THE STORY THUS FAR: Adam Bruce, FBI operator, Inspector Tope and Mrs. Tope met in the Maine woods. Tope found a man murdered, who was at first identified as Ledforge, head of New Eng-land utilities. When a car believed to have been used in the murder was raised from the quarries it was found to contain the body of a murdered woman, Mrs. Kell. Her husband committed suicide. Joe Dane, assistant D.A., accusing Tope of bungling the case, took complete charge. Eberly met Ledforge to go on a fishing trip. When they got in the canoe, Ledforge upset the canoe. He knew that Eberly could not swim. When he saw that Eberly was not sinking he started toward him but was stopped by Tope.

CHAPTER XIV

Eberly said steadily: "He overturned the canoe, swam away. Then he looked back, expecting to see me drowning. He knew I couldn't swim. But when he saw me still afloat-Mr. Tope had made me wear a life-preserver-he started back to finish Ledforge, a bitter hurt in his tone, cried: "Nonsense! I came to help you, Carl!" There was murder in his eyes, Eberly insisted, not speaking directly to the other man at all. Ledforge whirled toward Tope, fu-lously. "You put this idea into rlously. "You put this idea into his head! Of course he's shocked, doesn't know what he's saying!" "He had a blackjack on a thong on his wrist," said Eberly.

Ledforge wore a strap watch on his left wrist. He held it up. "Carl must have seen this," he insisted; and he said sympathetically: "Gentlemen, Mr. Eberly is hysterical. He has always been afraid of the Tope, after a moment, spoke. "Well, you see, Mr. Ledforge," he explained, almost apologetically, "there's more to it than just this. The whole thing started with a man that left New York last Friday morning with Mr. Holdom, in Holdom's car, and with Holdom's chauffeur driving. And the next time anybody saw that man, he was dead under a bed in one of the cabins at a roadside camp up here."

The others—save young Adam Bruce-were watching Tope. Adam watched Ledforge. He saw the man's pupils faintly dilate, saw his eyes become fixed in a concentrated attention. Tope paused, and in the instant of silence, Adam heard Mr. Eberly's teeth chattering together. And he had an impression of racing thoughts behind Ledforge's outward calm. Then the man asked

"What of it? What has that to do with me?"

"Why, Miss Ledforge hasn't seen him yet," Tope explained. "Butthe dead man looked mightily like Ledforge cried, in quick horror:

"Looked like me? Dead? Heavens, man, do you mean Christopher?" "Why, yes, dead," Tope assented ildly. "I didn't know his name mildly. "I didn't know his name was Christopher, but he looked enough like you to be your twin." Ledforge nodded gravely. "Gentlemen," he said then, "we can't stand myself. Suppose we go down to the house. I must hear the whole story." Tope asked: "You know who the dead man was, then?"

"Certainly," Ledforge assented. His eyes clouded with grief. "You said he looked like my twin brother. Well, gentlemen, he was."

At the house, Whitlock and Beal by Tope's direction stayed outside. Eberly disappeared with a serving man, to drink hot grog and find dry clothes. Ledforge asked for Miss Ledforge; and the servant report-

"She had a turn, sir, and is lying down. Two ladies are with her." "Good," said Ledforge. "Don't disturb her."

Tope suggested: "You'll want to get dry, yourself!"

But Ledforge negatived this. "There's a good fire on the hearth," he pointed out. "I'll be all right. Come in!'

So they gathered in the big livingroom, richly paneled like a baronial hall; and Ledforge said: "Now then: My brother dead, and some one else too, you said?" "Mrs. Kell," Tope told him. But Joe Dane could no longer endure that Tope should dominate the scene. "And Kell too, Tope!" he cried.

"Dead as a herring! And Holdom dying, so we'll never get a word out of him."

Tope saw Ledforge's eyes quicken in a sort of triumph, and the old man turned to Joe almost roughly. "Joe," he said, "you've a real gift for talking out of turn. Mr. Ledforge, here, can lie all he wants to now, knowing Kell and Holdom can't contradict him." Cumberland and Adam were silent, strictly listening; even Joe did not for a while interrupt again. And Ledforge spoke, a little sadly.

