his wife, Lee, are on their way to Tierra Libre when Jeff receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. Jeff is to be chief engineer for a newly organized fruit company. They arrive in Tierra Libre to find both Zora Mitchell and her husband dead, and Jeff suspects they were murdered. He learns from Jerry McInnis, a former associate who works for a rival fruit company, that there is something strange going on and that Mitchell and Zora were killed because they knew too much. A conversation with his employer, Senor Montaya, confirms Jeff's suspicions. Montaya shows him pictures of Zora's body. Her fingers, holding a German gun, are not tightly clasped, as they would be if she had pulled the trigger herself. NOW CONTINUE WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER V

On his way home to lunch Jeff's step was springy as a boy's. As he let the gate slam behind him, Buddy and Chuck jumped from ambush behind the hedge. This brought about a free-for-all on the lawn until the resultant bedlam made Lee, watching from the screened livingroomveranda, put fingers to her ears.

"Hey, Man-mountain!" she called to Curt. "You're worse than the boys. You know better, they don't. We have neighbors, remember." Curt snatched up the youngsters to march inside. 'Lunch ready? I'm starved." "Yes, but you!" she eyed him sorrowfully. "Look at you. Your only fresh whites! You look like a street cleaner on a rainy day." Curt chuckled and pulled her to him.

"Well, you didn't marry a glamour boy. Anyway, I won't need these again for a while. I'm making the first round this afternoon, so get out my boots and field clothes. And pack my old musette bag for overnight. Won't be back till sometime tomorrow."

During lunch Curt was full of the job ahead of him, but the meal was nearly over before he realized Lee hadn't been listening with the proper enthusiasm. That pucker had returned to her forehead and it brought back a string of questions to his own mind. He paused to give her a chance.

"About Zora Mitchell, Jeff," she

"Yes." Curt set down his glass of iced tea, carefully. "I saw photographic evidence this morning. They took pictures when they found her. I reckon it's pretty conclusive." He tried to speak lightly.

She was silent a moment. "But her child, so little and all alone. I kept thinking all morning what if it were Bud—" Lee bit her lip. "Don't you think, Jeff, we could take her until arrangements are made to send her north?"

"A swell idea, Lee! I should've thought of it myself. They're looking after her at the hospital nursery. I'll speak to Montaya this afternoon."

Curt reached the San Alejo station before Montaya, equipped for the field on this first tour of the C. A. T. tract. His khaki breeches, though just unfolded from his trunk, bore stains no soap could ever remove. His battered Stetson was faded and spotted from sun and rain.

A .45 hung loosely at his side, as integral a part of his outfit as the scarred boots. A bulging musette bag that had seen much service and a pair of field glasses were slung over his shoulder.

First sight of Montaya swinging down the path to the station brought a chuckle to Curt's lips. Lee's epithet, "The Dark Lily," popped into mind—and settled there for good.

He kept his promise to Lee, raising the subject of the Mitchell child before they set out.

Montaya knit his brows, selected one of his long Turkish cigarettes, fished a lighter from his pocket. "Your former acquaintance with the Mitchells," he finally said, "is no reason for you to feel responsibility toward the child."

"We're not making the suggestion out of duty," Curt replied, a bit shortly.

Montaya studied the ash forming on the end of his cigarette. Why so much deliberation, Curt wondered, over so simple a matter? He frowned. At length Montaya spoke. "I have been unable yet to locate the relatives. According to our records there are only two-sisters of Mrs. Mitchell, and they-ah, travel in theatrical work. It will take time to make arrangements. If Mrs. Curtis will be so kind, then. The child is not happy at the nursery." As they rolled down the mountainside Curt had a better view of the airfield than from the unexpected glimpse of it the day before. Again today Curt noted the length of the field, but at once realized a long runway was necessary for heavily loaded planes. His eyes traveling down the wide strip caught a glimpse, but hardly more than that, of what seemed to be a duplicate set of buildings at the far end. They were shaded by the big copse of trees left standing there, but at that end of the field the grass was grown, there was no runway. Evidently these buildings were not in use-at least as hangars. However, along the barely visible front of the buildings ran a platform breast high, and serving this platform was a spur track leading from the airfield branch, Curt would have missed the platform if the track hadn't suggested it.

"A bodega?" he asked; and be-fore realizing the impertinence he was offering, "Funny place for it."

But Montaya was not offended. He gave a short, deprecative laugh. "My reason for locating them where I did was to take advantage of those trees for the comfort of they selected." 'And the old buildings?"

"I will tear them down when I need the materials. Meanwhile, they serve as a bodega. I have some choice stocks of rosewood and hard mahogany curing there. And cirue-Also much pipe and pump machinery which I was able to pick up very cheaply in bankrupt sales. One must save where one can. For the overhead irrigation system we install later. I shall send you the inventory for your perusal.'

Twice on the run Curt stopped Montaya to inspect the work of ballasting in progress. On the second stop, where a crew was cribbing a section of the roadbed and installing a culvert, he found the engineer in charge was a man he'd known previously in Tierra Libre.

Bill Henderson was a lanky, happy-go-lucky individual, with a mop of sandy hair burnt by tropic sun. His skin was like leather, his eyes so straight and pale that they made him seem to stare. But for all his rough exterior, he had a sheepish air in greeting Curt.

"Hiya, fella." Henderson grinned amiably, it might have been only yesterday they last met. "Heard you were coming."

"So, Bill, you finally broke away from Associated. You threatened to often enough."

"Well, uh, guess it was the other way around, Curt. They broke loose from me."

"How come?" "Oh, reckon I went on one too many benders.'

"What! Have they gone Sunday School on us over there?"

"Uh, no, Curt. I cut up a bit one

Curt surveyed the other. Under Henderson's open shirt were spots and blotches of dull red forming a solid blemish of the skin, ending jaggedly at the collarbone. Curt remembered that Henderson had always been too lazy to treat this skin

But there was something decidedly peculiar in Henderson's manner, in his careful words. The man didn't | from the old days.' have to be on good behavior with Curt. He'd never been so restrained in the old days. Perhaps Montaya's filthy hat pushed back until sweatsilent presence threw a damper on the meeting. Curt commenced to stuff his pipe absently.

"Didn't get in any serious trouble, did you?"

"No." Henderson grinned feebly. "But they kinda thought a change of scenery might do me some good."

