper inundation.

Possibly this is the "managerial revolution" which young Prof. James Burnham described in his provocative book of a year or so ago. At any rate, Mr. Donald is a fair laboratory sample of the oncoming men of management of the professor's discourse, a John the Baptist in the managerial wilderness for many years, urging the managers to shake a leg and do something on their own account before being swamped by the bureaucrats. He was director of the American Management association from 1921 to 1932, scolding the managers, during this period for being "too smug" and not considering what might happen to them unless the metes and bounds between management and finance and management and government were more clearly defined and regarded.

Mr. Donald, Canadian born, naturalized in 1923, naturally will have to use up a lot more paper in his education and explorative campaign among the individual members of 1,200 trade associations, whom he will consult. He wants comments and suggestions. In Sarnia, Ont., where he was born in 1890, he attended the Sarnia Collegiate institute, and later was graduated from McMaster university at Hamilton, Ont. He came here in 1911 as manager of the installation staff of the American City bureau, making his U. S. A. career in business economics.

NEWS values shrink like depreciated currency in time of over-issue. Col. Robert L. Scott Jr. caught eight or ten lines in the paper when he flew over Mt. Everest, clearing the highest mountain in the world by a full mile. For the young colonel, this was a detail of a work-a-day hop from India to China.

War reputations build like a coral reef. Off and on for the last few weeks there has been a dribble of news about the long, lanky, Colonel Scott of Macon, Ga., working himself as a "one-man air force" in Burma and China. On June 26 he succeeded Col. Caleb V. Haynes as chief of the India-China air command. That means that he and the 21st pursuit squadron, which he commands, are the heirs of the "Flying Tigers," or the American Volunteer group which bombed its way to glory along the Burma road.

Early in this encounter, Colonel Scott demonstrated what we have fondly supposed to be our national aptitude for quick and resourceful action. A troop of Japanese was moving steadily up the Chindwin river in West Burma. The colonel had only a small pursuit plane. He swung a 550-pound bomb in it, and with it scored a bulls-eye on the advancing troop. These and similar exploits won him a silver star.

He is a former West Pointer, 34 years old, indentured in rough and tumble flying, when, with Colonel Haynes, he flew the mails, in 1934. He later commanded the 78th pursuit squadron in Panama.

Colonel Scott celebrated his 34th birthday by piloting a Flying Fortress across the South Atlantic to India and making a quick jump to North Assam in a Tomahawk Fighter.

It seems to this onlooker that the new OWI would do well to piece together the stories of self-starters like the colonel and deal them as hot news. The necessity of planning and organization being what it is, the fact remains that these lads are the real spark plugs of our fighting forces and the public would like to receive more news of them.

GENEVA: Guglielmo Ferrero, noted Italian historian and foe of the Fascists, died here at the age of 71. Seven years ago his books were seized by the Mussolini government and he was forced to flee Italy. He had taught history at the University of Geneva ever since. Among his most noted books was "The Grandeur and Decadence of Rome."

WASHINGTON: Manufacture of typewriters, except for a small quantity to be produced for the government by one factory, will end October 31, it was announced by the War Production board in an order released here. The order likewise limited the production of most typewriter companies between July 1 and October 1 to 12 1/2 per cent of the machines sold by them last year.

TO YOUR Good Health

By DR. JAMES A. BARTON
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

VITAMINS
You are reading about vitamins every day, about their importance in the diet, and their effect upon the general health, yet if you were to be asked to describe a vitamin you might find it difficult to do so. I have been somewhat familiar with vitamins since the last war but I also would have difficulty in defining them.

In this book "Vitamins," Dr. Henry Borsook, professor of biochemistry, California Institute of Technology, says: "The fact is that the discovery of vitamins and of the role they play in human health is the most important medical advance so far made in this century. It has taught us what the essentials are in food. It has given us new insights into the chemistry of the body. But most important, it has given us the means of greatly raising the standard of health and well-being of all of us."

Everywhere we are seeing newspaper and magazine articles about the value of the vitamins in certain diseases. Thus, vitamin A is used in eye disease, B in neuritis, arthritis, lack of appetite, C in scurvy, D in rickets, and E in certain gland deficiencies. However, while this is important, not more than a fraction of the population is suffering with these diseases and Dr. Borsook points out that even larger groups need vitamins although they have no special disease.

"The really serious problem is that the general level of health is lower than it needs to be. Defective vision in dim light, most constipation and dyspepsia, the small aches and pains of middle age, poor teeth, thinning bones, general fatigue and lack of tone—these are all very often caused by insufficient amounts of vitamins in our ordinary diets over a period of many years."

