OVERNIGHT GUEST

THE STORY THUS FAR: Adam Bruce, FBI operator, Inspector Tope and Mrs. Tope met in the Maine woods. Tope found a man murdered at auto camp. The body was first identified as Mr. Led-forge, head of New England utilities. A car believed to have been used in the murder was raised from the quarries, with a woman's murdered body inside. Proof had been found that both the murdered man and the woman had been administered done prior to their murder. ministered dope prior to their murder. The case, with the suicide of Kell, seemed to have blown up in Tope's face and Joe Dane, assistant D.A., took over the case. Tope, however, still had plans and asked Bruce to help without saying what he had in mind.

CHAPTER XIII

"Stay and stay, as if you didn't know when to go. Stry till I come." He turned to Mr. Eberly. "I expect you've old clothes and fishing tackle up at the lodge?" he suggested.

"Clothes, yes. Fishing things are at home. Why?"

"I'll lend you mine," said Tope.
"Wait here." He turned to Mrs. Tope. "You come along, ma'am," he suggested mildly, "—case I can't find things.'

So they departed toward Cascade together; and Adam wondered what instructions Tope was giving Mrs. Tope. Then the old man returned alone, rod in hand, pockets bulging.

"I've got all you'll need, Mr. Eberly," he said. "Now I want to make a phone-call to Whitlock—we may need him. Then I'll be with you.'

Upon the dot of half-past four, Mr. Eberly, alone, wearing shoe-pacs, riding breeches, a loose flannel shirt and a bulky hunting coat buttoned to his throat, came in his own car up the drive to the Ledforge place in the hills above Ridgcomb. Mr. Eberly was rather pale, but steady.

The driveway forked, a little be-The driveway forked, a little below the house; one way led to the house itself, the other toward the garages and the service wing. Mr. Eberly turned in that direction, and as he came to the court upon which the garages faced, he pressed his

There were living quarters above the stalls for the cars. At one of the windows there a man appeared, called: "Right, Carl. I'll be down."

Mr. Eberly stayed in the car, kept his engine running. A pulse was thumping faintly in his throat. Ledforge, his fishing gear in his hands, a moment later appeared. He came briskly toward the car, a grayhaired little man with a long nose, deep lines framing his mouth, something suggestive of the Oriental in the cant of his eyes. He glanced behind him toward the house, climbed into the car, grasped Eberly by the hand.

"How are you, Carl?"

"First rate," Eberly assured him.
He added: "I phoned to make sure you had arrived. You so often have to change your plans."

"Lucky you did," Ledforge agreed. "My sister has callers. Your Miss Dewain, and an ironjawed woman I don't know. Alice fusses about my wearing woods clothes in the house. That's why told you to come here instead of the front door." And he said: "The trout should rise. Wind's wester-

Eberly made no comment. He was guiding the car up the winding road toward the trout pond, and a thick growth of hemlock and pine had already hidden from their view the house below them.

Ledforge remarked: "I'm in a fishing mood, Carl. Sick of New York. I'd like to stay up here a month and do nothing but fish with "How are things in New York?" Ledforge said, moving his shoulders as though to shake off a burden: "Well, I've had an unpleasant few days. Holdom has gone wrong, Carl. But let me forget business. Been doing any fishing?'

"Got a new rod," Eberly replied. "And I've gone back to snelled

"The trout won't know the difference," Ledforge chuckled. "Well, here we are."

Eberly pulled up beside the boathouse, and they got out and began to set up their rods. "We're here just at the right time," Ledforge decided. "Best fishing is from now till dark."

Eberly nodded, and they turned toward the boathouse.

Ledforge was ahead, Eberly behind; and Eberly cleared his throat rather loudly, and he asked in a strained tone:

"Rufus, you feel all right?" Ledforge whirled to look at him. "Certainly! I'm tired, but I'm always tired. Why?"

"I don't quite know," Eberly admitted. "Something about you seems-different. Your voice, and the way you handle that rod; and you look a little thinner."

Ledforge laughed, not mirthfully. "If you'd been working as hard as I—and I've a slight cold."

Eberly nodded. "So have I. That's why I bundled up against this wind." He added insistently: "I don't know what it is. The way you walk, maybe. You look taller—"

"Nonsense," Ledforge curtly insisted. "Come. Get in!" He slid the canoe into the water.

"I feel a lot more secure in the rowboat," Eberly suggested. "And so do the trout," Ledforge retorted with a laugh. "They hear the rowlocks as soon as we leave the dock. Time you got over being afraid of a canoe, old man."

Eberly grinned. "Oh, all right.

My life is in your hands," he said, and took the front seat. He held to the edge of the dock while Ledforge got in, then took his paddle, and they moved away, out of the little cove, around the wooded point, across the

Once Eberly turned half around in his seat to look back. The boathouse was completely hidden by the wooded point between. The wind was behind them, toward the mouth of the gorge where the dam held back these waters. Ledforge, when they were a hundred yards offshore, said:

"Stop paddling, Carl, and let's try them here. We'll drift with the wind, fish the shoals here first, and the deep water afterward."
"Good enough," Eberly agreed.
He laid down his paddle and began to cast, turning a little sidewise so that his back cast would not inter-able to see the other man out of the corner of his eye; and this somehow was consoling. The back of his neck no longer crawled; his spine was no longer cold.

