Hunting Notes

Michigan's unpredictable war-time deer hunting season settled back to normal late this week after an opening so heavily patronized the conservation department ordered 10,-000 additional licenses to supplement the 240,00 already in dealer's hands.

Snow on the ground at the season opening melted early and warm weather sent successful hunters hurrying home as soon as they got their deer. Familiar guides to the number of hunters actually in the field proved uncertain this year as time-off from work is limited and trips are shorter. Though 1,000 fewer cars crossed the Straits of Mackinac on opening weekend, they carried 300 more hunters than crossed a year are Recents and than crossed a year ago. Resorts and cabins are reported well filled.

Lost from three o'clock Thu s. day afternoon until about nine o'clock Friday morning Dick Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Martin, and Edward Wellna, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wellna, of Alabaster arrived 'safely home at about noon. The boys were hunting in a swamp and lost their direction. After walking all night they fin ally came out in Sherman town-ship. Sheriff John Moran, State Police, besides neighbors and friends, spent most of the night searching for the boys. Outside of being wet and hungry the boys were apparently O. K. when they arrived home.

Ten deaths from gun accidents in the first seven days of the current deer hunting season provide an additional index to hunter concentration this year, when compared with a total of 11 killed in the 1942 deer season. Fourteen have been injured to date, compared with 11 in all of the a deer."

The funeral services of Raymond Kleinfelder were held at AuGres Wednesday afternoon. He is survived by his widew the former Mira Mil at the field as appropriate with 41 in all of the season last year. In the small game season, though most of the hunting is over, conservation department records 11 deaths from gun accidents in the field as appropriate with 10 in in the field, as compared with 19 in the entire season a year ago.

> Mayor Carl Babcock is noted for being lucky with his bets. Apparently his horseshoe didn't fail him again for the day before deer season opened, he offered to take on bets from all comers that he would get his buck before the end of the first week. The second week of hunting is nearly over and no venison for the mayor, but no one had covered his bets.

Conservation officers report the early season kill as normal to light. with hunting conditions rated fair because of the weather.

Capt. Ludwig of Tawas Point posted himself in a "blind" and anticipated taking home some vension, but met with disappoint. ment. A buck walked through the desired area in his field of fire but Capt. Ludwig had left the blind for a few minutes.

Intensified Scrap Hunt Asked

In a mesage today, Donald M. Nelson asked for an intendified scrap hunt during the remaining weeks of 1942. He directed his message especially to the farmers of the nation and said:

The government is asking the American farmer to dedicate the remaining weeks of 1912 to an intensified scrap hunt. Steel mills need more heavy scrap, and the farms are one of the best sources of this type of metal. The nation is looking to the American farmer, and we do not expect you to fail. Hunt up every piece of metal that you are not using. Get it to your local metal buyer or notify your county salvage chairman."

THOMAS F. MARSTON DIES LAST MONDAY

Enthusiastic Worker in Northern Michigan's Development

Thomas F. Marston, one of the states' most widely known citizens, died Monday at his home in Bay City. He had been ill for several months. Mr. Marston had been secretary of the Northeastern Michigan Develop-ment Bureau and Eastern Michigan Tourist Association for 32 years. In his earlier years Mr. Marston became interested in agriculture and dairying and after his fathers death, operated the Marston farm near Kawkawlin. With large tracts of good agricultural land in the north-ern counties still in the wild, a movement was started to excourage farmers to settle on the cut over lands Recognizing Mr. Marston's ability he was elected secretary of the assoc-iation which became the Northeastern Michigan Development. Through Mr. Marston's efforts the bureau performed an important part in the development of northern Michigan as plary habits, a good father and husan agricultural and dairying area. With the advent of good roads, which he helped to secure, he turned his efforts toward introducing to the nation, Northern Michigan as a sum-mer and winter vacation land. This was to grow into the second largest industry in the state.

Northeastern Michigan owes much wild one, and that he just wanted to take it home to show the folks.

Ted Jacques, one of our prominent nimrods, is walking around town with a grim face. He says, "What am I going to do. Meat rationing will soon be here, and the hunting season will soon be over, and I haven't had a glimpse of a set of horns on meat that I could shoot."

Washington, D. C. BRAZIL AND U. S. OFFENSIVE

Though the landings on North Africa were a carefully guarded mili-tary secret between high British and American officials, one other coun-try let in on the secret was Brazil.

In fact, Brazil, through Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha did some important spade work for the United States in regard to vital Atlantic islands, the Azores and Madeiras. These lie along the route of the American supply line to North Africa, the Madeiras close to the African coast rican coast.

Therefore, it was considered possible that the Germans might attempt to use these islands as submarine or even air bases, or that the United States in turn might need the islands for emergency bases.

Both island groups are Portuguese. So, long ago, Brazil, which looks to Portugal as its mother country, made informal diplomatic soundings to make sure that these islands would line up with the United Nations in case of emergency.

SOLOMONS vs. AFRICA

One thing that got under the skin of high U. S. army officials during the weeks just before the North African landings was the navy's policy regarding the battle of the Solomon

Though all the details had not been worked out, it had been definitely agreed with Churchill and the Russians to start some kind of second front operation this summer. However, the navy also claimed that it could start the Solomon Islands campaign simultaneously without taking any ships out of the Atlantic or disturbing the Second Front preparations. The admirals promised the war department that the number of ships used in the Solomons would be very small indeed.

But before the Solomons opera-tions had lasted many weeks, the navy had used several times as many ships as it expected—some of them sent to the bottom of the Pacific. Ships were taken off the supply lines to Russia, despite definite promises made to Russia. Ships

The next day Oliver called Virginia promises and the promises and the promises and the promises and the promises are the promises and the promises and the promise are the p

Inside the navy it is pointed out that one of the best jobs Admiral Nimitz ever did was to let the Japs get into the tip end of the Aleutian islands. This proved to be a beautiful decoy, like flies to molasses. The Aleutians were too exposed for the Japs to defend safely, too near

CHRISTMAS TRAVEL

The railroads have been negotiating with the schools and colleges to extend their Christmas holiday period so that it will begin before the usual Christmas home-going dates and extend beyond the usual returning dates. The purpose was to get rid of the school and college traffic before taking on the burden of the furlough movement of soldiers, going home for Christmas.