"It's hard to speak openly about it," he confessed. "We've kept it an absolute secret for so long that silence is a habit now."

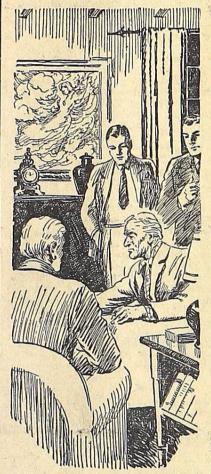

And he said earnestly: "But you know, every important man needs a double. Did that ever occur to you? Imagine how much easier it would be for the President, for instance, if he were twins. With one twin to attend to the business of the office,

He continued: "But it was more chance than anything else that led us into it. Some years ago the heavy demands upon my time and my energy began to weary me. I had something like a nervous collapse, and I went away quietly to my boy-hood home—a remote little town in Manitoba-for a vacation.

"Christopher lived there. He was a doctor-surgeon and doctor, too, as small town practitioners must be; and he took me in hand, cured me. But he reproached me for overworking; and he suggested that a man as busy as I ought to have a personal physician to watch over his health. I persuaded him to come back with me in that capacity. He suggested also that I ought to have a social secretary or an assistant, to whom I might delegate some less important activities; and the fact, which we discovered before we left home, that not even our intimate friends would distinguish one of us from the other, led naturally to the arrangement which has continued till now.'

He looked from one to another. 'It was very simple," he said, "once we began. A little attention to such details as clothes, haircuts, and so on. . . . Christopher, ever since, besides taking care of my health, has lived the social side of my life, leaving me free to attend to business without distraction."

Tope wagged his head. "I declare, that's a queer one," he admitted. "I don't suppose many people knew about this thing?"

"Not a living soul," Ledforge de-clared confidently, "except my sister Alice—and even she can't tell us apart to this day."

"How about servants and all that?'

"It was simply a matter of never appearing anywhere together," Led-forge assured them. "One of us always stayed out of sight when the other was to be-visible. Of course, we used some simple disguises at times, to give the one who for the moment did not exist a little freedom of movement." And he said

"But now it's my turn to ask questions. Who told you the dead man, Christopher, looked like me?"

"Mrs. Tope had seen you-or your brother-at a stockholders' meeting once.'

"Probably she saw Christopher," Ledforge suggested. "But tell me what happened? Where is Christopher? How was he killed?"

Tope said gravely: "Why—all right, Mr. Ledforge. I'll tell you: I found your brother under a bed in a cabin called Faraway, at a roadside camp called Dewain's Mill. up above here. He was dead when I found him.

"He had on an old sweater and a pair of overalls. His hands and feet were tied with wire. He was gagged and blindfolded with tape. His hands and feet and head were muffled in pieces of blanket.

"He'd been alive when he was put there. He died of a ruptured appendix.

"He'd been brought there in a coupe belonging to Holdom, by a man and a woman. I found their tracks. Afterward the man killed the woman-it was Mrs. Kell-and left her in the car and ran the car into an old quarry up in the hills. We found the man's tracks there."

Ledforge made an explosive gesture. "Hideous!" he cried. "Incred-

"Pretty bad," Tope assented; he added implacably: "And my notion is that you did it, Ledforge."

Ledforge shook his head abstractedly. He seemed not to resent this accusation. "Wait a minute, please." he said. "Of course, I know noththe other to handle the social side, ing of what happened up here; but attend banquets, make speeches, I can make a guess. Let me think a minute."

Tope nodded, and waited, and calmly filled and lighted his straight black pipe; at last Ledforge lifted his head. "It's part guess and part certainty," he confessed. "But I think I see the answer."

The fire had burned low. "I'll take off this wet coat," he remarked, and stood before them in flannel shirt, vest, khaki trousers and light woods shoes with rubber soles; a spare, gray, small old man.