How can we be sure of getting enough vitamins for our daily needs?

Diet experts have worked out tables of the everyday requirements of each vitamin for children and adults but if, in addition to our regular diet of bread, potatoes and meat, we make sure every day of average servings of dairy products—milk, butter, cheese—and green vegetables—lettuce, spinach, cabbage, beet and carrot tops—we will get all the vitamins we need.

Purpose of Liver And Gall Bladder

What may be hard to understand is why fat foods must be avoided in liver and gall bladder disturbances; yet it is known that fat food helps to empty the gall bladder promptly, thus preventing gall bladder symptoms such as pain and gas formation.

While it is true that fat foods—butter, cream, bacon—help empty the gall bladder, it requires but a small amount of these fat foods to do this, and eating more fat foods than the liver can handle properly brings about the sluggishness of liver and gall bladder with the usual symptoms arising from this sluggishness—pain in upper right side of abdomen, gas pressure, bloating and sometimes nausea and vomiting.

When man was created his body was, and still is, covered with huge masses of muscle. These muscles were not meant to simply carry him about and reach for his food. These huge muscles were meant to work, to help man hunt for food, carry burdens, fight or run as necessity arose. To keep these huge muscles healthy, man was meant to use them every day. And to keep these muscles nourished man was meant to eat all kinds of food including fat foods.

What we find, however, is that man eats plenty of food but because modern life makes it unnecessary to work or carry burdens, the circulation of the blood in the liver is not stimulated to action as much as it should be and so enough bile is not manufactured to take care of the fats and sugars eaten.

An active liver manufacturing bile in large quantities gives a buoyant feeling, whereas a sluggish liver makes one discouraged or even a "quitter."

As man was meant to use his muscles, take deep breaths and bend his body, simple daily exercises—walking, bending, deep breathing—will stimulate the flow of bile in liver and keep gall bladder emptying regularly.

ISAAC PRACTICES PEACE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 26:12-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.—Matthew 5:9.

To talk peace in a warring world seems almost futile, and so it is, unless it be the peace of God. In a world largely dominated by the philosophy that might makes right, and in which men demand what they call their rights, taking them even by lawless and violent methods, it is increasingly difficult to proclaim the truth that patience and meekness are not weakness, but are Christian virtues worth emulating.

The story of Isaac is interesting from beginning to end. He was an ordinary man, one of the common people. He had come through varied experiences of victory and defeat before the time of our lesson. Fearing a famine, and apparently not trusting God at the moment, he had gone down from the promised land to the country of the Philistines, there digging the wells which his father Abraham had dug. The result was that he prospered. Ere long, however, envy on the part of his enemies taught Isaac that—

I. Peace in This World Is Temporary (vv. 18-21).

Isaac had prospered, but he was still out of the promised land, and while he was in the land of Philistines he could expect no permanent peace.

We are in the world. We long for peace, and would throw all our influence and service into the cause of bringing a righteous peace to the troubled peoples of the world. But let us not be misled by that desire into the support of unscriptural and impossible peace programs. This world is a sinful world, and as long as that is true, there will be strife and war, that men (as James puts it) may have the gains thereof for their own pleasure.

Our business in such a world is to preach the gospel of grace, winning men to Christ, that they may become men of good-will. Isaac was such a man, willing to yield even what seemed to be his right, rather than cause contention.

Undoubtedly there are times when one must defend his name and his possessions, but all too often those who do "stand for their rights" have wrecked homes, churches, and nations, and have gained nothing but an empty victory.

The peace of this world is temporary. Is there then no real abiding peace and joy?

II. Abiding Joy Is Found in Fellowship With God (vv. 22-25).

When Isaac came up into Canaan, the land which God had promised to him, he found real peace and an abiding joy in renewed fellowship with God. Even so, the Christian man and woman who will step out of a spiritually destructive fellowship with the ungodly world and come over wholeheartedly into the spiritual Canaan of full consecration and separated living, will find true peace and satisfying communion with God.

Our thought, however, has wider application—one much needed today. There is to come a time when this world will have true and abiding peace which shall cover the earth like the waters cover the sea. When the One who has the right to reign, the Lord Jesus Christ, returns to take His throne, then, and not before, will there be true peace.

We await that day with longing which grows more intense as men grow more violent in their hatred. But is there nothing more we can do? Yes, we learn from Isaac's experience that—

III. A Godly Life Is a Testimony to Warring Men (vv. 26-31).

These men were wicked men, even speaking falsehood in their claim of friendship toward Isaac (v. 29). Now that they perceived that God was continually blessing Isaac in spite of their repeated injustice toward him, they decided that it would be well to make a covenant of friendship with him. Even those who follow the way of war and aggression cannot deny the effectiveness of true Christian testimony.