This longer vacation would be okay with a lot of girls and boys, but most of the schools and colleges have turned thumbs down. They said they could not change their schedules.

Result is that the American railroads will carry the greatest burden in history during the period from December 15 to January 5. The peak will come between December 20 and 24, when the railroads will have to carry:

(1) Home-going students; (2) the usual heavy civilian Christmas travel; (3) soldiers on furlough; (4) soldiers on week-end passes; (5) the normal troop movement, which will not be suspended for Christmas. So between December 15 and January 5, civilians are asked to stay off the railroads!

AFRICANA

Trenchmen listening to Roosevelt's broadcast to the French people in the French language wondered who wrote his speech. They said it contained grammatical errors and sounded like schoolboy composition. Roosevelt's accent, however, was good.

¶ General Giraud, new French commander in North Africa, is the first Frenchman to use motorized units in cleaning up North Africa. He waged a successful campaign against the Riffs.

"Come over," said Ginnie. Oliver drove over. When he got there no one answered his knock. He grinned. "She's giving me the works," he told himself. "And boy, can I take it!" Perley connected squarely. Oliver's chin snapped back. He sat down. Sitting there he looked up, dazed. Perley and Virginia gazed at him sadly from the car.

"It's a theory," Perley called. "It may work and it may not, I think not. Anyway, when Ginnie and I get back from our honeymoon, we'll try again."

Invasion Tactics Used in Opening Second Front

American troops were trained intensively for the invasion of North Africa. Before the U. S. army task force members were assigned to the new invasion group they spent a considerable period in carefully directed maneuvers under simulated attack conditions. That they learned their lesson well is confirmed by their remarkable success in the initial stages of the opening of the second front in North Africa. The pictures were taken during maneuvers, by the U. S. Signal Corps.

U. S. Boston Bombers Raid Le Havre

United States air force Boston bombers, also known as the Douglas A-20 C's, attacked Le Havre docks in a daylight raid. This photo, which is one of the clearest of its kind that has been made during this war, shows one of the Bostons over the target area as the first stick of bombs of the attack breaks on and near the western end of the quay in the Bassin De Maree, where there are E and R boat pens. During this attack, bombers were escorted by U.S.A.A.F. fighter planes.

WHEN a fighting football team from the University of Illinois defeated Minnesota's Golden Gophers early this year, the pre-season estimates were thrown in the waste-basket. When twice-defeated Purdue edged out Northwestern, the wastebasket was burned.

Not since the late 1920s had the Midwest witnessed such a close race for the Western conference title. Teams found out that to be named a favorite in the press was the virtu-al kiss of death. Wisconsin knocked Ohio State out of the Big Nine lead and the nation's number one place. The latter spot was promptly filled by Georgia. Iowa then proceeded to topple Wisconsin from the pinnacle and from among the country's leading undefeated teams while Indiana rose to peak form to drop avored Minnesota.

The renascence of Illinois as a power in Midwest football came as an exceedingly pleasant surprise to pleasant surprise to followers of Big Nine football fortunes. Oldtimers remember wistfully the glory days of the Fighting Illini. Particularly do they remember the hisremember the his-toric battles of the Illinois - Ohio State Probably the two

Bob Zuppke most famous games of the series were played in 1919 and 1920. In 1919 at Columbus the Illini were on their own 20-yard line with the score 7-6 against them and only a few minutes left, when Larry Walquist completed three passes to Chuck Carney, All-America end, which put the ball on the Buckeye 20. Bob Fletcher place-kicked a field goal to give the Illini victory and the championship by a 9-7 score.

A Close One

Next year, on the Illinois field, the game was still scoreless as the pistol sounded but Workman's pass to "Truck" Meyers was in the air for him to catch and score the touchdown that won the game (and championship) for the Buckeyes.

Illinois first became acquainted with the immortal Chic Harley in 1916. The Illini were leading 6-0 in the closing minutes of play when Harley broke free for a touchdown, calmly changed his sheet and played. calmly changed his shoe and placekicked a goal.

Illinois' victory in 1934 uncovered Bob Zuppke's famous "flying tra-peze." In this delightful little num-ber everyone on the field except the officials and the waterboys handled the ball. Illinois deserved to win by the final 14-13 score.

Boxing Industry

Takes It on Chin

The boxing industry, less concerned than other sports by the transportation problem, is faced with a talent loss that likely will result in the doom of all big scale operations.

While exact figures are not available, it is probable that on a per capita basis boxing has sent more men into the armed services than any other branch of athletics.

The National Boxing association recently summarized the induction or enlistment of 18 champions and contenders. Hundreds of unranked fighters are in the army or navy and increasing numbers are seeking work in war plants.

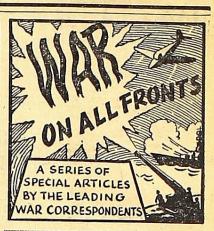

Four world champions are in the service-Sergt. Joe Louis, heavyweight; Gus Lesnevich, light heavyweight; Tony Zale, middleweight; and Fred Cochrane, welterweight.

Contenders in service represent five of the eight standard divisions:

Heavyweight, Corp. Billy Conn. Melio Bettina and Pat Valentino; light heavyweight, Billy Soose, Tommy Tucker and Ken Overlin; middleweight, George Abrams, Tony Martin, Coley Welsh, Fred Apostoli and Steve Belloise; welterweight, Marty Servo and Jackie Wilson; featherweight, Mike Raffa. Also gone is Bob Pastor, heavyweight who retired to join the marines. who retired to join the marines.

Boxing has been in rather a bad way for the past several years. Joe Louis outranked his heavyweight contemporaries so far that interest in that division reached an all-time low. Most of the other divisions were in a chaotic condition.

Now, with the army and navy drawing from its ranks, the cauliflower industry must adjust itself to a changed situation. The wild, unhampered promotion of past big time bouts is doomed for the duration. Fights will be less of a spectacle, with little-known brawlers earning no more than ham and eggs.