"So you crossed the river! Should've gone home. How you doing now?"

"Oh, I've been off the stuff for some time."

"Shake on that, Bill." Nothing wrong with his grip, thought Curt, wincing. "Tell you what, when you feel the urge again, look me up before you start in. I'll see you don't go too far. Anyway, we'll have to have a get-together soon for old time's sake. Come up to San Alejo. Lee will be glad to see you again."

"Sure, Curt, thanks."

Inspecting the job in hand, questioning the capacity of that size culvert, passing a few more words, took twenty minutes. Montaya took little or no part in the talk. Once Curt noticed the senor looking attentively from him to Bill Henderson, but gave it no thought.

On their way again Curt said, 'Darn good worker, Bill Henderson. Only fault is he never could leave liquor alone. He can usually handle t, but it does him out of a future.' Montaya shrugged noncommittal-

They reached Tempujo by midafternoon. From here they'd take a power launch up the river to the main levee camp. First, however, Montaya led the way down the ridged asphalt footpath to the Tempujo engineering office.

Half of this building, all one side of it, was a single large room with almost continuous windows in three walls. Here was drafting equipment, engineering instruments.

An intelligent-looking native, at present tracing maps, was in charge of the office. Lauriano Duro bowed stiffly when introduced, then went on with his work. While Montaya selected a couple of maps to take along on their trip upriver, he explained, "We maintain a duplicate set of our important drawings here, Mr. Curtis. This serves two purposes, convenience and insurance against fire.'

Curt nodded approvingly. The other half of the building was further divided. A screened porch in front was combination livingroom and outer office. In back of this was a small bedroom. Through an open door on the other side of the bedroom Curt could see a shower cubicle.

"This you will find most convenient when your work holds you at this end of the planting," Montaya remarked. "You use the messhall for meals."

Curt grinned. "Good enough!" They had thought of everything here.

The old Tempujo radio shack at the river dock now housed the dispatcher and his small switchboard that served Tempujo. Here ended the two telephone lines from San Alejo, one used by the dispatcher, one for general utility. They still maintained the radio, too, against emergency. Montaya entered this office to talk with San Alejo before leaving for the levee camp. Curt strode about outside.

The dock hoist was lifting a huge case from the deck of a river steamer. It was one of the crated airplane wings Curt had seen in the wharf shed at Cabeza.

Rising up over the edge of the wharf, it loomed even bigger than Curt had thought, bigger than necessary for the plane he'd seen on the ground at the airfield that afternoon. Then he remembered there were two planes in use here. But both were alike, Montaya had mentioned, as a matter of economy in servicing and replacing parts. Well, boxing increases size, Curt rea-

Senor Montaya joined him as Curt was nodding his satisfaction. Answering the raised brows, Curt said, 'Good idea, spares. I hope you're as generous with the Engineering Department."

Montaya showed his excellent teeth. He didn't mind praise. "You will have no cause to complain, Mr.

Curtis." The Negro rolled swift, even at this season, obliging the launch to fight its way upstream. When they reached the ever-moving camp of the levee gang it was too late to go out on the job that night. After a wash-up, Montaya and Curt busied themselves with maps and progress reports in the office tent, until the fast-obliterating darkness drove the construction gang into camp. Again Curt found an old friend among these workers.

"Slats!" he called to the bulky man pushing his feet wearily down the camp road. "I'll be damned!"

"Hello, Curt! Glad you're on the job. It'll seem like old times again."

"Has all the old guard left Associated, Slats?" "No. We've got a number over here, but I reckon you won't know many of 'em. Myself and Bill Henderson-" "Yeh, met him."

"-and Steve Harvey, and Law son . . . well, only us, I guess,

Slats, naked to the waist, his dirty shirt slung across his shoulder, a soaked hair escaped in a tangle. showed strong teeth as he smiled, teeth yellow with tobacco stains. But for all the friendliness of the grin, he seemed uneasy.

Montaya stood nearby. Again Curt caught a thoughtful look in the Spaniard's eyes. Or was it speculative? At any rate, the look vanished as Montaya said, "Mr. Harvey and Mr. Lawson are on the drainage laterals."

To Monahan Curt said, "Slats, how come so many of you left Associated?"

"Oh," Monahan replied hesitating-"they started pinching pennies for one thing, and Senor Montaya pays good wages." Then, as though he hadn't said enough, "Besides, this's a new planting, and you know how most of us feel about a new job. It's more fun building than maintaining."

Army, Navy in Need Of Goose Feathers

Plucking Live Geese Will Help Farm Income

Plucking live geese is one way farmers may be able to help their country in wartime and at the same time pick up some extra money.

Geese feathers are in considerable demand for use in making flying suits for aviators and in other ways to protect American soldiers and sailors against the cold.

The feathers are now bringing a good price. Poultry raisers usually pluck the feathers from live geese prior to molting. A few pick as often as every six weeks during the spring, summer, and early fall, while others pick only once or twice a year, either in the spring or fall.

Feathers are plucked only when the quills appear dry and do not contain blood. Both young and old geese are plucked. About a pound of feathers may be plucked from a goose during a year.

Feathers are never pulled after November 15, or the geese will not be in full feather for marketing; neither are they picked during the breeding seathe soft feathers on the breast, back, and abdomen are pulled.

Not more than five quill feathers should be pulled from each wing. Enough short feathers to provide support underneath the wings are always left.

Feathers are partly cured before they are shipped by placing them in sacks of loosely woven material hung in the loft of a building where there is good air circulation. Feathers in the bags are stirred occasionally during this curing period.

Scrap in Barnyard

Suppose you stood in your barnyard and watched plane after plane fly over and drop in the nearby pasture a 100-pound bomb every second of every minute of every hour of every day for more than three years.

Well, there's enough scrap iron and steel on the farms of the United States (1,250,000 tons) to enable Uncle Sam's airplanes to drop that number of bombs on the enemy throughout the world.

Farmers are urged to aid the nation's program of victory by collecting and selling all their old scrap iron and steel.

If the 1,250,000 tons of scrap iron and steel on American farms were collected and used in the making of battleships there would be enough to make more than twice as many as there are today.

Recent reports coming in from rural area scrap-collecting headquarters show that, despite the shortage of farm help, the longer hours being faced by the farmers, scrap is being collected in amounts which, although satisfactory, could be doubled easily enough if everyone did his bit.