Yet he cast badly, his line a tangle on the water. But Ledforge, he saw, did no better. The other's line splashed and slatted against the side of the canoe. Ledforge may have felt Eberly's sidelong glance, for he said:

"This line's sticky. Need a new one, I guess." And then he said: 'Hullo, you're perspiring, Carl! Better unbutton that coat.'

Eberly hesitated. "I am a little hot," he agreed, and-his back toward the other man-he loosed the upper buttons. He said: "You've forgotten how to cast, Rufus."

There was a momentary pause. They had drifted, Eberly perceived, out into the deep water where the old brook-channel ran.

And then Ledforge said: "I'll try it standing up. Always could do better so.'

He got uncertainly to his feet, and seemed to totter. And suddenly they were both in the water. The canoe, as Ledforge in falling clung to it, dipped one gunwale and thus overturned, the other gunwale coming down hard across Eberly's hips as, belatedly, he scrambled clear.

The point that hid the boathouse was well over a hundred yards away; the dam and the near shoulder of the gorge perhaps fifty yards. Ledforge, without a word, began to swim toward the rocky shore be-

Eberly did not call out as he watched Ledforge swim so quietly away.

Joe Dane, in the hour of Tope's humiliation, was quick with a theory of his own. "The whole thing's plain enough," he declared. "Ledforge was having an affair with Mrs. Kell, brought her to Dewain's Mill that night; and Kell trailed them there and killed both of them."

They stood in Will Banion's chapel. Quill was gone, Doctor Medford busy somewhere in the small rooms behind. Mat Cumberland scratched his head.

So Joe remembered Earl Priddy and Isaac Murrell, and took Cumberland to hear their stories. Cumberland questioned Ike at length, and was half convinced at last that Rufus Ledforge had been on Friday right in Little Bear. Afterward they dropped Earl and Ike at Dewain's Mill, and Mat Cumberland himself thanked them for great services to the commonwealth, while Mr. Murrell and Mrs. Priddy stood by in excited pride. Then Joe and Cumberland drove on. It was just past five when they came up the drive to the Ledforge mansion. Joe recognized Bee Dewain's car at the steps. "What's she doing here?" he wondered; but the district attorney had no answer to propose.

Joe rang the bell and asked to see Miss Ledforge. She came to them in the small reception room, and Joe said grimly:

"Miss Ledforge, I've an unpleas-ant duty. This is District Attorney Cumberland. I'm Mr. Dane, his assistant. We've found a man dead; and some people think it is your brother, Mr. Ledforge. Will you view the body, identify it?"

The frail old woman turned white as snow. "My brother?" she whis-

"Yes. Rufus Ledforge."
"But Rufus is here!" Miss Ledforge protested, her weak voice somehow desperate.

"Here?" It was Joe's turn to be shaken. Then he smiled. "Now, Miss Ledforge, I'm sorry, but you mustn't try to deceive us.'

"But he is," she insisted, urgently. "He's up at the trout pond fishing with Mr. Eberly."

Joe Dane looked at Mat, and he demanded angrily: "Where is this trout pond?'

"Why, you take the road past the garage," Miss Ledforge told him. "You can't miss it." Her voice was tremulous, her white hand pressed to her bosom.

"Come on, Mat," Dane turned. "We'll soon see!" he said harshly. But Mat said: "Look out, Joe!" Miss Ledforge, swaying like a reed, had slipped softly to the floor.

They were alone in the reception room, but the door into the hall was open. At Mat's ejaculation, Bee Dewain appeared there in the doorway, Mrs. Tope behind her. Joe had tried, too late, to catch the fainting woman; he was on his knees now, beside her; he looked up stupidly at Bee, and the girl with a gesture swept him aside.

"Get out of here, both of you!" she cried. "You heartless idiots!

We'll take care of her!"

Adam carried a rifle; Whitlock, the last to emerge, carried a small outboard motor, awkwardly.

"All right, Adam," Tope said briskly. "You and Beal get out on the point, where you can see. Whit-lock, put the motor on the rowboat, and don't make any noise. Adam, we won't start till you shoot. Miss him once; but hit him if you have

Adam nodded, moved quickly away. Behind him, Tope and Whitlock were busy for a while. Then they waited, silent, ready.

Adam lay prone in the underbrush on the point, the rifle trained. The canoe was well offshore; he saw the men in it stop paddling and begin to fish. His pulse was shaking him.

Later, Ledforge stood up in the canoe; and then he lurched overside and fell. The canoe overturned, floated with its bottom just awash. Adam, his eyes peering through the sights, saw Eberly floating with his head well out of water, saw Led-forge swimming toward the shore. Ten yards of open water lay between the two men.