"It was Holdom," he began then. "I can see what was in his mind, what he tried to do."

And he explained: "A week ago, I would have been as mystified as you, because I had always trusted Holdom. But I know now that he was a thief and a rascal. I learned last Monday that he had been using my collateral to trade in an account under my name, to sell my own stocks short. I have already reported the matter to the Exchange au-

He paused, but no one spoke. So he went on:

"Holdom did not know, you understand, that there were two of us; Christopher and I.

"Now gentlemen, Christopher was sick. Being a doctor, he of course knew that he had a bad appendix; but he was devoted to me. For him to go to a New York hospital would have been to risk the discovery of our duality. He was willing to take some risk to avoid that, so he decided to come up to Holdom's home here for the operation. Mrs. Kell had been a trained nurse. Dr. Na- of the brazen altar where sacrifice son would come from Boston to do could be made for sin. This called the operation, in the rooms above Holdom's garage.

"Christopher himself, pretending to be me, made all these arrangements with Holdom; so Holdom would naturally suppose that I was about to be incapacitated for a week or ten days. Perhaps he thought I was likely to die. Perhaps he already intended my death. At any rate, before leaving New York—and trading in my name—he sold my stocks short.'

He hesitated, then continued: "So they left New York on Friday morning, Christopher and Holdom, and Kell driving. I protested, but Christopher assured me the drive would do him no harm. Before starting, he took a sedative in order to sleep, to escape the pain.'

Tope prompted him. "And you say you can figure what happened?'

"I can guess," Ledforge agreed. "When Christopher fell asleep in the car-Kell was Holdom's man, of course-they laid Christopher on the floor, and Holdom too got down out of sight, so no one saw them as Kell | which are to guide the church redrove past the house to the garage.

"Holdom was completely unscrupulous. He dressed Christopher in that old gray sweater and overalls, gagged him, swaddled his hands and feet and head in pieces of the dog blanket so that he could make no noise, and stuffed him into the rumble of the coupe.

"He sent Kell away with orders to meet him later at some agreed | rich reward. pot; then Holdom put on a pair of Kell's shoes. Their prints would be easily recognized because of the heel-plates. He knew that when Christopher's body was identified as me, Vade-because of his threatening letters to me, and because he lived there at the Mill-would be at first suspected; but if Vade were exonerated and Kell's footprints found, then Kell would be the next

"So then Holdom and Mrs. Kellshe was his mistress-drove to Dewain's Mill, in the coupe, with Christopher hidden in the rumble." He looked at them all, challenging-"Doesn't that fit the facts?" he demanded.

"Well, so far," Tope agreed. "But go on!"

They took a cabin for the night, and Holdom hid Christopher where you found him. But Mrs. Kell must have protested at the inhumanity of leaving him there alive, till Holdom, in rage or desperation, strangled

He hesitated, and the color for an instant left his cheeks as thoug. that word had shocked and frightened him. "It's sickening!" he exclaimed then, hurriedly. "But—after that, Holdom would go on to dispose of the car, and of Mrs. Kell's body, and meet Kell, and make Kell give him a rap on the head and leave him to be found beside the road. As an alibi!" And he said in a low furious tone: "It is incredible; and vet something like that must be the

"Kell would lie, of course. To save himself."

"Yes, I figured that," Tope assented; but he said then in a sort of irritation: "Shucks, Mr. Ledforge, all that's too complicated for me. Holdom was in it, sure; but my idea has been, right along, that what ever Holdom did, he did because you told him to."
"I?" Ledi

IMPROVED New X-Ray Tube Is UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SCHOOL Lesson

Heretofore Unknown. MILWAUKEE .- Out of the University of Illinois laboratories has come one of the outstanding X-ray developments of X-ray's first 50 years-a new X-ray tube equivalent to 90 pounds of radium in ray output.

Radium is an atomically active material used in medicine in quantities down to millionths of an ounce. The startling story was told by George L. Clark, professor of chemistry at U. of I., who spoke at a symposium on industrial radiology staged by Marquette university in this city, celebrating X-ray's semi-centennial.