Chile Sitting on the Fence

By Waldo Frank

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

There are nearly 80,000 pro-Nazi Germans in Chile; 30,000 are Ger-man nationals; 50,000 are Chilean citizens of German descent who have been hypnotized, despite their democratic antecedents, by the victories of the fuehrer.

There is a drama here. To see it and Chile's importance within the Pan-American picture, we must Pan-American picture, we must have a sense of the Chilean people. The Chilean is half mariner, half mountaineer. He lives in a land whose geography a famous Chilean writer has called "insane." Chile is 2,000 miles long and about 100 miles wide, shaped like an earthworm. One side of it is sea, the other ice and rock. In square miles, it is larger than France, but a bare ten per cent of its soil is cultivable, the rest being desert, mountain and poor sheep pasture. That's not the worst of it. Chile is the land of earthquakes. Every Chilean remembers "his earthquake." He may be fifty, and the frightful experience may have shaken his body when he was six, but his soul cannot forget.

Havoc of an Earthquake.

Havoc of an Earthquake. I visited Concepcion, the country's third city, where, only three years ago, a quake in 90 seconds destroyed thousands of lives and shattered hundreds of houses. The ruins are there still—the cathedral, the dwellings, the commercial structures; and on and about them Concepcion moves, disorganized and dazed, like a city bombed by an enemy which the people cannot have the satisfaction of hating.

All this has made the Chileans slow, reticent, stubborn, intellectually matter-of-fact; a people of depth and will, rather than surface sensibility and color; a long-suffering folk whose noble music is almost buried in their hearts, as different from their charming and brilliant neighbors across the Andes as their rocky land is different from the Pampa.

Chile Advanced Politically.

Chile Advanced Politically.

Chile Advanced Politically.
Politically, Chile is the most advanced nation of South America. Its industrial workers are all unionized, every Chilean belongs to a political party, and the elections are honest. The two largest parties are the Radicals (corresponding to the Liberals in this country) and the Conerals in this country) and the Con-Red Grange played an important part as a sophomore in the 1923 game. He scored one touchdown that made up the majority of the the ministry and congress. Yet this sturdy, conscious folk (with the exception of Uruguay, the most homogeneous in all South America) remains economically poor and exploited.

> So hard has been the life of the Chilean worker, so hard the soil, so uncertain even the survival of his house when his earth quakes, that when he gets a bit of money, he doesn't - like the American - buy goods; he buys rest. Poor food, ragged clothes, a hovel of a house, he has got used to. What he wants is a week off, with plenty of wine to remove him from his troubles. The average labor-year of the fully employed, skilled Chilean industrial worker is 39 weeks.

The people are democratic from top to bottom. An example: The new minister of health, Dr. Miguel Etchebarne, still works as a subordinate of Dr. Orrego who, officially, is under him. At 8 a. m., the minister takes orders from Orrego in the State hospital; at 11 a. m., in his ministry, he gives orders to Orrego.

Another instance is the Church. Everywhere, there are good Catholic Democrats. In Chile alone, as far as I know, there is an organized Catholic Democratic party which works with Radicals, Socialists and Communists against the Fascist danger. Schnake, the minister of labor, is of this party.

Not far from Valdivia, heart of German Chile, in the village of San Jose de la Mariquina, lives the noblest of the country's anti-Nazis, a bishop and a full-blooded German! I went to see Guido Benedict Beck de Ramberga, Capuchin bishop. He told me of his fight against his fellow Germans and Chileans of German descent, who send him threatening

The Nazis have one great virtue: They know their enemies and fight them. The Gestapo in Germany warned him of reprisals if he did not stop publishing his anti-Fascist literature. The magazines and pam-phlets kept on flowing from the bishop's print shop.

This brings me back to the Nazi embassy in Chile. A few weeks ago, Minister of the Interior Morales made a speech forecasting an early break with the Axis. The Axis embassies got busy on the cables, and Morales cracked down, refusing to pass their messages.

VER the top of her newspaper Janie saw that the young man with the blond hair was watching her. She knew suddenly that he was going to speak. It gave her a little thrill, yet she didn't know what to do. He had nice eyes and a pleasant face, but you never could tell about men these days, young or old. More, if she permitted herself to follow her own impulse, he'd get the wrong

"Forgive me for appearing so bold," he began, dropping into the chair opposite her, "but the fact is, I just had an impulse and decided to follow it."

Janie picked up her coffee cup and began to drink. She tried hard to ignore him. She didn't want to, but she didn't want him to get the impression that she could be picked up.

"Do you mind if I sit here?" he

"I don't mind at all," said Janie. She folded her newspaper, tucked it under her arm and walked away. She felt his eyes watching her go. At the cashier's desk it was a terrible temptation to look back, but she resisted it.

Outside she had a moment of regret. The young man hadn't been rude or even forward. He probably felt about her as she felt about him. He wanted to meet her and there down the back and ties at the was simply no other way. Drat waist . . . isn't this a charming convention! She sighed, wondering if he would be at the restaurant tomorrow morning. She decided there was one way to find out.

Janie spent the day calling on the people whose help-wanted ads she had checked in the morning paper. As usual she was unsuccessful. Either the jobs were filled or she didn't qualify or there were dozens there ahead of her or the job was straight commission. She couldn't work on commission. She hadn't enough money left to finance herself for more than two or three days, even with going without lunches and spending only forty cents for dinner. She had to have a salary job, or

Janie was halfway through her breakfast the next morning when the blond young man came in. From the corner of her eye she saw that he hesitated at sight of her, then went on. She dawdled over her coffee, deliberately, hating herself for doing it. When she saw him approaching she folded her newspaper.

"I beg your pardon, do you mind—"

Janie stood up and walked away without looking at him. She hated herself more than ever. He was nice. He wanted to meet her. Yet, suppose she encouraged his ad-He'd think—he couldn't help but think-she was-cheap! Oh, why did it have to be that way?

one previous. No job. Not even the hope of a job. Janie returned She stood listening. "Sylvia!" to her four-flight walk-up feeling tired and discouraged. Tomorrow -if something didn't happen tomorrow she'd have to admit defeat. She'd have to spend her remaining $1,23 on a railroad ticket back to the small town she had dreamed of getting away from all her life. Tears appeared in Janie's eyes.