Agricultural Notes

As the 1942 cotton picking season gets underway, farmers are confronted with grade and staple premiums and discounts entirely different from those of recent years.

The proper handling of apples during harvesting and packing and the use of proper storage methods before shipment will lessen the load on war-burdened transportation

Bitter Russian Fight Depicted Using United States as Conflict Scene.

NEW YORK .- If the Battle of Russia, which to many Americans' ears may be registering only as a distant rumble of unpronounceable names of unfamiliar cities and rivers, were occurring on the same scale in America instead of the Soviet Union the vastness of the Russ-Nazi battleground would strike home more thoroughly.

Then Chicago would be in the place of Moscow, St. Louis substituted for Stalingrad, and the Ozarks seen as the Caucasus, according to the Russian War Relief, Inc., this city, the organization designated by the President's War Relief Control board to send medical supplies, drugs, concentrated food, clothing and other aid to our Russian allies.

CHICAGO.—The battle for St. Louis went into its sixth week today with renewed German attacks on a huge scale. New divisions of Germans were reported to be assailing the American lines over thousands of their own dead.

No estimate of United States casualties was released, but defenders of the city were holding out with a heroism and sacrifice beyond description.

On the St. Louis battle hinges control of the Mississippi, America's last North-South transportation route. Some idea of the significance of this route may be obtained from the fact that twothirds of America's oil has been carried on Mississippi barges since the loss of most of the territory east of the river.

If St. Louis falls, this artery will be severed. German strategy then probably will be to skirt the foothills of the Ozarks and drive ahead to the rich Oklahoma oil fields, major source of America's fuel supply. America would then be dependent on oil shipments from far-off Britain and Russia, with all the attendant shipping difficulties.

Medical Supplies Arriving.

The only bright spot for Americans in today's press were a report of arrival at San Francisco of a consignment of medical supplies and emergency food requirements, sent by American War Relief of Moscow, and news that U. S. troops have pushed back the Germans for several miles around Chicago, which has been besieged for nine months, somewhat relieving the city's position. American forces today stand in this desperate situation:

The United States has lost most of the Eastern states, with their great industrial plants-including three-fifths of the iron ore supply and half the pig iron production capacity, a large portion of the coal mining industry and many of the nation's largest tank, truck, plane and arms factories.

The Germans occ of the country's agricultural lands, containing 50,000,000 of the richest cultivated acres.

About 40 million people, caught in the swift German advance of last summer, are rebellious slaves of the invaders.

Forty Million Evacuated Westward. Another 40 million were evacuated westward, along with industrial equipment, machinery, farm tools, and supplies-even including one whole blast furnace.

As a result of the migration, it is believed agricultural production this year will be sufficient to keep Americans fed through the coming winter, though on a lower level than formerly.

Despite such hardships, there is no sign that Americans have lost any of their determination to fight to victory. Two-thirds of the women in unoccupied America are working for the war effort as much as 12 and 13 hours a day-20 million of them in agriculture, 19 million in industry, and 11 million in the auxiliary army serv-

Restoring Wounded to Action. One of the amazing things about this war has been the record set by the American Army Medical services. Seventy per cent of the wounded have been restored to action, and the surgeon general expects this figure to rise above 80 per cent, only 1.5 per cent of the wounded have died.

The surgeon general warns, however, that this record can be kept up only if there is a steady stream of medical and surgical supplies from the outside world, for the vast number of casualties has drained reserves of these vital COURAGEOUS young man received the honor due him recently when the National league's most valuable player award for 1942 went to Morton Cecil Cooper, the big righthanded pitching ace of the amazing St. Louis Cardinals.

The award signalized a remarkable recovery by Cooper from an operation performed last summer on his elbow. The operation was a desperate—and successful —effort to prolong his pitching career. The 28-year-old hurler from Missouri, who won 22 games to lead the

Billy Southworth

Redbirds into the World Series and eventual world's championship, was named by a committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America. He received 13 of the committee's 24 first place votes and 263 out of a possible 336 points in the balloting. He was the only player whose name appeared on every ballot.

The rating was determined solely on the basis of the regular season. His rather unhappy experience in the series-when he was twice lambasted by the Yankees-did not enter into the balloting. Nor did the fact that he was knocked out of the box in the first inning of the All-Star game influence the voting.

Behind him in second place with 200 points was Enos ("Country") Slaughter, Cards' slugging right fielder, who barely nosed out Mel Ott, manager of the New York Giants. These three and Martin Marion, Cardinal shortstop, were the only players to receive first place

All Around Value

The award is based on the allaround value of a player to his club, as well as his individual performance. Ott, Slaughter and Marion deserved consideration-they were strong candidates for the top honor.

MORT COOPER

Cooper pitched the entire game in every contest that he won, and led the majors in shutouts with 10. The last mark is the greatest number of shutouts a National league hurler has achieved since 1933.

Manager Billy Southworth gave him the toughest, most important pitching assignments, so his 22 victories came the hard way. It was largely through his success that the Cards were sparked to success in the stretch battle with the Dodgers.

Uphill Battle

Cooper's selection climaxed an uphill battle. The arm ailment about the middle of the 1941 season apparently cut short his career as a major leaguer after three years of no more than mediocre success with the Cards. Last year he won 13 games and lost nine, even though out of action during a large part of the campaign. This was the most victories he had won in three years with the Cards. He gambled on an operation. The outcome is evidenced by the manner in which he mowed his way through the National league this past season.

It is interesting to note that his 13-9 record brought him one vote for third place-good for eight pointsin the 1941 balloting that gave Dolph Camilli of the Dodgers the valuable player award.

Slaughter was ranked somewhere in the first 10 selections by 21 of the baseball writers, and Ott by 22. Mickey Owen, aggressive catcher for Brooklyn, came in fourth with 103 points.

Incidentally, Cooper is sure that the 13 votes he received for first place must have some special significance. During the Cardinals' summer campaign he couldn't get past his 13th victory while the No. 13 was on his uniform. He discarded the number and started a winning streak.

Collects 286 Rare Odors

Collecting rare odors is the hobby of Dr. Ralph Bienfang of the University of Oklahoma school of pharmacy. He has 286 of them from far corners of the earth, such as oil of rose from Baghdad; hyssop from control Asia and advantage from central Asia and zdravetze from Bulgaria. Dr. Bienfang preserves the odor in oil and transfers it to a card. The card holds the odor or as long as two years and is filed in a card index.