The new tube, only 16 inches long, is the work of T. H. Rogers, managing engineer of the Hachlett Laboratories at Springdale, Conn., based on research done at Champaign. Its 50,000 volts produce a dosage of 5,500,000 roentgen units per minute, compared to the 540 units of any previous device.

The new tube and its astounding capacity mean X-ray pictures in seconds instead of minutes for industry, Professor Clark said, and, in the research field, opens up possibilities not even imagined.

Study of the effects of X-rays on cells, such as cancer tissue, the chemical effects of light, the preparation of vaccines to kill bacteria aad many other forms of research become possible in ways previously out of the question, he said.

Space-Saver Racks For Closet Doors

WHY wish for more and bigger closets if the ones you have are not organized so that all the space is used? Handy racks on the door add readily accessible space for things used every day leaving inside shelves for storage. The racks shown here are careful-by planned to hold the things you use the most, yet they are less than three inches deep.

Everyday hats are held in perfect shape by a curved front made to fit crowns. Beth small and large articles are held conveniently in the lower rack which also has a hanger rod. These racks are also useful for children's togs and toys. They are easy to cut out of scraps of plywood with an ordinary compass saw from the dime store.

NOTE — Pattern 283 gives actual-size cutting guides for all parts of both of the racks shown here. Illustrated directions for assembling and a list of all materials required are included. To get pattern 283, mend 15c with name and address to JOU learn a little as the years pass by. Not much. Just a little. One of the few things I've learned this season, meaning 1945, is that the word "greatest" doesn't belong in sport. There is no such word.

There never was and never will be a "greatest" football or baseball team— 'greatest' golfer "greatest" pitcher or "greatest" anything. The word is simply too big Grantland Rice for the human race to handle. The word 'good" is different. Even the word 'great' in sport has been overused. Look over the list—Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth in baseball-Jim Thorpe, Pudge Heffelfinger, Bronko Nagurski, Red Grange, and 20 others in football. Among the pitchers-Cy Young, Mathewson, Johnson, Alexander, on and on.

Among the golfers-Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen, Byron Nelson, Harry

Among the fighters or boxers-Dempsey, Jeffries, Louis. I can give you 10 more.

Among the greatest college football teams-Army 1945, Notre Dame 1943, Notre Dame 1930, Minnesota, Southern California, Pittsburgh, Alabama 1935, Michigan and Yale in the old days. All good, maybe great. But none of them the greatest.

Baseball teams-The Cubs of 1906-1910, the Athletics of 1910-1913. The Yankees at various stages.

All good-few great-none the

Who Is Football's Greatest?

Is Doc Blanchard greater than Bronko Nagurski? Certainly not. Not yet. In fact Minnesota and Michigan camp followers will tell you that fast 230-pound Bill Daly is a greater offensive back than either Nagurski or Blanchard. And they can be right. I can name you more than a few backs that might be more valuable to a team than either Nagurski or Blanchard.

The greatest passer or the greatest pass receiver? Sammy Baugh or Don Hutson. Maybe. But Greasy Neale says he would rather have Sid Luckman than Baugh and Hut-son combined. Maybe Greasy is wrong. Maybe he isn't. Who is going to know? Greasy would rather have Van Buren than any back he ever saw. Bert Bell of the Steelers would rather have Bill Dudley for all-around value. I think Clint Frank of Yale is more valuable than

I put this complicated problem up to Greasy Neale. "Maybe I'd rath-er have Clint Frank," he said. "I mean taken every way." As fine as Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis are, I don't think either can do all the things that Clint Frank could do.

We can move into other fields to prove there is no such word as 'greatest.''

Man o' War or Exterminator? Man o' War quit as a 3-year-old. Man o' War is the symbol of racing greatness. But Exterminator ran and won for many years-from six furlongs to two miles-from 120 pounds to 140 pounds.

As we move along I still say there is no greatest. There is neither an individual star, a team or a horse that any one can put above all others in competition. Although Pudge Heffelfinger had one unchallenged football record at least. He was an All-America in 1889 and just as good 30 years later when he was 53.