The blond young man was already in the cafeteria when Janie entered the next morning. Sight of him made her more miserable. It reminded her that here was one more thing she wanted to do and couldn't because she was a girl, a nice girl. Deliberately she crossed to the opposite side of the room and sat down. She was glad that this would be her last morning at the restaurant. She didn't want to see the blond young man again because-because-

Janie hadn't seen the other girl sit down at the table behind her. All she knew was that the blond young man was coming toward her, and she decided to insult him, even threaten to call the manager. The words were practically formed on her lips, and then a surprising thing happened. The blond young man passed by without a look and spoke to the girl at the table behind. Janie couldn't help overhearing the conversation.

"I beg your pardon," he was saying to the other girl, "do you mind if I sit down?"

"Not at all, Mr. Cutler."
"Oh, then you know my name?" "Who doesn't know Robert Cutler the great stylist at Weatherbee's?" "That makes it easier. You see, I've been looking for a model for a long time. I've visited all the cafeterias and restaurants in town looking for a particular type. The job pays fifty dollars a week. Two days ago I found just what I was looking for, in here, but-well, difficulties arose. Rather hard to explain. However, this morning I was lucky. You came in and—well, would you like the job?"

"Thank you, so much. I do wish I could accept, but you see I'm modeling for Fontenalla, under contract. I couldn't break it."

The young man sighed. "What a pity! Well, I suppose I'll have to go elsewhere-" "Wait a minute!" Janie spoke while turning around in her chair.

Then she stopped speaking. The blond young man and his companion were both looking at her and grinning. "I—I—" began Janie.

The blond young man rose. "Forgive me for resorting to such an underhanded method of—promoting myself. It seemed like my only chance, and I was so afraid some morning you wouldn't come back
. . . You do need a job, don't you?
I saw you reading the want ads. Would you consider modeling for me at Weatherbee's?"

Janie's senses reeled. She shook her head, got control of herself and smiled. It was a lovely smile. The young man smiled back. His companion smiled. The bus boy smiled. It seemed to Janie that even the surly oafs at the long counter, wolfing down their breakfasts, were smiling.

Marion

By M. SCHOLL Associated Newspapers. WNU Features.

SYLVIA'S hand trembled as she picked up the phone. "Give me Main 0520," she told the operator.
"Hello?" It was Roger's voice.
"It's Sylvia, Roger."

"Oh, hello, darling!" He was making an effort to sound eager. "I-I was wondering when you'd be home. It's after 10.' "Ten o'clock? Good heavens! Well, don't worry, I'll be along any minute now." "Are you alone?"

"Sure. Just Marion and me." There it was. The thing she had feared. Marion! She hung up and stared dully into space. After all these months. A year. It would be a year tomorrow, that they were married. It had been a movie that had awakened in her the first glimmering of suspicion. One of those triangular things involving a man, his wife and his secretary. The preview had said: "Any man who leaves his wife and goes to work with another woman might be the man in this picture." Or something like that. At first it had meant nothing. Nothing at all.

During the weeks that followed she found herself recalling the situation presented in the film.

She began to notice little things, things that hadn't impressed her at first. He was becoming less atten-He wore an absent, detached look. Heretofore she had attributed this to worry about business. There was the new house, for example. They had planned to start building it after their first year.

Sylvia got up and went upstairs to their bedroom.

At the writing desk she deliberated only a moment. No need to be elaborate or accusing or condemning. Merely set down the facts. Try to appear understanding.

She wrote hurriedly, signed merely "Sylvia," inserted the note into its envelope without reading it through. She laid the note on Roger's pillow, then tried to put her mind on what to pack. Only a few things now. Later she could return This day was a repetition of the and get the rest of her belongings. The front door opened and closed. There was only one course open now. self-possessed as possible.

"Well, here they are," Roger said, removing a sheaf of pa-pers. "Wanted to wait till tomorrow-our anniversary - to show 'em to you, but Jim's leaving town and I thought you might want to suggest some changes."

"Changes?" Sylvia stared, feeling a little queer.

"Sure. In the house. Plans for the house, you know. Been working on 'em nights with Jim so's we could get 'em done for the anniversary. Big surprise. Hey, what's the matter? Come on in here." Sylvia had reeled and steadied herself against the bannister. She was staring at the stranger. Roger looked from one to the other of them. "S'cuse. Forgot you two hadn't met. Darling, this is Jim Marion. Old friend. Architect. Kind of a secretary.

Jim, my wife. Now, let's get into the living room and give these a general once-over, eh?"
Sylvia's throat felt dry. It required an effort to get control of herself. "In a minute," she said, "I'll be there in a minute, darling." And she turned and rushed back up the stairs toward where the note lay on Roger's pillow.

Yes, It Is

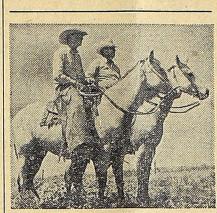

Goniophotometry is a highly useful activity today. A goniophotometer measures the light reflected from painted surfaces at various angles. While peacetime finishes generally aimed at gloss, war paint must avoid tell-tale reflection of the sun's rays. Paint may appear dull as dust under a high sun, but when the light strikes at a small angle, as when the sun is low, the drab coating becomes sometimes mirror bright. In paint research laboratories specially developed military paints are measured in a few minutes for reflection power—or the lack of it-from all angles with the goniophotometer.

Special Roosts Train Chickens

It doesn't take long to get chicks started on the roost, if roosts are built on frames with cross pieces made of lath. These frames at first are placed on the floor. They are only two inches high and the chicks go on them at once. After a few nights they are suspended from the ceiling by wires and lifted a few inches off the floor. To steady the frame one edge can be placed against the side of the building. The roosts are lifted gradually until the desired height is reached.

Versatile Uses of Fur Gives Variety to Winter Fashions

winter, it's doing so with an art-ful gesture that brings high drama into the fashion picture.

Furs are especially playing fascinating role in the trimming and accessory drama this season. Huge muffs, which fashion decrees for this winter; dramatic fur hats made to match; gloves of fur, lapel pieces and corsages of fur flowers; and big bows of fur at the throat are a few of the exciting highspots that fashion has in store for the coming months.