Most Mammals Color-Blind

It is not true, says Author Roy Chapman Andrews, that oulls get mad when they see red-all mammals except monkeys and men are color-blind. Many animals can be taught to detect slight differences of shade, but when variously colored disks emitting the same intensity of light are presented, the animals are baffled. Thus a dog sees the world, including his master, in various shades of gray, as in a photograph. But birds, fish and insects can distinguish colors.

RUBBER MIRAGE

Unfortunate, inside fact regarding our grandiose plans to get rubber from the Amazon valley is that we aren't going to get any more than a driblet this year. About 4,000 tons have been produced, against an expectation of around 50,000 tons.

Part of this failure is due to the jealous tug-of-war between Jesse Jones and the Board of Economic Warfare. Jones' Rubber Reserve at first delayed doing anything about Brazilian rubber. Later the BEW

This situation, bad as it may be, is insignificant compared with the handicaps of nature. For in the jungles of the Amazon, nature has erected the most difficult barriers conceivable to protect her rubber.

Here is the tragic, inside story of what has happened.

First, the BEW, working in cooperation with Jesse Jones' Rubber Reserve, offered a higher wage to rubber workers, with the result that they flocked to the jungle. But this they flocked to the jungle. But this took men away from the lesser paid work of farming and wood-cutting, so that river steamers lacked wood fuel, and the jungle settlements lacked food.

lacked food.

Starve in Jungles.

The result was that a great many men actually died of starvation in the jungles. A few had been given shot-guns, but ammunition was so scanty that they were scarcely able to shoot monkeys.

Later the people in the towns from which the rubber workers were recruited heard that their friends and cruited heard that their friends and relatives starved to death. Now these towns won't send any more

One factor contributing to the tragic situation was that a ship bringing food, firearms and more equipment to the Amazon was sunk equipment to the Amazon was sunk by a Nazi submarine.

Also it takes a tremendous number of tin cups to collect rubber. A cup is tied to each tree, and catches the rubber as it slowly cozes from the trunk.

However, the chief shipment of tin cups got held up on the dock in southern Brazil, missed the boat, then were further delayed by submarine warfare, and now have missed the current rubber season. missed the current rubber season.

A lot of these handicaps, such as submarine warfare, are insurmountable. But the net result is that although we are spending many millions, we will get almost no rubber from Brazil this year.

HITLER'S NEW ORDER

Here is an authentic account from Dutch government sources, of what happened to Hollanders who were caught in the act of printing an anti-Nazi publication in the Netherlands.

One victim was forced to place his feet in a tub of water, which was brought slowly to the boiling point. Another patriot, who had point. Another patriot, who had been arrested in mid-winter, was courtyard of the prison, surrounded important. by warmly dressed Gestapo men, who questioned him as long as he could stand it.

Whenever he fainted, they poured hot drinks down his throat and rubbed his numb body until the interrogation could be continued.

Still another Hollander had his fingernails torn out; and a very common method of torture was the use of dazzling light directed upon the eyes of the suspect.

When the Nazis first took over they gave orders to their troops to deal gently with local populations. But with continued local resistance, the gloves are off. Men and women all over Europe are learning the true meaning of the "new order" now promised by Germany.

SENATOR DOXEY'S RAILROAD

The subway train between the Capitol and the Senate office building is a great help to senators shuttling back and forth to their offices, but Senator Wall Doxey of Mississippi would be the first to admit that it can prove a political liability.

Doxey seldom uses the little tramway, preferring to walk. Nonetheless, Mississippi farmers call it "Doxey's Railroad," and according to friends, it had something to do with the Mississippian's primary defeat. Here's the story:

James Eastland, who defeated Doxey, made a practice of inquiring, during speeches in farm com-munities, if there was a railroad

"Nope," someone would reply.

"Nearest one's ten miles." "What a shame," sighed East-land. "You know, Senator Doxey has a private railroad in Washington which he uses to ride back and forth to his office."

CAPITAL CHAFF

Marshal Rommel now has approximately one division of U. S. tanks, previously captured from the British, with which to combat the present British advance. A sample of a new substitute fence, made at Rock Island arsenal, has been brought to Washington to try out around the White House and thus enable the present iron fence to go for scrap iron. However, the White House staff has not been satisfied that the non-iron fence would protect the President.

Women Purchasers Can Aid U. S. Farmers

Fitting Family's Diet With Farm Production Helps U. S. War Effort

America's 6,000,000 farmers today aren't feeding a mere 132,000,000 citizens of the United States. They are also responsible for filling huge gaps in the food supplies of most of the free world-the uniformed and civilian.

This is a large order.

They will need all the help they can get from the consumer at home if they are to continue to fill steadily growing lend-lease orders from the United Nations United Nations.

The consumer is a woman.

If you're a man, you'll probably say, "Hey! What about me?"

Well, Mister, you're practically nobody when it comes to deciding what you'll eat and what you'll wear.

Women buy 80 per cent of the food sold and 75 per cent of the clothing. Further than that, they influence almost all customer purchasing.

This is where the housewife can offer one of the greatest contributions to winning the war. She can see to it that the diet of her family fits in with farm production and the shortages created by the war. She should be informed on the problems involved in producing the goods she wants and getting them into her hands.

As the buyers for some 34 million households from coast to coast, women have a tremendous respon-sibility to the families they feed and clothe.

During 1942 the farmer has marked the highest production level in history. At the same time, annual income payments nationally have increased some 20 billions of dollars.

But crop goals met and passed, and an income increase of over 17 per cent, don't mean that the housewife can go out and buy whatever she wants and as much as she wants.

Since Pearl Harbor, the consumer picture has undergone radical changes. "Scarcity," "ceiling price" and "rationing" have become common words.

Food is no longer readily available if the housewife has the price to pay. Some of her old - time staples are on the "scarce" list, items such as tea, bananas, coffee and sugar.

Off-the-farm consumers, the urban group, comprise over 75 per cent of the population of the United States. Foodstuffs and clothing combined account for about 40 per cent of every dollar spent by the average ur-

Give Consumer Protection.