Who can say whether Bobby Jones, Harry Vardon, Walter Hagen or Byron Nelson was the greater golfer? Hagen beat Jones 12 and 11 in a 72-hole match. But Jones beat Hagen 10 straight years in the U.S. Open, where the blue chips were down.

Modern Advantages

Only yesterday I ran across an old-timer who had run the 100-yard dash against Arthur Duffy and Bernie Wefers, in the fast time of 9.6. "Don't forget," he said, "this time was over a slow track with bad running shoes. Under modern conditions either Duffy or Wefers could have beaten Jesse Owen, Paddock or any other modern sprinter.

So, again, who is the greatest sprinter? The answer is nobody. Games are played under different conditions, where the modern bunch have all the better of the breaks in every way. They get the faster tracks, the better equipment, the better groomed and easier golf courses, the better coaching and training in every form of sport, the better chance to improve.

There isn't a man connected with sport for the last 50 years, or a team, that could be called "the greatest." There has never been a greatest football player, a greatest baseball player, or a greatest anything else. In other words, sport has known no superman, and neither has the human race in any other form of existence. Unknown thousands with the same break could have surpassed famous names. This outburst is a part answer to those who keep writing in asking about "the greatest" in various lines. It is still worth while just to be good.

WASHINGTON .- Busy Tom Corcoran, the ex-braintruster, has been promoting his law partner, ex-Senator D. Worth Clark of Idaho, to re-place Harold Ickes when and if the latter resigns as secretary of the interior. Clark, a former die-hard isolationist, is not likely to get the job.

Central High School in Barker, N. Y. Is Hub of Pennsylvania Expects 85,000 Community's Cultural and Recreational Life

By WILLIAM J. GREEN

HIS is the story of a new cen-I tralized rural high school in the little town of Barker, population 500, town of Somerset, county of Niag-ara, state of New York.

Barker is similar to all our home towns. It took years of back-breaking work to clear the land, establish a community and its industry, plant fruit orchards, and develop a home town. Gradual prosperity evolved from that work, prosperity that was enjoyed by the second, third and fourth generations of pioneer families. But there came a time to Barker when it experienced depression, its land prices almost ruinous, its savings depleted or lost and economic despair its lot.

In the depths of the depression, the educational facilities and opportunities in the Barker area were limited. There was an academic high school located in the village and a one-room elementary school for each of the districts in the area. It was Lon J. McAdam Sr., for more than 25 years a school trustee, who decided the school system was the place to begin for Barker to emerge from its despondent plight.

Centralization Approved.

Serving with McAdam were John Conolly, Wesley Gotts, Raymond Gardner and Albert Harrington. When Harrington retired, his place was taken by Bradford Sherwood. For more than 10 years the faculty of the school at Barker had been under the direction of Milford H. Pratt, supervising principal, who is a native of Barker.

Under McAdam's leadership-and that leadership was often challenged—the voters of the school districts approved centralization. That was in 1937 and two years later the new half-million dollar building was occupied. It was a centralized rural high school, adjoining the old academic high school, situated on Quaker road, with 45 per cent of its cost borne by the federal government. The one-room schools were abandoned and buses brought even the elementary pupils to Barker. The old high school building was made the elementary school.

Further expansion of the centralized rural high school came in 1939 when the National Youth administration resident training center was located in Barker, co-sponsored by the board of education. The school extended its facilities to NYAselected youths from all over New York state and received for its own locality an otherwise unobtainable shop program.

Add Many Courses.

Its curriculum was expanded to include commercial courses, music department, home economics and agriculture. In 1940, NYA built a production shop which became a wing of the school, and early in 1941 began the production of small parts for the army and navy. When war broke out an even faster pace was

At night the shop became the classroom for adult defense trainees. In its three years of operation more than 1,000 men and women were trained in shop practice, machine operation, sheet metal, welding and automotive and aircraft maintenance and repair.