It is big news, too, that stole scarfs are in fashion again. Only the new stoles are cunningly devised with tricky little concealed pockets and handbag adjustments and many convertible contrivances that make them practical for many-purpose wear. The handsome fur stole pictured to the lower right in the above illustration is a convertible type. It can be worn with long scarf ends or be manipulated to form a collar and muff as you see in the picture.

The stunning "date" dress shown to the lower left in the illustration gives evidence that fur accessories are bringing high drama into the fashion picture. This two-piece frock of luscious matte-finished rayon crepe is a masterpiece when it comes to delineating an exquisite, figure-flattering silhouette. The slim, graceful lines interpreted by this dress are typical of the new fashion trend. striped wool is worn, together with It is the slim, svelte figure that experts will tell you can be achieved only when a correct and perfectly fitted foundation garment is worn. The deep toned rayon crepes so modish this winter in their gorgeous hues are not only beautifully adaptable to the molded lines of the new streamlined dresses, but also make a perfect background for rich fur accents. In this instance a huge muff is matched with a huge pom pom of fur on the hat. Tiny gilt bows harmonize charmingly with the fashionable mink brown of the crepe. The smooth bodice, with its smartly draped hipline tops a pencil-slim street length skirt cut on the newest lines.

The smart jacket and hat ensemble illustrated above to the right shows the importance of "a hat to match." Here a silver fox fur jacket with its brilliant silver marking is topped with a hat of taupe velvet trimmed in matching silver fox. Jackets, short coats and capes of fur have a high rating in style prestige for the coming winter. One of the biggest successes of the season is turning out to be the wool suit that is smartly trimmed with fur. Every sort of fur from smooth pelts to the long-haired types are in style. The spotted furs are topnotch fashion. The suit centered in the group illustrated above makes fetching use of ocelot (that fur so adored by the younger element) for the notched collar and the patch pockets. The tawny color of the fur contrasts effectively with the black wool of the suit. A telescopic turban of bright red and black novelty a matching bag.

A vogue for pure white evening furs is becoming increasingly important. The two outstanding furs are white caracul and snowy ermine. Teen-age and college girls are calling for three-quarter length all-white caracul coats.

Side Buttoning

Here is a two-piece dress of celanese spun rayon that is of the sort young girls adore. It boasts a longtorso overblouse of plaid with a monotone natural tan weave. The new side buttoning is smartly carried out. There is an oval yoke of the plain fabric matching the skirt. This skirt is made strictly in keeping with WPB regulations.

Plaid With Plaid

Just as twin prints are being used together, designers are now working out little plaids with big plaids. The former for the dress, the latter for the topcoat. The patterning and coloring is identical, only the size of the plaid patterning differs.

Winter Cottons Include Velveteen Wedding Gown

A theme that holds interest in all fabric displays these days is that of cottons for all year 'round wear. Outstanding items that are made of fashionable cottons to wear right now are velveteen and corduroy dresses and coats, quilted gingham and percale jackets and house coats, work clothes in denim and gabardine, and dinner dresses in cotton lace, the newest out being a thin and lovely filmy mesh black lace. The latest cotton news is the wedding gown of white velveteen.

Beaded yokes are one way of arriving at chic and charm, and even newer is the single huge flower spray that adorns at some strategic point.

Suit Wedding For the informal hurry-up wedding suit styles are outstanding. Brighter stronger colors share the spotlight with subtle neutrals for going away costumes and for the wedding ceremony suits in lovely colorful wools are feminized with fur trimmings also dainty marabou muffs with matching hats.

Colorful Shoes A clever fashion trick is the cos-

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Last summer's national scrap rubber drive brought out 6.87 pounds per capita. Even this gratifying amount represented only a scraping of the surface of the scrap littering the backyards, cellars and attics of the country.

There are some 3,065,000 miles of roads in the United States of which 40% are of the surfaced highway type. More improved roads than any other country in the world.

There are more than 10 motor vehicles for each mile of highway in the United States. Pre-gas rationized Sundays made this ratio seem like 10 cars to each 100 feet of road. In 1940 it was estimated that the market value of passenger cars in the U.S. was $7,209,000,000; trucks had a value of $1,165,000,000.

say I worked hard to get it."

Janey stared out of the window at Peterson's house and beyond at the big yard where the kids were playing football. She held her pen elegantly in air.

"Sitting here looking out the window, I see a peaceful little town, and I wonder how the world can be in such a turmoil and the people of this world can have such hate for their fellow men. So I'm proud to send these stamps because I know I'm helping to make the whole world peaceful again like our little town."

She signed her name with an important flourish, not forgetting a conspicuous "Miss" in front of the "Janey." After she had sealed the letter she went on staring out of the window. It really was awfully peaceful. Overhead she heard a plane go humming by through the sunny afternoon air.

Then the voice of her best friend, Betty, called from outside—"Janey!" In an instant Janey was on her feet and tearing downstairs and out. She was not Hedy LaMarr nor a deep philosopher any more, but exactly twelve years old.

Dunking Old Idea

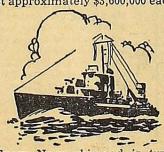

Dunking in your "bunchum" is a custom as ancient as Arabia. was there where the world's first cup of coffee was made from some strange, bright red berries the Arabians called "bunn." The beverage became "bunchum" and was thick enough to scoop out of the bowl with bits of food. Result: Introduction of dunking to the world!

This Is a 'Corker'

Here's a story that may well be 'ermed a 'corker.' Recently Robert E. Adams of Shreveport, La., mourned the disappearance of $40his whole week's pay. He considered himself a "hard-luck guy." A happy ending came later, however when he found the money—in his cork leg. Adams said he apparently had put the money in his trousers pocket in which there war a hole, and the money fell through into the artificial limb.

his wife. Lee, are already on their way to Tierra Libre when Jeff receives a note from Zora Mitchell warning them not to come. Jeff is to be chief engineer for a newly organized fruit company. They arrive in Tierra Libre to find both Zora and her husband dead, and Jeff suspects they were murdered. Conversations with his employer, Senor Montaya, and with his friends Jerry McInnis, Bill Henderson and Slats Monahan confirm his suspicions that there is something strange going on and that Mitchell and Zora were killed because they knew too much. Now on a tour of inspection with Montaya he is troubled by the apparently unfriendly attitude of Henderson and Monahan. A talk with Monahan reveals that he, too, suspects something is wrong.