Urging consumers-and remember that means women—to take heed of the farmer's problems, brings out the little-known fact that the U.S. department of agriculture in return does not forget consumer protection in its farming for freedom program. When the housewife buys fresh vegetables from day to day, she isn't likely to think much about the fact that the vegetables arrived on season schedule, that they were in sufficient quantity and that the price was "right." It's only when those conditions didn't exist that she might begin to wonder how her table is served. Then she would learn that by taking the "long view" for both farmer and consumer safety, the over-all agricultural program results in uniform distribution of farm commodities, an even flow of goods into homes, prevention of market scarcities and glutted markets, and provision of benefits in price and qual-

The Victory Specials, announced from week to week, are a part of this plan. They use up products which are plentiful, often preventing waste and loss to the farmer, and allowing the buyer to take advantage of diet variations at a better price.

Whether or not the consumer's needs are met really depends upon the accuracy with which production has been scheduled to obtain an adequate and steady supply of food at prices fair alike to producers and consumers. This is the consumer's best insurance against the problems best insurance against the problems of scarcity.

Something known as "acreage allotment" is now being used to increase production of certain crops needed for the war, a part of the change-over from normal peace-time farming to all-out war production. The farmer is converting his fields to war production just as surely as the manufacturer turns his machines from automobiles to airplanes.

Production without adjustment would be inexcusable waste at any time. In wartime it is criminal.

What Crop Reserves Do.

Probably Mrs. Average Housewife wouldn't be able to tell you what an Ever-Normal granary is—but she's enjoying the advantages of living under a farming system that provides for crop reserves. In recent years, lots of wheat, corn and other products have been stored against products have been stored against a time when crops might be smaller or demands greater. When drouth once pushed corn production as much as 40 per cent below normal, with the Ever-Normal granary's stored reserves of more than 25 per cent of a normal year's crop, there is plenty of feed to convert into meat, eggs, and dairy products.

"Crop insurance" has a formidable sound, but it is a simple procedure that pays big dividends to the consumer as well as to the producer who meets the premiums. Such insurance keeps farmers in business producing needed goods by guaranteeing them, for example, some wheat or cotton income every year even if a crop fails. This protection gives farmers the assurance they need to go in for production of critical war crops.

That's consumer protection for everybody, even if it doesn't occur to the woman who buys a loaf of bread. Housewives are currently faced with the necessity of cutting down on sugar, once so much a part of their regular purchases that they just took it for granted. Curtailment of shipping, due to the war, cut off important sources of raw materials, of which sugar is one. At the same time, industrial uses of sugar have increased.

Today's price ceiling on sugar, however, is lower than might have been expected. For this the buyer can thank a sugar program which provides payments to growers that are helping them step up produc-

Conservation on the farm may seem a far cry from top quality lettuce or potatoes or green beans. It may seem even farther from tender meats or milk rich in butter fat. And farther still from lower prices.

But farmers know, and consumers should be aware, that soil-building and soil-conserving practices mean larger yields and better quality. Well-nourished land produces better crops than depleted soil.

Wholesomeness Guaranteed.

Regulatory laws administered by he United States department of agriculture directly affect homes and consumer income and buying power. Consumers are protected against mis-branding, substitutions and swindling by the Pure Food and Drug act. It provides a safeguard for wholesome foodstuffs, thereby protecting both health and pocketbook.

Research activities of the depart-

Research activities of the department are equally related to consumer interests. Sixty-five research "laboratories" have experiments constantly in process.

They don't just develop cloth from milk and plastics from soybeans. They also determine methods of increasing production and strengthen-ing the quality of farm products. Foods are carefully analyzed by experts so that their vitamin and mineral content can be accurately given. Nutrition studies set up minimum food requirements, show how they may be met at the least cost and what available foods may be substituted for those on the scarce list or headed that way.

Steering Food Purchases.

These nutrition studies are of particular interest to the housewife. She is faced with the problem of providing her family with enough to eat to maintain health and efficiency.

This young homemaker is choosing her dinner vegetables from the wide variety sent to market every day by the nation's farmers. Her family will get plenty of vitamins.

She must steer her food buying so that supplies may be used to the best advantage and at the same time provide the highest consumer satisfaction.

The individual buyer these days must think always of her purchases as they relate to those of the 34 million other American housewives -what the result would be if that buying were multiplied by 34 million. Would it create new scarcity or make a scarce food non-existent? Or would it have the effect of utilizing the foods that are available in abundance?

Alarm over possible increased food costs has been evidenced by some homemakers. The retail cost of a basket of foods, representing annual family purchases, amounted to $405 in September, 1942, an increase of $73 over the price of the same foods in the period from 1935-39, but the cost was still $10 lower than in 1929.

Workingmen's families today can buy a basket of specified food products for the smallest share of family income on record since 1913. In September, 1942, it required only 22 per cent of the family income. During the preceding five years the same food basket accounted for 27 per cent of the income. Average family income has been rising more rapidly than food prices during the last three years and through the first 10 months of 1942. Reasons include higher wage rates, more hours of work per week with over-time payments, and more persons employed.

The family averaging five persons this fall reached a wage level 57 per cent higher than the pre-war average for 1935-39.

This seems to indicate that the housewife's food problems will not be those of capacity to buy but rather of the market's ability to supply

Reaching her goal-just as the farmer meets his production goalwill mean that scarcity of some particular type of food will be a matter of unconcern to any American, so long as he is able to eat what he

Yank Troops in Ireland

By Quentin Reynolds

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

One of the strangest sights I ever saw anywhere was an American General Grant tank parked outside of the cathedral in the small but ancient town of Downpatrick. I walked inside and found the crew signing the book of visitors.

Lest it be said they were merely sight-seeing in a tank, I might add that they had been scheduled to have lunch in Downpatrick but had passed that up to see what many believe to be the burial place of the good Saint Patrick. I heard the sight-seeing tank crew arguing as to whether Saint Patrick had been buried here as Downpatrick claims, or at near-by Saul (where he died) or in Armagh (where he always said he wished to die).

The argument as to where the dust of the good saint now lies is today as current and as colloquial as is the argument at home as to which was the better ball team, the Yankees of 1927 or the Yankees of 1936. Twenty-three places in Ireland take considerable pride in claiming his bones, and Saint Patrick is no myth in Ulster by any

Our Irish Presidents.