Observe also that by his patience and kindness Isaac ultimately made friends out of his enemies. "It is better to turn enemies into friends than to beat them, and have them enemies still." And so this man with the patient, self-sacrificing spirit brought peace not only to himself, but to those about him, because he believed and trusted God. "When a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him" (Prov. 16:7).

What can we do to bring peace today? We can pray that God will help America and her allied nations to turn to Him in repentance of sin, and in a desire to so honor His name that He may be able to give His blessing. When Hezekiah spread before the Lord the threat of his enemy, God undertook for him in a mighty way, because his heart was right toward God (Isa. 37:14-20).

Will he do less for us?

Englishman Wouldn't Take Chance on Blooming Bomb

An enemy plane passed over a certain district in England one night, and the following morning a man told his neighbor that an unexploded incendiary bomb had fallen into his bedroom.

"Throw it into the garden?" inquired the neighbor.

"Can't do that," was the reply. "It's six feet long."

"Good gracious," gasped the neighbor, "that's not an incendiary—that's a high explosive! Have you been sleeping in the bedroom with that thing all night?"

"Not bloomin' likely... I slept on the couch in the drawing-room!"

GHOST PLANE

By ARTHUR STRINGER W. N. U. SERVICE

THE STORY SO FAR: To keep Norland Airways in business Alan Slade agrees to fly a so-called scientist named Frayne and his assistant, Karnell, to the Anawotto river in search of the trumpeter swan. With the proceeds his partner, Cruger, has bought a new plane, a Lockheed, which is stolen. When Slade returns from the Anawotto he starts out, with only two clues, to recover the plane. The first clue is the "devil bird" which the blind eskimo, Umanak, hears. Dr. Morlock, the "flying Padre," has operated on Umanak's eyes in the hope of restoring his sight. If the operation is successful Umanak will be able to help Slade. The second clue is Slade's hunch that the lost plane and the swan-hunter are somehow connected. But when he flies back to where he left Frayne he finds him apparently just hunting swans. There is no sign of the plane. But on the way home he learns that his gas cache at the cabin of Zeke and Minty, two old prospectors, has been robbed. He tells Cruger of a third clue, the disappearance of a flyer named Slim Tumstead, who knows about both the Lockheed and Frayne's expedition. Zeke and Minty discover prospectors near their camp and set out to investigate. Now Slade is talking to Lynn Morlock, the Padre's daughter. Now continue with the story.

"That's all I'm getting out of it," he contended. "And I'm about fed up."

"I've been over it," answered the man with the Viking eyes. "That's where I took those two swan-hunters."

"Wait a minute," cried the Flying Padre, arrested by a sudden thought. "What was the nationality of those swan-hunters?"

"It's hard to say," Slade explained. "But a good deal of their equipment was German. They were certainly foreigners."

"German?" meditated the older man. "That doesn't seem to fit in."

"Fit in with what?" asked the flyer.

"With what's been happening along the coast here. Short-wave sets have been picking up messages from time to time in Russian. A good part of it, they tell me, is in code that can't be made out."

"It might be a whaler," ventured Lynn, "between here and Echo Harbor."

"Then me go Echo Harbor," was the unexpected cry from Umanak, "and find out."

But Lynn disregarded that cry.

"Don't you remember, Dad, how we kept picking up stuff like that when the Russians made their transpolar flight three years ago?"

"Yes, I remember," said the Flying Padre. "But where are these people sending from? And what would a Russian be doing in this back yard of Nowhere today?"

"That," said Slade as he glanced down the talus slope toward the Snow-Ball Baby that floated in the shallows, "is what I'm going to find out."

Slade crouched low in one of these hollows and struck a match, wondering if the light would show up a tell-tale vein of gold-bearing quartz. But all he saw was dark and pitch-like rock.

He went on up the slope, puzzled by the repeated signs of an enterprise that seemed without meaning or purpose. Then he stopped short, arrested by a movement above him.

In the vague light he could see a man, a huge-bodied man stripped to the waist, moving along the ridge crest. Balanced on his shoulders he carried what had every appearance of an ore bag, an ore bag so heavy that the big body bent forward under its weight. He seemed to be following a path that led into the scrub timber ending abruptly in the shimmer of lake water.