CHAPTER VII

The trip down river to Tempujo was a quick one, running with the current. In the car going back to San Alejo they stopped but onceat the culvert and cribbing on which Henderson's crew was still at work.

Curt had to talk with Henderson, get behind that reserve he'd met with yesterday, learn some facts he could get his teeth into. Getting warnings was no good unless you knew what they were aimed against.

But he needed a reason for stopping, for the senor was reluctant Curt told Montaya he wasn't satisfied about the size of culvert being

"It wouldn't take too much strain to wash out that fill," he pointed out. "Better to be safe than sorry." "Mr. Mitchell passed on the size," the senor remarked.

"And I have respect for his judg-ment," Curt answered. "Neverthe-less, on work for which I'm responsible, I take no one's word un-til I'm satisfied myself."

Curt clambered down the steep embankment to examine the concrete pipe. He squatted on his heels, Henderson beside him, to make jottings in his little notebook. He measured the flume and hammered on it. An act for "The Dark Lily," for they were not many feet from Montaya. By lowering their heads they could speak in tones that wouldn't carry to the man above.

Curt wasted no time. "You put a note in my bag yesterday?" "Yes, Curt. Look, Curt, I've got to have a long talk with you. But not here and now, not in front of Montava."

"We'll manage it soon. Bill, Slats Monahan tells me Mitch was worried for days before his murder. That right?'

"Well-I, yes, Curt, he was."
"What about?"

"I-uh, don't know. He didn't let me in on it.' Henderson's voice had gone flat, Curt waited.

"The man's name is Emilio Vargas. Tomorrow he will report to you. It is my wish that he go everywhere with you when you are out on the job. Everywhere. Please, Mr. Curtis, observe this closely. You will find him a competent stenogra-pher and quite helpful in relieving you of minor details."

Curt pondered. A bodyguard for himself! That seemed to hint at danger to the Chief Engineer. Danger with its roots in business rivalry? Danger, as he'd thought briefly last night, from a personal enemy of Montaya, striking through an important subordinate? That would be a subtle sort of vengeance.

In the morning Emilio Vargas reported at Curt's office. He was a

The discense service, hung at his side. From his mouth drooped one of the native, sickly-sweet brown-jacketed native, sickly-sweet, brown-jacketed cigarettes.

Curt found Emilio a good guide and untiring in the saddle. Furlow there, name of Collins, comes from my home town, and Mitch . . . good at taking dictation—in Engoh, hell, Curt," Henderson let go lish—as Montaya had said. So he disgustedly, "this's why I want to was an asset. He was also com-

I know what to do and how to close at hand and there was no discussion to be had with either Steve Harvey or Herb Lawson aside from shop talk.

Friday morning he settled down in his office to a study of maps and progress reports, hydrographic charts, and various data of his own, hoarded from his tour of work north of the Negro a few years ago. Much of it applied here.

By noon on Saturday he was ready to start dictating memoranda to Emilio. This took three hours, during every minute of which the native smoked his brown cigarettes. Loosely packed, they burned fast, ash flew about at the slightest breath of air. He ran through two packages of them in this time, and Curt marveled that the man was able to work with his right eye constantly screwed against the smoke which curled up.

First impressions, suggestions, questions of the work at last on paper and out of the way, Curt phoned Montaya for an appointment early on Sunday, then went home. It was his first breathing space since arriving six days ago.

He played with the children for two hours. Curt took quickly to Zora Mitchell's small daughter. The shyness of her first few days had worn off in the lively company of Buddy and Chuck, and her loneliness for her mother was gradually fading. Lee had seen to that.

When it came time for the children's supper, Lee broke up the play in brisk fashion. She sent Curt to the shower, took charge of the children, and by the time Curt had had his bath and a cocktail, and was stretched out on the bed for a few minutes of relaxation before dressing, the youngsters were out of the way for the night.

Dinner time approached. This was the night Bill Henderson would be in for dinner. And that talk! "I am giving you a-ah, a sort of Curt was thinking, as he blew smoke secretary - bodyguard," Montaya wags ceilingward. He'd make the Thought of Lee was his Nemesis. She came breezing into the room, shooed him off the bed, made him

"We'll give Bill Henderson one hour, no more," said she firmly, laying out a print dress. "I've planned dinner so. Unless he's changed . . ."

"Wrong this time, honey," Curt said cheerfully. He tucked a clean sport shirt inside his fresh white ducks. "Tell you what, I'll bet you the evening at the clubhouse that Bill gets here in one piece and sober. I'll even dance with you without an argument."

Lee snapped him up on that. "It's a bet and I'll hold you to it, Mastermind, see if I don't! I can get Ines to stay this evening, in case the kids wake up." She whipped up the print dress, put it back, and pushed hangers back and forth. "Let's see, something to dance in . . ."

She selected a pastel organdie and Curt found himself pressed into service, to fasten the rhinestone shoulder buckles.

The hour passed and Bill Henderson hadn't arrived. Curt became gradually quieter during that time, fiddling unconsciously with his pipe. Lee knew the signs, knew he was puzzled and disturbed. She ragged him some about giving her the evening so glibly, and made a show of getting out his coat and panama-'Just to be ready." But they sat down to dinner alone.

The meal was not yet over when the phone rang. Lee answered.
"For you, dear," she said, one hand over the transmitter. Her nose wrinkled as at a bad odor. "The Dark Lily." And you're not to go back to the office tonight, you hear me? You lost fair and square, and it's my evening. We're going to the club!"

Curt frowned as he took the re-ceiver from her. Montaya's words were crisp and direct.

"I have just been told from Tempujo that Mr. Henderson has had an accident. He is unconscious and sinking rapidly. As you are an old

"I'll be right along. You're going, of course? Can we use a plane?" "Sorry, we have no lights at the Tempujo field for night landing. You can get to the station in five min-utes, no? Bueno. Dr. Berry has been notified-" "I'll be there!"