Ledforge turned to look back. And then he began to swim back toward lovely white wine tone that we hear the other man. Eberly threw up about so much these days. The big sparkle they are not only most flat-

Adam pressed the trigger; he saw the water leap upward where the bullet hit, midway between the two men. Ledforge looked toward the sound of the report; and at the same instant the outboard motor on the rowboat in the cove started with a staccato roar.

Adam threw in another shell; but then the boat, racing toward the two men in the water, came between him and Ledforge. He leaped to his feet as the boat came to where the two men were.

Whitlock handled the boat; Tope was in the bow. Whitlock cut off the engine, and they coasted to a Ledforge had reached Mr. Eberly, was supporting the other man in the water.

"It's all right, Carl!" he said reassuringly, in the sudden silence as the engine died. "Take it easy. You're all right now."

And then Tope and Whitlock were helping them both into the boat. Without a word, when this was done, Whitlock started the engine, preventing conversation; and he swung the boat back toward the cove. Whitlock sat in the stern, Tope in the bow. Ledforge and Eberly side by side on the midships thwart.

Ledforge, facing forward, saw men appear on the wharf, as they approached. Two came leaping from a car; two came running along the shore. One of these two held a rifle in his hands. But the buzzing roar of the engine made it impossible for the moment for Ledforge to ask questions which the sight of these strangers provoked; and when, the engine cut, they slid alongside the wharf, Joe Dane had the first word.

"What in blazes!" he demanded. "Tope, what are you doing here?" Tope said gently: "Call it meddling, Joe."

Then Ledforge cut in, his face white with anger.

"Just a minute!" he exclaimed. 'I've a few questions to ask, myself," he added. "Of course, Mr. Eberly and I are grateful for your rescue; but after all, you're trespassers." He glanced at the gun in Adam's hand. "Poachers too, apparently. Out of season, and on private land. May I have an explanation?"

Midwinter Fur Modes Register Strikingly Novel Style Trends

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NOW that the cold midwinter weather is bringing out a brilliant pregeantry of fabulous furs of unparalleled beauty and versatility, a thrilling chapter is being added which tells of many striking new

For instance, last-minute-styled fur jackets and coats bring the message of a tendency toward smart fitted lines. Note the "new look" of the leopard jacket achieved by its snug fit through the torso. These fitted lines make news, big news! flaring longer-in-back-peplum also interprets a definitely new The notched collar and trend. rounded revers are important style details. The full easy sleeves fit close at the wrist above a flare

The distinguished-looking Alaska seal model to the right is made like a fitted officer's coat. It has the characteristic lapels, collar and belt at the back to hold in fullness. The silver buttons that adorn this handsome coat bear a significant message. The unusual styling of this coat, also the leopard jacket goes to show that new and thrilling things are being done in furcraft design this season.

Black broadtail plays an important role in the distinguished looking three-piece costume shown to the left. This very elegant ensemble is tailored of soft wool in the fur hats that are creating the big news is its three-quarter length cape, which is lined throughout with black American broadtail. The brim of the tip-tilted Breton sailor is also beauty of this stunning outfit is that with the cape removed one has a perfect suit for spring. Wearing the cape means solid comfort and protection on a cold wintry day. Lic-orice black buttons close the jacket and pocket flap.

Featured as topflight fashion in the fall, cape stoles of mink worn with suits or smart wool dresses, also worn with sleek satin gowns for the cocktail hour made the "hit" of the season. Comes winter and the stole cape in exquisite ermine becomes a most glamorous evening fashion. Comes spring and the fashion world will see the furcape theme worked out in cunning brief shoulder and waist - depth

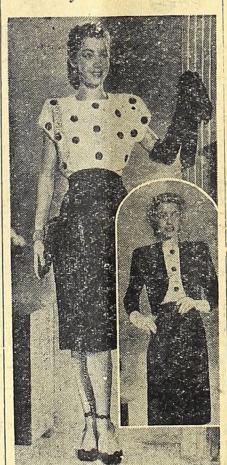

There's much excitement this winter over the fascinating "little" furs which are playing a most glamorous role in the evening mode, as well as being the smartest ever worn with the unfurred suit or coat. It is in such items as hat and bag ensembles, neckpieces, headbands and belts to match, wide detachable cuffs that form a muff and countless other fantasies that furcraft goes to a new high in artistry and ingenious design.

While fur jackets and capes for spring will include many types, the newest of the new will trend to very brief effects, some in cunning bolero styles. The bell hop jacket in light weight gray furs is youthful and smart as can be.

Outstanding in the present grand and glorious panorama of winter fur fashions are chic hats carried out in every mood, from simplest little berets and turbans to most dramatic types, some with skyscraper crowns, others with wide brims. However, it is the jewel-embroidered sensation. With their color and tering to the wearer but they add a gay and bright note to the midwinter costume itself.