When NYA was dissolved by congress in July, 1943, the tools and building became the property of the board of education. Barker also obtained a stock of agricultural tools from a nearby NYA farm project, making a total acquisition valued at more than a quarter-million one-third more power than ever be-employment in war industries in of it. Buffalo and Niagara Falls, with aircraft and ordnance plants and other factories turning out war equipment.

Youth trainees, when physically qualified, went into the armed forces to serve their country. The physically-handicapped boys found employment in war industries. Many of these young men were brought to Barker, upon application, to receive training not available in their home districts, and today over 300 youths from every section of New York consider Barker a second home!

In 1941 the board of education leased 160 acres adjoining the school. The land, which is extremely level, was surveyed and submitted to the Civil Aeronautics administration as an airport site. Eventually the CAA approved the the meantime the agricultural de- - and all other hometown folks.

Adult trainees of the school found | partment of the school tilled a part

Focal Point of Town. The school farm provided food for use in the school cafeteria and served as an experimental plot for both the school and the community's farmers, and became the demonstration farm for the area. In 1945 the taxpayers voted three to one to purchase the land. Vocational teachers secured surplus obsolete aircraft for instructional use, and in 1944 the CAA granted the school an air agency certificate with an A rating. Since that time cub planes have landed in the athletic field and have been repaired in the school shop.

In war and in peace, in community development and pride, in recreational activities, the new centralized high school at Barker, N. Y., has become the focal point, the hub for farmers, laborers and plans for a Class 1 airport, but in business men, for youths and adults

Sergeant Smuggles Dog from France

LIVONIA, N. Y.-Army and navy regulations couldn't separate Tommy, an Alsatian shepherd dog, from his master, former Sgt. William Whiting of Rochester, it was revealed here recently by Mrs. P. H. Campbell, a sister of the former soldier, and reported in the Livonia Tommy belonged to a French woman living on the outskirts of couple of duffle bags belonging to Metz when Sergeant Whiting found two friends. Before the boat sailed, him. The dog, who had been living a complete check was made for anion potato skins, was literally skin mals and the searching party came and bones. His mistress, though within two feet of Tommy and fond of her pet, gave the dog to Sergeant Whiting who promised to feed the animal and take good care

Gave Tommy 'Dope.'

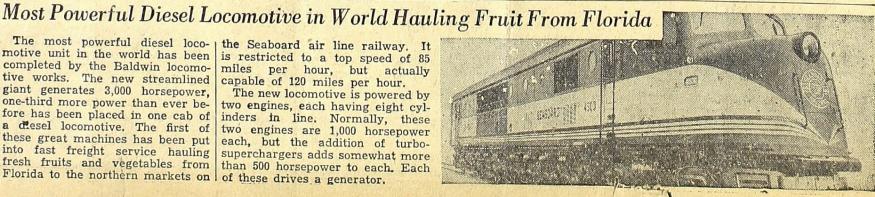

Tommy, the shepherd dog, and Sergeant Whiting went through the war together with General Patton's 3rd army. After victory the day came for Sergeant Whiting to return to the United States and it was found that regulations prevented taking Tommy along. The determined sergeant made preparations to smuggle the dog onto the ship and take him to the United States.

Back to Farms

If only those members of farm families and hired hands who left the farm during the war years return to Pennsylvania's farms, it will mean a migration of 85,000 persons, according to statistics com-piled by Earle L. Moffitt, extension farm management specialist at the Pennsylvania state college.

In computing what opportunities the state offers to returning servicemen and war workers interested in farming, Moffitt contends a large factor is represented by those returning to the farms. In his figure of 85,000 he included all those young men and women in farm families who entered military service, as well as those that left agriculture to enter war industries. He also included the large number of hired hands, many of whom resided right on the farms where they worked.