Curt sprinted to the bedroom and returned buckling on his gun belt. He grabbed up his coat and hat, gave Lee a flying kiss and explained on the way to the door.

"Henderson. Accident. Tempujo.

Be back when I get here." Besides the mestizo driver in the car that clanked down the mountainusual from fresh white shoes to pan- not only in doctrine, but in comama; Dr. Berry, the American head of the hospital; a young burnt-blond fellow named Lister, carrying cam-era, flash, tripod and finally, Curt. There had been a brief rain tonight, clearing the atmosphere. Though the airfield was a full kilometer away, grinding around a curve Curt saw plainly the lighted swimming pool and could make out tiny figures diving. Two more hu-man ants were at tennis on the bright court.

Very little was said during the run to Tempujo, which took scarcely thirty minutes. On the lower badly ballasted stretches the car rocked dangerously. Young Lister chewed gum incessantly, vigorously; Montaya smoked his oversize Turkish cigarettes, lighting one from another-he was on his third as they hit the many switches of the storage yards. Dr. Berry dozed.

Henderson was stretched out on an examination table in the dispensary, in charge of Dr. Fisher, a newly graduated interne from the It proves faith by works. It trans-Tempujo had been dishing out quinine or bandaging minor hurts of the laboring force, and the present case seemed to be beyond him.

But so was it beyond his superior. Dr. Berry straightened up after an examination of only a few seconds, to shake his head.

"Hopeless," he said bluntly. "Both legs broken, and several ribs-at least five or six; a blow on the back of the head that has probably fractured the skull; the chest caved in, one lung punctured. It's a wonder he wasn't killed instantly-or that he's lived this long."

Bill Henderson was still alive, though unconscious, and frothing pink at the mouth in his wracking efforts to breathe. He'd lost a great deal of blood. Young Fisher kept swabbing the lips clean with gauze, "He can't last more than a few minutes at most."

Still about Henderson was the smell of raw whiskey. Curt's thoughts were bitter. He'd seen so many men - good men, clean of heart—lose out here in the tropics because of drink. Now, Bill Henderson. And only a few days ago Bill had said he'd been on the wagon for some time. To be sure, "some time" with him might not mean what it would to another, but would he have gone to drinking tonight, when expected for dinner at San Alejo? That wasn't like the old

THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 18:15-17; Acts 1:8; 2:42; 6:1-4; 11:27-30; 13:1-3; I John 1:3. GOLDEN TEXT—As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.—John 20:21.

The church is the greatest institution in all the world, with the most widespread membership and influence. That is true from a purely secular or worldly standpoint. Then when we realize that here is more than a human organization, for it is in fact a divine organism; that it is the means through which God is now manifesting this power toward men, we see the supreme importance of understanding the church and our relationship to it. This week we stress the mission of the church. We note seven things.

I. Holiness of Life (Matt. 18:15-17). In a time when general standards of decency and honesty are low, and no one wants to be his brother's keeper, the church needs to be reminded that part of its mission is to maintain holiness in life and the relationship of one to another.

Notice that man's attitude toward his fellowman is first a matter for personal attention, then it becomes of real interest to the church, and if no response is found there, the offending individual is excluded and put in the hands of God. Be sure to observe that all this is done to 'gain' or win him back, not for revenge or in bitterness.

II. Witness in Divine Power (Acts

The witness bears testimony to that which he has experienced, and in the case of Christian experience he is assured of divine power in carrying out his sacred task.

The world would have laughed (and possibly did) at the idea of a small group of humble believers making the gospel effective simply by telling others about the Saviour -but it worked, because God's power was in it.

III. Unity in Faith and Practice (Acts 2:42).

The early church had not yet been split up by the philosophies of men and the vagaries of doctrine, which have since divided God's people. It was His purpose that His people should be one in Him, something we should recall before we divide them just to promote some theory of interpretation.

Unity is not only a matter of belief, it must reach into the practice side, there was Montaya, spotless as of daily life. They were steadfast munion and prayer. A bit more unity there might bring us closer together in belief.

IV. Service, Spiritual and Social (Acts 6:1-4).

The church rightly put the emphasis on the spiritual. The leaders pine Islands, in 1611, is considered who had gifts for ministry of the the oldest university under our Word did not permit themselves to be diverted into social service. Too many in the church have failed at that point. Even the good may be the mortal enemy of the best.

At the same time the early church did not neglect social needs. Men were appointed to care for them. In all too many instances the modern church has failed to minister to the social needs even of its own people and has weakly (and one fears gladly) turned them over to social agencies. What a pity!

V. Love-in Deed as Well as in Word (Acts 11:27-30).

Talking about the need of others, wishing them God's blessing, saying a desultory prayer asking God to bless and help them, is not sufficient, in fact it is not Christian at all (see James 2:14-17). Love acts. It gives. It serves.

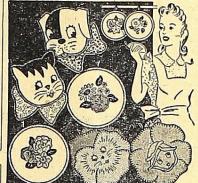

States. Dr. Fisher's chief duties at lates the gospel into a language an unbelieving world can understand.

VI. Obedience to the Holy Spirit (Acts 13:1-3).

God has certain plans for the work of the church in the world, and be sure that they are no small or indifferent plans. His mighty agent in bringing His will to pass in the world is the third person of the Trinity, the Holy Spirit. If the church will respond to His guidance and be subject to His control, the work of God may go on unhindered. But just there, Christian friends, the church has most ingloriously failed.

The early church was directed of the Holy Spirit to set apart Paul and Barnabas for the work of missionaries and evangelists. Knowing as we do the marvelous results of their ministry, we shudder at the thought of what might have happened if the church had disobeyed the Holy Spirit that day!

VII. Fellowship (I John 1:3) Here is the great secret of spiritual life and growth-Christian fellowship. And notice with care the place for it is in the church. If we do not come to the church we deprive ourselves and others of the opportunity for fellowship. The matter of church attendance (and twice on Sunday is not too much) needs to be put on our consciences lest we by our absence bear an anti-church testimony before our neighbors. But even more important is our own need of fellowship with God's people.