Plays Dual Role

Here's a magic costume that one moment appears as a charming short length dinner dress and the next moment, with the jacket, it becomes a perfect cocktail suit. It's the little jacket that does the trick. When the jacket is worn several of quins on the white blouse line up as buttons (see inset). A costume like this designed for many-purpose wear is the type best dressed women select to carry through midseason into spring. Advance news coming in heralds the importance of boleros and other brief jackets for

Buttons Again Take Fashion Spotlight

Resort and advance spring fashions bring the message of buttons buttons and more buttons, used not only in a functional way but in a unique and decorative manner as well. One of the style tricks that buttons perform is that of going single file around deep armholes where the sleeves are seamed into the dress. Newer yet is the wide wing sleeve that buttons on instead of being seamed on. In this way the sleeves can be removed, leaving the buttons which thus become purely ornamental on a jumper-like dress. Another unique stunt is that of outlining pockets, yokes, brief shoulder capes, necklines and so on, with buttons. For sports fashions and casuals the buttons are that simple they add a tailored look to the garment. This is true also of the large plastic buttons that dramatize so many of the new spring toppers. However, on the dressier modes jewel-like buttons and the new plastic flower buttons are scattered about in most designful and versatile ways.

Versatile Boleros Are

over boleros in the new spring mode they are making a feature of them, both in bolero suits and dresses and as separates to wear with this skirt and that. The new boleros are very versatile including very interesting novelties. One noted style creator favors bright colors such as peacock the large polka dots of green se- blue or geranium pink for boleros that team with skirt and blouse in charming color-contrast schemes. And then there is the bolero in bustlength, which often is richly goldembroidered, and the very new-looking bolero with balloon or lantern sleeves. Bolero suits for town wear are smartly tailored in navy or the chic neutral grays and beige tones.

THE Pacific coast baseball league was recently turned down in a major league bid. It is quite possible that the West coast stretch isn't entirely major territory as far as all its cities or teams are concerned. This also applies to both the American and National league, which in many places carry a strong minor league touch, as everyone connected with baseball knows. But the main point is that in a general sporting way the Pacific coast in many spots has more of a big league touch than the East, Midwest or the South. And the argument isn't even close. The only way to prove this point is through facts and figures, not by words that are always unimportant.

For a few examples - after a bad football year where both Southern California and UCLA were beaten two or three times, they outdrew Army and Navy. The western rec-ord count was 103,000 and this isn't the first time 100,000 has been beat-en on the West coast. Under the same conditions Southern California and UCLA in the East, Midwest or South would have drawn from 30,000 to 40,000 at the limit. Now we come to racing, which interests more millions than most people know-more than almost any other sport or business or whatever you care to call it.

Richest Purses in West

Those who follow racing know the purses offered in New York, Chi cago, Maryland, Florida, New Orleans and Kentucky, all among the leading racing states, rarely top

Here are some of the purses to be offered at Santa Anita, Calif.:

One hundred thousand dollar Santa Anita handicap-March 9. Richest all-age race. One hundred thousand dollar Santa Anita Derby-February 23. Tops for the three-year-olds.

Fifty thousand dollars for the Santa Catalina, San Pasqual, Santa Margarita, San Antonio and San Juan Capistrano. Five in all eight

$25,000 stakes. A stake total of $650,000 for the all-time average of $43,333 per

No purse is under $3,000. Can the East, South or Midwest approach these figures? You know what the answer is.

New Baseball Territory

All this is further proof that the two lopsided big leagues, which need unlimited night baseball for many teams to keep going, can no longer overlook a new country in the way of population and general sporting interest. Los Angeles and San Francisco are far ahead of most of the big league cities in the matter of population and enthusiasm for

It is generally realized by those who know their sport that St. Louis, Boston and Philadelphia are one major - league - club towns. Cincinnati, Washington and a few others don't belong in the same class with Los Angeles and San Francisco on the sporting side. The fact is that California and Florida are our two best climate states, unless you happen to like colder weather.

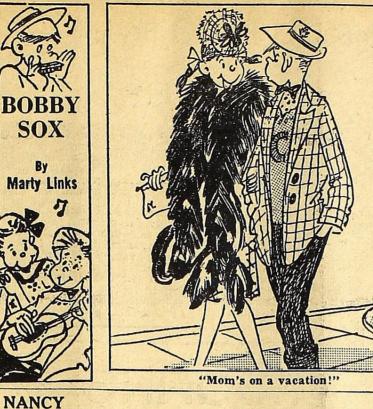

It is all a question of facts, figures and fair play. California merely happens to be the best football state, the best racing state, the best track-and-field state in the country. Neither New York nor Chieage could even approach the Olympie games of 1932 which Los Angeles held. Both cities know this.

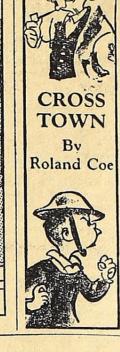

One trouble is that too many peoply shy away from facts and truth, Especially those interested only on the side of the dollar.

For one example, New York has meither the football nor racing facilities to be ranked in the same class with Los Angeles, unless you enjoy looking at football games back of a thick pillar or being trampled underfoot at a race track. In the course of too many years, your correspondent has worked in the border states, the deep South, the East, the Midwest, the Far West and the Southwest. Pride of section is a good thing, but the United States is much more important.