The army has made Belfast its port of leave. At best, Belfast is a rather dreary town, and I defy any Ulsterman to say otherwise. In fact, Ulstermen are the first to admit it. Our boys are sight-seers at heart, and at first they swarmed all over Belfast, looking at such architectural atrocities as the Albert Memorial clock at the foot of High street, which rivals the Albert Memorial in Kensington Gardens in London for

During the London blitz, London citizens would run hopefully toward this tribute to ugly mediocrity each morning. But, alas, it was never hit and still stands. The boys trooped hopefully into the Belfast museum and were mildly intrigued to find there the pictures of 13 former Presidents of the United States in whose veins there ran Ulster blood. If you care for details, the Presidents were Adams, Monroe, Jackson, Polk, Buchanan, Johnson, Grant, Arthur, Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson.

The Grand Central hotel in Belfast is the headquarters for Ameri-Canadian and British troops and officers on leave.

Tanks Everywhere.

Northern Ireland is not a very big place. You can drive right across it in three hours. On your drive, you'll pass many magnificent gateways to large estates, for Ulster is the land of the very rich and the very poor. At these gateways you'll see sentries in the American uniform, for every large estate in Ulster was taken over, first by the British army and now by the American army which is gradually replacing it. Drive into these beautiful estates with lush foliage, lovely half-hidden streams often filled with trout, and you'll find divisional or regimental headquarters. The house the staff lives in may be 300 years old and more often than not. you'll find that the local squire or lord who owns it is now living quite happily in a gardener's or bailiff's cottage on the estate.

Price Is High.

Hundreds of these large landowners gave up their estates to the Crown when war came, for Ulster, unlike her fat sister to the south, never professed to be neutral. She paid for it when Nazi bombers gave Belfast hideous blitzes; but she thinks the price was worth it. She still has her self-respect and intends to keep it.

It is odd to follow a trout stream and bump into an armored unit. We have plenty of Honeys (the light 13ton tanks) and plenty of the General Grants (28-ton tanks) in Ulster, and today the farmers of Ireland are as accustomed to seeing tanks crawl over their pastures as they are to seeing their cattle or their pigs. It's all part and parcel of the great changes wrought by the world's greatest war.

As far as food and comfort are concerned, our army is the best cared for in the world. To date, the only medical complaints which have registered themselves are yellow jaundice (quite a lot), athlete's foot and mumps. Their food, augmented by fresh eggs from the local farmers, is better than the food of either the German, British, Italian or even the Russian army, and at night, when they sleep, their blankets are as warm as the magnificent woolen blankets that are given to the Russian soldiers in winter-

Not So Tough

By STANLEY CORDELL

E DEVELOPED a healthy respect for Toby Bullard two days after he parked his Silver Stream trailer at the head of Main street in the Southwest Trailer camp. He was perhaps twenty-nine or thirty years old, a bachelor, well set-up and big as a house. He had that way about him that gave you the impression he had at one time or another been a successful prize fighter.

Not an exhibitionist, you understand, nor yet a braggart. He merely exuded self-confidence and fearlessness. During a conversation he'd let fall in a modest and almost hesitant way that once when a boy he had had to trounce another youngster twice his size to protect his honor. He hated, he admitted, to have to "take hold of anyone," hadn't, in fact, done so for years.

This was reassuring. He couldn't have hated to "take hold of anyone" any more than we desired not to be taken hold of. By and large Toby wasn't a bad egg. He was a good conversationalist and a good listener. He became the recognized leader of our camp, organizing hiking expeditions and fishing parties and camp jollies. Shortly after the New Year the camp began to fill up. By January 15 a dozen new trailers had pulled in and established themselves for the winter. Among the new arrivals were the Whitneys-mother and father Whitney and daughter Vivian. Now Vivian's name should have been Vision, she was that attractive. All the unmarried men, and most of the married ones, began giving her a lot of attention. Presently, however, the admiration of the swains became less evident, for Toby Bullard had made it clear that he was interested in Vivian Whitney. That is, the admiration of all but Will Anderson became less evident.

Up to now Will Anderson hadn't gained much prominence in our camp. He was a young man, quiet, reserved, congenial, a writer. He fell for Vivian, and the tragic part of it was it didn't bother him a bit that Toby Bullard was interested in her, too.

Will was the type who went about most of the time with a rather absorbed expression. This we agreed accounted for his indifference toward Toby. He hadn't, as far as we could see, noticed the fact of Toby's bigness or his self-confident attitude. Poor Will.

Toby seemed to affect Vivian the way she affected the rest of us. ] didn't mean she was afraid of him or was tremendously impressed with his size or might. Rather, he fas-

We were tremendously interested spectators of the drama. We wanted to warn Will, yet how could we? He was rather dumb if he couldn't catch on himself. Not that Toby ever threatened or tried to bully him. Toby wasn't that type. But sometimes when we were all sitting around he'd mention something like: "Oh, that happened back when I was playing football in college. Eh! Yes, I was fullback. What? All American? Well, yes, I was chosen that year." Or: "I couldn't help throwing that chap around a bit. I tell you, he was insulting."

At such times we'd glance sur-reptitiously at Will, but Will, the idiot, would appear blissfully unaware of the significance of what Toby was saying. Oh, Will was warned all right.

Well, the payoff came toward the middle of February. Vivian had been dividing her time equally between Toby and Will, but it was evident she was much more thrilled by the latter. Moreover, Toby was becoming annoyed at the way Will was pushing himself into the picture, monopolizing Vivian's time when he wanted to monopolize it himself. Not that he said anything. It was merely the way he looked.

We were playing a rather silly game one afternoon, a game in which every one chased every one else and indulged in a bit of roughhouse. Will had been chasing Vivian. He caught her and picked her up in his arms and was carrying her back to the starting point, Vivian squirming and squealing and otherwise indicating she was having a fine time.

Either Toby misunderstood Vivian's squeals or he could restrain himself no longer.

"All right, Anderson," he said suddenly and sharply. "That's enough! Put her down!"

Toby's voice had that imperious quality that usually made men jump. We all stopped as though at a signal. Will Anderson peered at Toby over his burden and said:

"I said, that's enough. Put her down!"

Will blinked, then grinned. "Run up a tree, Bullard." He started to move, but Toby stepped in his way. "Put her down, or I'll have to take hold of you."

Will hesitated, then he set Viviar on her feet. We all breathed a sigh of relief. Toby said: "That's bet-

"Wait a minute," Will said mildly, "you said you were go-ing to take hold of me. Why don't you? That's the reason I put Vivian down, so you'd have your chance."