CHEERFUL, attractive, economical, practical—here is a new group of panholders perfectly described by those words. An animated pansy and rose, a kitten and pup pair, and the twosome which features bouquets of flowers are included. That's six panholders in all.

Will-o'-the-Wisp

In marshy country decaying vegetable matter gives off inflammable gases, and these sometimes become ignited. The light is called a Will-o'-the-Wisp, and used to be regarded as a ghostly being. Science is not quite certain as to the way in which these fires are started, but there is no doubt about their existence and their nature.

"ACCIDENTS HELP THE AXIS"

Use WEED CHAINS Usually winter doubles driving accidents. But this is no ordinary winter-it is a war winter when Americans must conserve every car and truck and tire until after victory is won.

So there is a new appreciation of Weed Tire Chains which prevent skid accidents and help get through snow without delays.

Examine your Weeds-if there are broken links have them replaced. Take chains off when no longer needed, and clean them after using; it pays.

If your used chains are worn out get new Weed American Bar-Reinforced -for double mileage. Or Weed Regular, standard of value for 39 years. Look for the name "Weed." AMERICAN CHAIN DIVISION York, Pa. Cigar boxes are going to war, according to a report issued by the Cigar Institute of America. Of course, there is nothing unusual in the fact that thousands of boxes of cigars are being sent as Christmas presents to men of the armed forces in this country and all over the globe. But it is a bit out of the ordinary for army trucks to go around gathering up empty cigar boxes. That is what is being done down in Miami. The trucks take the empties to the Miami Beach rifle range where they are put into service of Uncle Sam by the army air force technical command, which uses them to hold cartridges so that the ammunition will not lie in the sand or be exposed to the sun. Also in Florida, Girl Scouts are busily engaged in gathering up all the empty cigar boxes they can find. They have discovered a use for them-in fact, the Girl Scouts have found a double use for empty cigar boxes.

The deft fingers of the Girl Scouts transform the empty containers into "Pandora Boxes." That is, they decorate them in a manner that will appeal to youngsters and then take them to hospitals as gifts for sick children. The Girl Scouts also send cigar boxes to war. Decorated in a more adult fashion and properly filled, they are sent to dads and brothers who are in the armed forces. In Pasadena, Calif., members of the Junior Red Cross are also sending cigar boxes to war. They make game kits for soldiers and sailors, putting backgammon and checker boards on the outside and filling the inside with gadgets for these and other games. The Pasadena Junior Red Cross workers hope that they have started something that will spread over the nation. So don't throw away any old cigar boxes. Save them because they may go to war.

Speaking of men in the service, the other day I made one of those errors which seems to indicate that there are times when the contents of the old bean addle or something. My mistake was the statement that Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion of the world, had learned to fight while serving in the navy.
So Stanley Yeager, of Detroit, writes: "I think you muffed this one, L. L. I served with Tunney at Parris Island in the MARINES. I'll tell Ned on you." Hope Stan doesn't do that because Brother Ned is a World war veteran and might have something to say about giving credit to wrong outfits.

Food production being of great importance nowadays, there may be interest in the fact that Walter Slezak, stage actor who makes his film debut in the RKO picture, "Once Upon a Honeymoon," has turned farmer. He has purchased 80 acres of land in Bucks County, Pa., and intends to concentrate largely on livestock. With a long-term RKO contract and an assignment to support Charles Laughton in "This Land of Mine," Slezak won't have much time to devote to tilling the soil or looking after calves. He has solved that problem, he informed me during a recent New York visit, by employing an efficient superintend-

"My farm is beyond the genius belt," averred Slezak, his reference obviously being to the playwrights, George S. Kaufman, Sam and Bella Spewack and other well-knowns who own parts of Bucks County. "Also, it is not a whiskey and soda farm but an actual income producer. Guests are welcome to come and go and eat all they want. But anything they take away with them, from eggs to chickens, must be paid for in hard cash. Eggs in omelet form, are food; in the shell, they are commodities. "And having put himself on record, the actor switched from agriculture to praise of the talents of Ginger Rogers, who is co-starred with Cary Grant in "Once Upon a Honeymoon."

Getting back to men in uniform: At the Hotel Paris, where drafted men are replaced by wives of servicemen, the elevator operator is holding down her first job, her husband having been an arranger for Teddy Powell's orchestra. Among the other girls employed there is one who was evacuated from Bataan while her husband was lying wounded in a hospital. Another leaves her baby with a community group, works eight hours daily and devotes her spare time to caring for her child. Manager John Harrison reports that of the 12 girls now working, not one has uttered a word of complaint. Furthermore, all have voluntarily signed pledges to buy war bonds in excess of the usual 10 per cent of weekly salaries.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

Christmas Trees Must Have "Bills of Sale"

Now that the Christmas season is only a few weeks away people are beginning to think of Christmas trees and Christmas decorations.

According to a report recently rereived by losco county officials from the State Department of Agriculture the provisions of the Perry Act, commonly known as the Christmas Tree Law will again be inforced this year.

The law is designed to prevent wasteful cutting of evergreen trees and boughs from both private and public owned lands. It also is to assist in preventing cutting from such grounds without permission, in writing, from the owners.

The law in brief states that every Christmas tree or evergreen bough which is moved over the public highways must be accompanied by signed "Bill of Sale" upon a form provided by the Department of Agriculture. These legal forms (all others are not legal) may be secured from State Police Barracks, Conservation Officer, County Sheriff, County Agricultural Agents of from the State ricultural Agent or from the State Conservation Department, 738 State Office Building, Lansing.

Office Building, Lansing.

The Bill of Sale form requires two witnesses signatures as to the legality of the sale—it need not be gality of the sale—it need not be gality of the sale—it need not be gality of the sale—it need not be church school director.

Every driver of individual car, truck, trailer or car load carrying Chritmas greens must have a bonified Bill of Sale. Jobbers selling to truckers must furnish them with bonified Bills. A Bill of Sale must accompany each load beng transported.

Those having questions upon this subject are asked to contact the Huron National Forest Offices or County Agent, W. L. Finley.