There was a time when the Atlantic and Pacific coasts were many days apart. Now they are only a few hours apart. This also goes for the South and the North. The Gulf and the Great Lakes are now only a hop, step and jump away. But up to date the Far West has taken all the worst of it from big league baseball and big league pro football. The South's major problem has been spectator capacity where only the New Orleans stadium can handle 70,000 people. And no Southern city has a population around the million mark. This, in time, will be taken care of. Certainly the South's contribution to every form of sport has been enormous, whether this be baseball, football, golf or other sports. The South, plus California, has the jump in those games, with practically 12 months of play.

WHY Michigan Bell Goes to Court Again

A year ago, Michigan Bell asked the Ingham Circuit Court for relief from an order of the Michigan Public Service Commission directing us to refund $3,500,000 from 1944 revenues. That court declared the order illegal on the grounds that the Commission has no authority to make a retroactive rate reduction. The issue has been taken to the Michigan Supreme Court on appeal.

On December 13, 1945, the Commission issued another order directing us to refund $7,000,000 from 1944 and 1945 revenues and to reduce rates for 1946 by an amount estimated by the Commission to be $3,500,000. Michigan Bell has now asked the Ingham Circuit Court to restrain the Commission from enforcing this present order.

We went to court BEFORE because of our obligation to protect the service we render the public. For the same reason, we must go to court AGAIN.

We can afford no such reduction in our revenues, and the same conditions apply to the refund provisions of the new order as in the 1944 order, previously held illegal.

Each utility, the same as each different business, has its own individual problems. During the war, we gained a large number of telephones, although restrictions prevented expansion of facilities to meet ordinary civilian needs. We still are far behind the demand for service.

We are shy $50,000,000 of investment in facilities needed to serve today's business the way it should be served. This plant already would have been built had it not been for the war. Now it must be built. But as we add these new investment dollars, with no additional revenues from the increased investment, our rate of earnings will go even lower than the inadequate level to which it already has fallen.

Michigan Bell's earnings today are a lot lower than those of most industries. Our wartime earnings were the lowest in history except during the depression. Now and in the future, savings from lower taxes will be more than offset by the increased costs of doing business. Our basic wage rates, for example, are up more than 10 per cent since a year ago and the national pattern of further wage increases is still a matter of debate. Other costs are climbing higher every day.

Unless conditions not now forseeable improve the situation, the Commission's order would reduce our earnings to the point of impaired credit, which, if continued too long, would result in in-

When the financial standing of a public service institution is impaired, rate increases are necessary or the service slips. Earnings must be fair over the years or good telephone service cannot be main-

If refunds and a rate reduction cut our earnings further, it will tend to discourage folks from investing their money in the telephone business And we'll be needing more investment money from now on to expand and improve telephone service in keeping with the high standards you

Michigan Bell's objective is to furnish the best possible service at the lowest possible cost. Since 1936, the last time the Company challenged a reduction in exchange rates, there have been numerous rate cuts, representing a total savings of some $7,700,000 a year on the basis of present usage.

Looking toward the widest possible use of the service, we expect and want our rates to come down as rapidly as technical improvements will permit. Such improvements in the past have kept telephone rates down in the face of rising costs. But today, increased costs are coming so rapidly that improvements in the telephone art cannot keep pace in offsetting them. We simply cannot afford another rate cut at this time.

What it all adds up to is this - Michigan Bell is not in court seeking increased rates or large profits. The Company is in court AGAIN to contest an order which is contrary to present economic conditions and which cannot be carried out at this time without jeopardizing the future quality of your telephone service.

WASHINGTON. - The problem of snow removal from the sidewalks around the "Summer White House" created something of a problem just before President Truman paid his Christmas visit to Independence,

At first nothing was done about the snow around the Truman mansion. Secret service agents guarding the house said it was their job to guard, not to shovel. Finally James T. Hopkins, aged 59, got out his horse Dick, aged five, and with a home-made snow plow cleared the snow from the North Delaware street side of the Truman home. But he didn't have time to clear the West Van Horn road side because he had to clear the walks used by children.

One day before Mrs. Truman arrived, however, George Dodsworth, president of the Independence chamber of commerce, called out the chamber's six new directors. He told them that the snow around the "Summer White House" would have to be cleared and their initiation into the chamber would be to do the job.

They did a good job. The walks around the Truman home were thoroughly shoveled.

They did not, however, tackle the drive in the rear of the house. So next morning, two employees from the highway department arrived to clear the driveway. They had shoveled for about 20 minutes when the first lady appeared on the back

"You are shoveling gravel on the grass," admonished Mrs. Truman, always a meticulous housekeeper.

There were some explanations that they had been sent by the highway department to clear the snow. "I don't care who sent you," replied Mrs. Truman. "I want you to

Which is exactly what they did. Mrs. Truman left instructions with a secret service agent not to let anyone scoop snow from the drive. And no one has.

THE OTHER LAFOLLETTE.