Slade, watching from the shadows, saw that figure return empty-handed along the hilltop trail. Then he saw it once more forge lakeward, once more burdened with the weight of its ore bag. He could not be sure, but something about that great body with its gorilla-like arms made him think of Karnell. And if it was Karnell, Slade felt, the man who called himself Frayne would be somewhere in the neighborhood.

That thought prompted the watcher to push farther up the slope, seeking the cover of the underbrush as he went. He crept on until he crossed a well-trodden trail and again entered the underbrush that furred the declining hill slope. From there he could see a strange-looking structure of spruce boles partly obstructing the view of the lake water between the shoudering hills. In the rocky cup behind the odd-looking spruce canopy he saw a small tent, and beside this tent he caught sight of a small campfire carefully ceilinged by a tarpaulin on four stakes.

But what held his attention was a figure squatting beside that fire, a figure in a leather flying jacket. He could not make out the man's face. But he could see him replace a coffee-pot on the coals and drink from a granite cup, which he tossed aside when he had emptied it. Then the man by the fire looked up as a second man spoke to him, apparently from inside the tent.

"Not on your life," cried the man beside the fire. "I'll be damned if you'll get me to do any navy work."

What was said in response to that Slade could not hear.

"I sweat enough unloading the damned stuff," contended the man in the flyer's jacket.

A figure emerged from between the tent-flaps and stood looking down at the fireside lounge.

"You would sweat less, my friend," the newcomer said with steely-voiced precision, "if you restricted your use of alcohol."

The other's laugh was not pleasant.

"That's all I'm getting out of it," he contended. "And I'm about fed up with living like a timber wolf."

"But that plane must be loaded, a ton a trip," retorted his companion. "And Karnell can do only so much."

Slade knew then that his guess had not been wide of the mark. The huge-bodied man who carried the ore bags was indeed Karnell. And the indignant figure standing above the man who still squatted beside the campfire was Frayne. When, a moment later, the fireside squatter rose to his feet and stood with his face to the light, Slade saw that it was Tumstead.

"Your bulthead can do the loading," Tumstead was saying. "I'm a flyer."

"Who's drinking too much to keep a clear head," amended Frayne.

"What I drink," retorted the other, "is my own affair. I've carried your cargoes and kept this crate afloat, haven't I? And now that an outsider or two is edging in on your little enterprise I'd rather like to know where I get off when the blow-up comes."

"There will be no blow-up, as you term it," was the cold-noted response. "And there will be no edging in on this enterprise."

"But there's a snooper or two around this camp, and you know it. And when they stumble over what you're after I'm left out on a limb."

CHAPTER XII

"What's wrong?" Lynn asked, startled by that newer note where fearlessness had always reigned. "Cruger and I may go bust. We haven't been able to spot our stolen Lockheed."

Lynn's brow furrowed with thought.

"But who could get away with a thing like that?" she asked. "Even in country like this?"

Instead of answering that question, Slade asked one of his own.

"Have you ever stopped to ask what became of your friend Slim Tumstead, the flyer you fixed up after that bar-room fight?"

Lynn's frown deepened.

"I'd scarcely call him a friend," she objected. "He needed help, and I gave it to him."

"But they'd taken Tumstead's ticket away, remember. He's lawless and reckless. And he was at the end of his rope."

"And is probably drowning his sorrows in some McMurray gin mill," suggested the girl.

"On the contrary," said Slade, "he dropped out of sight there, without leaving a trace."

"But what would he do with a plane?"

"That's what I want to figure out," affirmed Slade. "It couldn't be just cheap-john smuggling. And it couldn't be high-grading. Not, at least, unless that man of science who calls himself Frayne is fooling us. Our birdman, of course, might be putting on an act."

"But mining and trapping is all anyone could do in country like that. He wouldn't be smuggling out marten and fox."

"It's not furs, naturally," conceded Slade. "But why is a plane flying between Echo Harbor and the Anawotto? And where did that plane come from? And who's flying it?"

"You're as bad as Umanak," Lynn observed as they stepped into the rough-boarded surgery. "That's what he keeps asking."

But Umanak surprised them by an abrupt movement of his bandaged head.

"Kabluna come back," he quietly announced.

That, Lynn knew, meant the Flying Padre. And her quick cross to the door confirmed Umanak's announcement.

"It's Father," said the girl, with her eyes on the blur of blue that grew bigger as she watched.

He could hear her cry of "Dad!" as she ran light-footed down the talus slope.

The Flying Padre's greeting to Slade was cordial but preoccupied.

"You're just in time, Alan," Lynn's father asserted, "to see whether I'm still a surgeon or not. We're going to unsheath our old friend Umanak."

Slade tried to be casual as they darkened the little surgery and examined the patient. But he was, he felt, the most excited of the three.