Toby was so surprised he couldn't find words. Then he laughed. "All right, Anderson, don't make a fool of yourself," he said indulgently, as though he were talking to an unruly

"O.K.," he replied, "I won't. I'll make one of you. Get ready!" Most of us who wrote home to our folks that night had something to say of interest. The description of as fashion is making this the actual fight didn't take long, because Will had hit Toby a dirty crack on the nose and Toby had aimed at Will's jaw and missed and Will's cheeks reddened.

Will had hit Toby again and Toby had sat down and stayed there. The next day Toby backed out his Silver Stream and departed before sunup, and in the days that followed Will and Vivian had a fine time together.

"Why," we asked Will after we knew, "didn't you tell us you were good with your fists?" "Because," said Will, mildly surprised, "no one asked me." Associated Newspapers-WNU Features.

Jigsaw Puzzle

By C. JAMES

LD MR. BEMIS was an incongruous figure among the men who were gathered in the room where lay the dead body of Noah Adams.

There was no sympathy in the expression of the men who watched him. Roy Perry, who had found the body and notified the police, glanced sidewise at Inspector Melton, and Melton went across the room and tapped old Mr. Bemis on the shoulder.

"If you've got anything to say for yourself, you'd better say

"Eh?" said old Mr. Bemis. "Say, for myself? What are you talking about, mister?" The inspector exchanged another glance with Perry.

Melton glanced around the room before he spoke again. Over near the window that opened onto the fire escape was a table on which was spread an almost completed jigsaw puzzle. This had been where Noah Adams was sitting when shot, as indicated by the position in which his body had been found beside the chair. Except for the dark stain on the rug and the fact that the body had been removed to a couch, nothing else in the room had been dis-

"You admit coming here this evening, don't you?" Melton said, addressing old Mr. Bemis. "Eh? Yes. Yes, I was here about 8:30. I come up to make my peace with Noah."

"You'd had a quarrel, then?" "Yes. We were always quarreling. Couple of old fools we were. Quarreling and making up and quarreling again."

"But tonight you didn't make "No. Noah was cantankerous tonight. He wouldn't make up." Inspector Melton and Roy Perry looked at each other knowingly. Melton said: "Well, Mr. Bemis, it looks bad for you. Our medical examiner tells us that Adams died about 8:30. That's the time you admit being here. You also admit dazzling mien. having quarreled with him."

Mr. Bemis had lapsed into a reverie again. "Eh?" he said, looking up suddenly. "Eh? Me kill Noah? Look here, Mr. Inspector . .

Roy Perry laughed contemptuous-"You're talking in bunches, Grandpa. I happen to know Mr. Adams' hobby was jigsaw puzzles. He has a dozen of them. That one there he started three days ago."

"No be didn't, sonny. That one there I brought him when I called at 8:30. A sort of peace offering."

Old Mr. Bemis, his voice rising shrilly, cried: "Dang you policemen, anyhow. Seems like you're willing to arrest any one, even an old man, just for the sake of making an arrest. You think I shot Old Noah, eh? How could I? The clerk downstairs can tell you I come through the lobby at 8:30. That's the time your medical man says Old Noah died. Well, the bullet hole is in the left side of his head, and he was sitting with that side near the window. That window must have been open, else smart young Mr. Perry here couldn't have heard the shot like he said."

Roy Perry wet his lips. Inspector Melton turned suddenly and went across the room and looked out the window. He saw the fire escape balcony serviced rooms on the entire north side of the building. It would, he thought, be a mighty easy matter for any one to step out onto the balcony and creep along to the window where Noah Adams sat doing his jigsaw puzzle.

As Inspector Melton turned back into the room he remembered something. Old Mr. Bemis had said: 'Noah was always helping some one. Lending money and not asking any interest."

Inspector Melton's eyes must have betrayed his feeling as he faced the group in the room again, for Roy Perry made a break. He turned for the hall door-and tripped over Old Mr. Bemis' extended foot and went sprawling. The officer near the door reached for his gun.

Knitwear Keeps You Warm and Smartly Attired All Day Long

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

College girls are making a mad One of the outstanding items of interest in the new collections is the waistcoat, now being revived in all its former glory. Note the smart cardigans in the lead. White sweatchecked knitted vestee, or waistcoat, shown to the left in the above picture. Here's warmth for you underwritten with a declaration of definite chic. Choose it in yellow, gray and white check as shown here, and you will make no mistake. Add a hundred per cent Australian wool sweater and you will have the kind of protection that cruel wintry blasts will find it difficult to penetrate. As to tailor-knit jackets, they are not missing a fashion "trick" in their styling. They are taking the place of the gay tweed jackets (at least they make a grand alterna-

Evening sweaters provide a theme for poets to sing of and painters to glorify in portraiture. To say that they dazzle the eye is not a figure of speech, but literally so. The big news about them is their glittering embroidery. The white woolknit evening sweater shown above to the right is elegantly embroidered with pearls and fine gold braid. Note the novel bracelet embroidered directly on the knitted surface. Long "cultured" pearls, diamond ear-rings and a dainty spray-pin of pearls for the hair complete the jewelry ensemble.

Yarn Ensemble

This most intriguing hat and muff set goes to show the perfectly charming things that are being done with gay yarns this season. The flattering hat with its pert tall-pointed crown, together with the huge muff, is in a beautiful shade of turquoise blue yarn with black jet beads decorating the fringe. The enormous muff is a crochet and knit masterpiece. A dramatic jewelry ensemble of highly polished faceted jet ailds the perfect touch to this accessory group.

Fluid Drape

The one dress that stands preeminently forth as making a grand success of it from the very beginning of the season is the silhouette dress of crepe, satin, or rayon or of wool jersey, that is made with utmost simplicity, its importance centering about the exquisiteness of its fluid drape that swings it into graceful slenderizing lines.

Glitter Brightens Simple Dark Wools

The fact that simple little daytime wool frocks, and even knitted modes, are highlighted with glitter accents in the way of bead work and sequin embroidery is very style-significant. Two outstanding trends in the use of glitter notes give variety to the mode.

The one is the positioning of a single motif of sequin-worked flowers on frocks that are otherwise styled with extreme simplicity. An afternoon frock of either velvet or crepe that interprets this technique makes for good style this season.