When the name LaFollette is mentioned in Washington, most people think of the senator from Wisconsin, who succeeded his crusading bull-moose father. But another La-Follette, from Indiana, not Wisconsin, who sits in the house of representatives, not the senate, is also attracting more and more attention.

Empty chairs fill up quickly when Rep. Charles LaFollette takes the floor for a speech. Colleagues may sometimes disagree with the twofisted Indiana Republican, but they agree that what he says usually is interesting and never fails to pack a wallop.

In fact, one of his recent speeches packed such a wallop that conservative colleagues on the Republican side almost swooned. For LaFollette attacked that super-sacred the animal.

"There are no such things as states' rights," declared the red-headed Hoosier. "There are rights of citizens who live within a state. The man who speaks of state sovereignty speaks the language of totalitarianism. There is only individual sovereignty."

Colleagues on both sides of the aisle listened in amazed silence. Only congressmen to answer were two Republicans: Jensen of Iowa and Bates of Massachusetts. Significantly, no whimpers came from southern Democrats.

"Did not the sovereignty of the states exist long before the federal government was established?" asked Bates.

"Yes, but man existed long before the state of Massachu-setts," shot back LaFollette. "The state of Massachusetts did not create its citizens and does not own them. The citizens own the state. In the continental congress and the convention which created the constitution . . . the issue was not states' rights.

"The issue was, 'Shall the people determine that they can be better served by a (federal) government with power over the state.' That is the constitutional answer, and it is the only answer that parallels with any idea of the innate dignity and honor of mankind. From that premise I do not yield, nor shall I ever yield, God giving me the strength to retain my intellectual, moral and spiritual integrity."

CAPITAL CHAFF.

Since publication of General Marshall's letter to Governor Dewey telling how we were cracking Japanese and German codes, every major government has been changing its codes almost daily. In addition, the best cryptographers in the world are now hard at work in every capital trying to figure out new unbreakable codes. All suspect we have broken their codes too. . . .

The row between Mayor Maestri of New Orleans and Jimmy Comiskey was patched up at a secret caucus.

Ceaseless Battle Waged With Infantile Paralysis

By AL JEDLICKA (WNU Features.)

N JUNE 30, 1944, C. H. Crabtree, North Carolina representative of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, put in a long distance call to headquarters in New York. A serious outbreak of polio had occurred in the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains and hospital facilities were being taxed to capacity. Answering Crabtree's urgent appeal almost immediately, the National state to meet the emergency.

Meanwhile, the local Mecklenburg and Gastonia county chapters had swung into action, furnishing supplies and equipment for treatment of the sick and helpless victims streaming into the overcrowded Charlotte Memorial hospital and the State Orthopedic hospital nearby. The Red Cross recruited nurses, and the National Foundation sent down a physical therapist.

But still the disease raged, and the stricken poured in: youngsters with limp and painful limbs, some unable to swallow or barely able to breathe. As ever, the dread disease made no distinction, as the helpless came in from mining villages in the hills, mill towns in the valley and from adjacent rural and urban Traveling to Hickory in the heart of the epidemic area, Crabtree conferred with Dr. A. Gaither Hahn, chairman of the Catawba county chapter, and Dr. H. C. Whims, county health officer, and it was determined to erect an emergency hospital outside the town on the site of a summer camp.

Build Emergency Hospital.

FOUR-YEAR-OLD "Bunky" Garrett of Linville, N. C., made a speedy comeback after suffering an attack of poliomyelitis that crippled his arms, legs and neck during the North Carolina epidemic of 1944. He progressed rapidly under the expert care he received there and by August 15 he was in the convalescent ward. > Fight Polio All Over U. S. Known as "The Miracle of Hickory," the work accomplished in North Carolina during the polio epidemic of 1944 was typical of the service rendered by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis throughout the country during the worst outbreak since 1916. In Hickory alone, the organization expended $389,474 up to November 1 of 1944, with the 99 state chapters contributing an additional $57,000.

Leader in the fight against dread polio since its inception in 1937 under the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who himself overcame the paralyzing effects of the malady, the National Foundation acts as the centralizing force in combating the disease. With funds donated by generous Americans during the March of Dimes each year, the organization provides for important research into polio, trains specialists and controls the distribution of necessary assistance during outbreaks.

Along with the National Foundation, the local chapters, retaining half of the funds raised during the annual January campaigns, furnish the means for financing such necessary services in the community as hospitalization for polio victims. apy care, ambulance transport and equipment for communal use and | cold or scarlet fever.

Able to quickly mobilize skilled specialists, the National Foundation, as in the case of Hickory, is in a position to employ them where needed the most. In instances where the demand was widespread, funds were furnished for shuttling personnel from one area to another, with the trained specialists often teaching willing bystanders techniques in treatment to care for the afflicted while they moved on elsewhere.

As the March of Dimes extends this year from January 14 to 31, being dedicated to the memory of the late President, the nation is reminded that polio is no respecter of persons, nor is it confined to any particular section of the country.