The Flying Padre, after a study of his patient's face, reached to the shelf for a candle, which he lighted.

"You see now?" he questioned as he held the small flame well above his head.

"Me see," said Umanak.

"High or low?"

"High up," answered Umanak.

The Flying Padre blew out the candle.

"And now?" he asked.

Slade could feel Lynn's fingers tighten on his arm.

"Me no see," was the old Eskimo's answer. "Light gone."

Slade could hear Morlock's sigh of relief as he stepped back and stood straighter.

"Me go find devil-bird now!" cried Umanak.

"That happens to be my job," said Slade.

"What's this talk about a devil-bird?" asked the Flying Padre, looking up from his instrument bag.

Slade explained about the plane that had been seen between Echo Harbor and the Anawotto. But the man of medicine was not impressed.

"I see planes," he observed, "in some mighty unexpected places."

The Flying Padre's gaze rested on the younger man's face.

"That's mean country to meander about in," he said.

Lynn Says:

Household Tips: Are you wondering how those pots and pans are going to last for the duration? Since the production for these has been sharply curtailed, you will want hints on keeping them in "cooking" condition:

Aluminum: Leaving food in aluminum longer than necessary, soaking the utensil before washing and alkalies such as soda spell short wear for this metal. If you want to clean aluminum without endangering its wearing period, use very fine scouring powder or steel wool for discolorations. Or, cooking acid foods like tomatoes, rhubarb and apples will do the trick.

Iron: Wash in hot, sudsy water. If this doesn't clean it, use hot soda and water. If rusted, use scouring powder or steel wool. Always dry completely and wrap in paper for storage.

Tin: This metal does not keep shiny indefinitely. Remove burnt foods by boiling in soda and water for five minutes, never longer. Rinse and dry thoroughly.

Farm Building Must Have Board's Permit

WPB Recognizes Need of Limited Construction

County war boards of the United States department of agriculture will co-operate with the War Production board in handling applications for authorization to begin construction work on farms, the War Production board announced.

The United States department of agriculture is co-operating with the WPB in formulating policies under which county and state U. S. D. A. war boards will make recommendations covering farm residential and agricultural construction. Projects recommended by these boards will be forwarded to the War Production board for final approval.

Order L-41, issued by the War Production board, prohibits the start of unauthorized construction projects which use materials, labor and construction equipment needed in the war effort, and places all new publicly and privately financed construction under rigid control.

The War Production board recognizes that a limited amount of construction by farmers is necessary to maintain and increase production to meet agricultural goals and that certain off-the-farm facilities are also needed for the production, handling and processing of farm products.

A farmer planning to begin construction which needs authorization should consult his county United States department of agriculture war board.

All farm projects, including residential, agricultural, and off-the-farm construction, such as warehouses, processing plants, creameries, etc., will be considered first by the United States department of agriculture county war boards. Applications for projects recommended by these boards will be sent to state war boards and then to the department of agriculture.

The department will consider the recommendations and send to the War Production board for final approval those which are deemed essential.

So far as residential construction is concerned, farm dwellings are covered by the same regulations as other residential construction. If farm residential construction, during any 12-month period, costs less than $500 per farm, no authorization is necessary. Likewise no authorization is required for construction begun prior to April 9, 1942; for maintenance and repairs; or for reconstruction or restoration of farm residential construction damaged or destroyed after December 31, 1941, by fire, flood, tornado, earthquake, act of God or by public enemy.

Take Care of Your Milking Machine as Parts Are Hard to Get

The milking machine is essential to wartime agricultural production, and must be cared for properly because shortages of rubber and metal will not permit normal replacement.

The following rules for the care of rubber milking machine parts are suggested:

Use two separate sets of liners alternating them each week. Rubber needs "rest."

Keep liners tight in teat-cup shells.

Keep milker rubber parts clean and free from all butterfat, which causes deterioration.

Rubber cuts easily when wet. Use care in assembly and disassembly of units.

Do not use chlorine solutions of a strength exceeding 250 parts per million, for excessively strong chlorine solutions will injure rubber.

If lye is used in the care of rubber parts, be sure that it does not remain in contact with the metal parts.

Battling Soil Erosion

Legume crops such as alfalfa, clover, soybeans and lespedeza are being used with increasing success as "heavy artillery" in fighting the battle of soil erosion. Legumes keep the topsoil in place, deposit nitrogen in soil and provide it with needed supplies of organic matter. To do their best work, legumes should be reinforced by intelligent soil management such as the use of fertilizers high in phosphorus and potash

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed, the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.