The other gesture in adding the sparkle highlight is seen in alluring sheer yokes that top otherwise simple dark dresses. These yokes are often as filmy as chiffon or sheer weave can make them, and they take on glamour in that they are finished off at the lower edge with a handworked jewelry effect or a huge bowknot done in sequins. Sometimes the treatment is varied in that the filmy yoke is allover studded with seed pearls or sparkling tiny beads.

Neckline Notes

Both long and short dresses often have low square necklines and plunging V-necks. There is a disposition on the part of designers to create such fascinating, artful effects that the rest of the dress is styled with extreme simplicity as to better accent the chic and charm of the ingenious neckline. Accents of sequins, embroidery and filmy black lace add to the picture.

Quilted Satin

Quilted satin in pastel colors is a new medium for collar and cuff sets. Yokes with square necklines and dickeys with round "jewelry" necklines are popular. For fill-ins for velvet suits there are metal cloth dickeys in high colors, such as emerald, purple and fuchsia red.

THINGS THAT MAR FAMILY LIFE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 27:30-35; Mat-thew 5:31, 32; Luke 12:13-15. GOLDEN TEXT—Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ.— Galatians 6:2.

Home is what you make it! Oh, yes, there may be circumstances which hinder us from doing what we would like-such as poverty, illness, unemployment, etc. These are things we cannot control and certainly they do have a bearing. But man or woman when of the right spirit can triumph over such matters and make even the poorest home the gateway to heaven. It is a matter of the attitude of heart and mind. Our lesson then is very practical, for it deals with those sins which mar family life.

Whatever our circumstances may be, we can and must turn away from sin-and in this case, the sins which hinder the home from being what it ought to be. God has provided victory over sin through Christ for all who believe in Him. What then are the sins which stand as the enemies of the home? I. Deceit (Gen. 27:30-35).

Whatever the circumstances of the home may be, there can be absolute honesty and candor in the dealings between members of the family.

Our recent study of the story of Jacob and Esau showed us the sad consequences of the deceit practiced by Jacob and his mother in defrauding Esau. Many elements entered in, the favoritism of the mother toward one son, the envy that the brother had of his elder brother's birthright, the wicked scheming of mother and son to outwit the aged father-all a very distressing picture of a home shot through with deceitfulness. To build anything of permanent value on such a foundation was quite impossible.

The family in which deceitful means are used by husband or wife to gain some advantage for self or a favored child is heading for the rocks and needs to turn about and get into the channel of truth and uprightness before it is too late.

II. Divorce (Matt. 5:31, 32). One of the most destructive elements of modern life is that of divorce. Terrifying statistics could be quoted, but they are not nearly as moving as the knowledge most of us have of broken homes, delinquent children, decadent morals, etc., ad nauseam. The victims of this deadly evil are primarily the children who are sent on into life with disordered minds and hearts. Jesus declared that the decree of divorcement allowed by Moses was not an abrogation of God's original law in this matter. Because of the 'hardness of their hearts'' (Mark 10:4) Moses permitted it, but the standard of God was and (note this please!) is unchanged.

Marriage, as we saw in our lesson of November 1, is God's plan for the perfect union of the man and woman whereby the two become one in the sight of God. That means that the tie is not one to be dissolved at will or on some purely legal ground; it is an inseparable union.

The only exception recognized by Scripture (v. 32) is that act of unfaithfulness which is such a breach of the holy union as to virtually destroy it. Perhaps it might be called a recognition of the breaking of the union rather than an exception. Adultery is a heinous sin, an extremely serious violation of God's law. Let us press that fact home today when it is so lightly regarded in our sinful generation.

III. Desire (Luke 12:13-15).

Money is necessary and may be a blessing, but the "love of money is the root of all evil" (I Tim. 6:10). That is not just a verse in the Bible. It is the true picture of the thing which has destroyed the happiness of millions.

Here was a quarrel over an inheritance, and in meeting it our Lord laid down a principle which would solve all the money quarrels in every home-and they are endless in number and great in bitter destructiveness. "Man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (v. 15). Write it large over the minds and hearts of the boys and girls in our homes! Let it control in the attitude of father and mother toward money. It will solve not only the money problems of the home, but will send the children forth into life with a foundation philosophy that will bless them to the end of their days.

Notice verse 14. It is the desire for money that most often makes man desire to be a judge over his brother. The big eyes of envy cause him to look with bitter desire upon what his brother has and he wants. The fine principle of sharing the family's possessions would do much to knit the home into a unit-happy, strong and useful to both God and man. The point is to say "ours' rather than "mine," and to ask, "What can we do?" not, "What can

Record War Bond Sales Is Goal Of Women At War Week Nov. 22

WASHINGTON, D. C.—America's women in the cities and on the farms—in war factories and in their homes—are determined to make Women At War Week the greatest War Bond selling effort since Pearl Harbor.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt sounded the keynote for the Treasury Department's Women At War Week, Nov. 22 to 28, with an appeal to women to save on 'little things" to provide money for War Bonds. "We women want to work hard, we want to be a part of this strenuous period because unless we are, we will not be able to face the men when they return and claim our share of the future responsibility for building a peaceful world," the First Lady declared.

The overall direction of Women At War Week rests with the Women's Section of the War Savings Staff under the leadership of Miss Harriet Elliott, Associate Field Director. and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Chief of the Special Activities Unit.

From coast to coast women in every community have made plans for torchlight parades, fash-pageants, civic sings, balls and mardi gras. In each locality administration of the one week drive rests with the local War Savings Committee which has worked out activities adapted to their areas.

Mrs. Morgenthau, in a special message for Women At War Week, declared that the spirit of America's pioneer women lives today more strongly than ever.

"The average American woman began to rise to new heights on Sunday, Dec. 7, 1941," Mrs. Morgenthau said. "This winter the average American woman will be spending less in order to save more to invest in War Bonds and Stamps. She will not, please God, ever have to fire a gun or fly a bomber. But she will, please God, always do everything she can to help buy anything-and the best of everything-that fires or flies or floats in this terrible war."

WOMEN AT WAR-Overalls, wrenches and drills replace fineries as these war workers in an Army Arsenal march to tank repair shops. Note the determination on their faces. These women are typical of hundreds of thousands who are working in war factories and investing part of their earnings in War Bonds.