Records for incidence of polio for the first 10 months of 1945 show that the 12,671 reported cases were well scattered throughout the U. S. Though the North Atlantic states of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, with their large populations, were hit the heaviest, the east north central states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin suffered considerably along with the west central states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas.

Three Stages in Polio.

The first stage, lasting from 24 to 48 hours, is marked by sore throat, nose inflammation, nausea, vomiting and fever. The second stage is characterized by headache, stiff neck and back, tremor of lips and hands, general prostration, pain, muscle tenderness, disturbances of the reflexes and changes in the spinal fluid, with a gradual appearance becoming more intense as the infection of the spinal cord progresses. As many as 50 per cent of persons affected in this stage recover without harm, it is estimated.

Without any break, the third stage develops gradually from the second, with pain continuing severe, muscle spasms occurring, and finally paralysis setting in on the affected mem-

Because of the absence of any preventive measures, emphasis is placed upon treatment since infantile paralysis destroys nerve tissues and attacks either the spinal cord or lower part of the brain in its beginning stages.

One of the recent developments in treating polio embraces Sister Kenny's hot-pack method, originally sponsored and financed by the National Foundation. Under procedure carried out by trained personnel, Miss Kenny's system calls for the application of sections of woolen blankets wrung out in boiling water, on the stricken areas to prevent contraction, twisting and distortion of affected muscles. Splints and bandages formerly used to avert damaging after-effects are not utilized under this technique.

'Iron Lungs' Used.

In the "bulbar" cases where the lower part of the brain is involved, respirators or "iron lungs" are often required because of difficulties encountered in breathing. Since patients cannot swallow, their saliva may flow down into their lungs, so it is important to keep their heads below the level of their chests.

Sister Kenny's hot-pack method usually is continued through the paralysis stage and often beyond the acute period. Parents are trained gery, muscle retraining, fitting of braces, physical therapy and other

Fast Feathering Is Desirable in Poultry

Superior Broilers Are Rapid Developers

Early development of feathers by chicken is a good indication that will make a well-feathered and otherwise desirable broiler or fryer. This is the conclusion reached by research workers of the U.S. department of agriculture, after three years of scientific studies.

Prospects for superior market quality are still better if the chicken gains weight rapidly between the ages of 3 and 6 weeks and has a fairly broad breast at the end of that period.

These characteristics were found to be inherited. A poultryman, therefore, can improve his breeding stock, for the production of broilers and fryers, by selecting those chickens that feather and develop rapidly during the first few weeks of life. Differences among birds are not so readily apparent at a later date.

Selection for fast feathering can readily be made when the chicks are about a day old by noting those that have the longest feather sheaths or partially developed quills.

Agriculture In the News

Cranberries

Originally called craneberries, cranberries were found growing wild in the marshes by the Pilgrims in 1620. Containing 13 important minerals and vitamins they are highly prized as a food article.

During late years they found their place in the industrial field. Cranberry wax added to raise the melting point of those waxes. Ursolic acid from the wax of cranberry skins has important therapeutic applications. The oil from the seeds is used in shampoos. Cranberry meal has become valued as a filler for plastics.

Improved Machinery New Plow

New type plow adjustable for deep plowing will find many uses.

A new plow designed by Oliver corporation, Chicago, has additional bases set a few inches below and behind, as well as to one side of the upper bases. The latter are adjusted to normal depth for conventional plowing, while the lower bases, by widening and deepening the cut, crumble the plowpan, or hard undersoil, hitherto left untouched, mixing it slightly with the lower portion of the top soil.

Blueprint for Labor-Management Love and Kisses

This is the Elmer Twitchell plan for Better Understandings Between Labor and Management:

1-Fundamentally all the trouble is due to the fact neither side completely understands the other. There can be no peace until some system is adopted, so that each side can experience all the headaches of the other.

2-Workers do not get enough golf. Employers do not get enough life without golf. Let the workingman have the golf clubs six months a year and provide him with a set of clubs. After a few weeks of worrying over backswings, the right grip, etc., all other problems will seem relatively unimportant. And the boss, six months away from golf and not giving a darn about the pivot or knee action would find himself a different person. Positively.

3-Let the workers split with the bosses the routine of going through the mail, answering the unnecessary letters, correcting Miss Abernathy's spelling, trying to find the memoranda which was put where it couldn't be mislaid, wading through those long lunches at the Business Men's club, taking all those indigestion tablets from 2:30 to 4:30 and then getting home to find the wife's bridge party is still on.

(And make the employers eat some of those sandwiches put into a worker's lunch box.)

4-Alternate months let the workers prepare banquet speeches, sit through dull operas, get into stiff shirts and tuxedos for dinner, use three types of fork and worry about stomach ulcers. And make the boss go to those smokers, stop for a beer at Hennessy's, listen to the soap operas, have a quickie of corned beef and cabbage and endure all those double features.

5-For part of every month make the workers serve on new relief campaigns, worry over dinner speeches, explain to stockholders, wade through the questionnaires, fill out the required federal forms and always keep their pants pressed; while the bosses shake their own drinks, help mind the baby, listen to the radio in their stockinged feet and tend the furnace.

6 - Let the workingman have three homes, two cars, an outdoor swimming pool, a yacht and those week-end house parties. That should help make him realize what the boss has to stand up under. And make the employer live in the little bungalow, raise tropical fish, get along with the undersized medicine cabinet, use the family tub, fix his own plumbing, eat in his shirt sleeves and help eight kids with the homework. Brother, there will be closer understandings after that. (Copies of the above plan may be had by sending in a barrel of potatoes, a priority on a new Ford and eight lumps of ARTIFICIAL HELPING LIMBS PUT TO WORK . . . Of course the artificial hand worn by this veteran (left), Lawrence Dilworth, is not to be compared with the one he lost. But he can use tools with it. Vincent Yannone, right, also knew the horror inspired by the word "disability." He now wonders why he ever let it scare him. He has pulled up his trousers to show his artificial leg. Both vets are among a group now employed in a North Bergen, N. J., manufacturing plant. These men now spell "disability"—a-b-i-l-i-t-y.

GOBS DON NEW UNIFORMS . . . Bell bottom trousers, suit of navy blue, the traditional uniform worn by sea-faring men since the 14th century, are soon to fade into oblivion. White trousers may be won with the blue battle jacket in warm weather. The sailors will keep their "pea coat." The new uniforms will be given a three-months test.

KYLE MILKS ON BROADWAY . . . Miss San Antonio, the milkmaid, is Kyle MacDonnell. She demonstrates how New York looked at Times Square when it was farmland, by milking a cow in the "hub of the world." THE LAWS OF A PEOPLE

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—I will delight myself in thy commandments, which I have loved.—Psalm 119-47.

Law is necessary to order. Basic laws have been laid down by God for the orderly administration of His Physical laws are of great importance, but of even deeper signifi-cance are the moral and spiritual laws which control the human life. There is in the world a moral law -a distinction between right and wrong-which man may ignore only to his own sorrow, and which he cannot abrogate or destroy. All laws of men which are true and right are founded on this underlying moral law, and they are in reality simply a development and interpretation of "God's Code of Morals"-the Ten Commandments.

These fundamental laws were given to Israel at Mount Sinai, but they speak to us with remarkable freshness and directness. They merit more extensive study than we can give them in this limited space, but we can note their broad outlines and certain practical applications. There are two divisions-one concerns man in his relation to God, and the other in his relation to men. We

I. A Right View of God (vv. 1-11). The first and most important question to be asked regarding any law is, "By whom was it established?" Legislation by an unauthorized person or organization has no power over others. Who gave the Ten Commandments? Verse I tells us "God spake all these words."

Men may sneer at theology as being outmoded, but the fact is that Christian doctrine is the only safe foundation for Christian character.

1. Whom to Worship (vv. 2-5) There can be but one true God, and He alone is to be worshiped. He is a personal being, ready to enter into communion with each one of us. No image or likeness can take His place. Bowing down before idols, no matter what they may be called, is expressly forbidden by God.

2. How to Worship (vv. 6, 7). We are to love Him and to keep His commandments. There is to be no sham about this, for no matter how sweet and pious may be the praise and prayer of man, he has taken the Lord's name in vain unless he keeps the Lord's commandments by holy

3. When to Worship (vv. 8-11). God has ordained that man should not incessantly bear the burden of toil. He is to have a day of rest and a time for worship, undisturbed by the duties and responsibilities of daily

America needs a mighty stirring up about the desecration of the Lord's day. The stalwarts of the ast generation fought a valiant battle against a rising tide of secularism and worldly pleasure. Now no one seems to care. Do you? "Six days shalt thou labor." Give God one day out of seven.

II. A Right View of Man (vv. 12-

To be right with God means that we will also be right with our fellowman. Conversely, the man who is manifestly wrong in his rela-tion to his fellowman is either not right with God at all, or he is not living out his Christian life in practice. This should show in:

1. Family Life (v. 12). The fifth commandment has to do with the relation between child and parent. There is a plain and direct command that father and mother should be honored. Only in respect and obedience to parents can the child possibly find true and proper development.

Parents who have permitted children to go astray during the war years will need to stress anew the God-required obedience to their au-

2. Physical Life (vv. 13, 14). God is interested in our bodies. Already we have noted His provision for a day of rest each week. Now we are reminded of the sanctity of human life. "Thou shalt not kill," and reinember there are many other ways to kill a man other than shooting him.

Let us be sure that we are not a party to the destruction of anyone's life either by reason of carelessness or greed.

Note the emphasis on adultery. Moral uncleanness, which is so awfully common in our day, is one of the most effective methods of destroying the body even while de-grading and defiling the soul with

3. Social Life (vv. 15-17). "Thou shalt not steal"—and remember any dishonest appropriation of what does not belong to you is stealing, call it what you will. And "false witness''-how it has honeycombed our very civilization! Not a little of it is found within the church, more shame upon us! Lastly, we come to "covetousness" — which has been called one of the "respectable sins of nice people." It is subtle and often hidden. Let us root it out of our own lives by God's grace.