"It will be difficult to estimate just how many will return to agriculture," said Moffitt. He explained that many farm-reared persons may not immediately go back to the farms, as the result of experiences gained during the wartime years. He also indicated that any analysis of the return to agricultural pursuits may require several yearsthe length of time necessary to determine which individuals have quit farming for their new interests. All these figures, he indicates, are based on the number of Pennsylvania residents occupied in farming before the war, rather than any estimate of how many can profitably depend on farming for a career. He also revealed that more and more returning veterans are utilizing the assistance of county advisory committees.

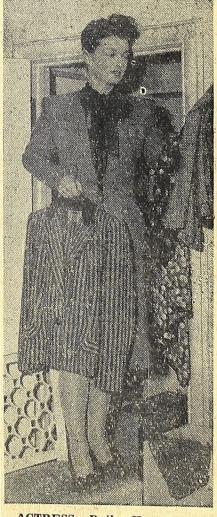

Our Castoff Clothes Desperately Needed By Victims of War

Approximately 25 million children, men and women in the liberated countries overseas have received clothing donated by the American people in the United National Clothing collection of last spring. But 25 million is only a small percentage of the destitute, homeless and looted people of Europe, the Philippines and the Far East.

Devastation and want in those lands are on so vast a scale as to be almost beyond our comprehension. Millions there are even now inadequately clad for winter weather, for health and for selfrespect. It is estimated that in China alone 200 million people need clothing.

In the Victory Clothing collection we have the chance to befriend many more boys and girls and men and women-as we have befriended 25 million.

When you send a gift to a friend you enclose good wishes. Contributors to the Victory Clothing collection are encouraged to enclose a friendly message with their gift of

Farm Productivity Must Be Increased

Soil Treatment Need Be Given Consideration

Warning that farmers are "selling their soil fertility capital and calling it a profit," Dr. George N. Hoffer, agronomist of LaFayette, Ind., urged greater application of scientific knowledge and research as a means of maintaining farm produclogical principles governing production of crops as well as animals.

"Better crops and animals are produced by applying those principles and helping the unaided handiwork of nature.

"Soil tests indicate the available nutrients already in the soil. They point to the need of supplementary applications of fertilizers for maximum yields of nutritious crops.

"Growers are also becoming acquainted with the symptoms of plant-nutriment deficiencies, not only of potash, but of nitrogen, phosphorus, boron and other nutrients which are appearing in many crops in various soils.

"A deficiency of any one of these nutrients may limit profits and lead toward bankruptcy unless remedial measures are applied.

"Due to the constant losses of soil fertility caused by erosion, crop removals, leaching, loss of organic matter, and the failure of some growers to fertilize their crops adequately, practically all crops respond to soil treatment."

Knapsack Feed Box

This type of knapsack feeder is not only easy to construct, but can also be used for hand seeding.

This box is convenient for carrying feed where a cart is not practical. Should be made as light as possible; 1/4 inch plywood is most desirable. A satisfactory size would be a bottom measurement of 18 inches by 12 inches with a height of 12 inches.

Danger of Drugs

The intrusion of certain wholesale commercial and retail drug interests in the field of animal health, in unrestricted selling of biological and pharmaceutical products which could be harmful to the livestock industry if improperly used, is attracting federal attention.

Farmers are urged to purchase only from a reliable firm, only such vest?" products that have been tested and proven suitable for their particular need by recognized authorities.

Cordurella Is an Ideal Fabric For School Wear These Cold Days

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

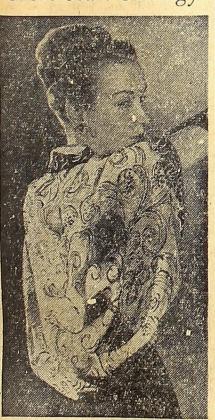

NOW that the holiday season is over, mother's thoughts turn to taking up the matter of household sewing to be done. First in mind is that little daughter needs school, play and party dresses which are both "comfy" and pretty-pretty at the same time. And she knows the finished garments will be just that, for she has decided to make them of cordurella, the soft modern pinwale version of the corduroy ever beloved by both mother and daughter.

It's evident that mother's initial shopping tour in the new year will lead straight to the fabric section where she will buy so many yards of cordurella in this color and so many in that. Then to the pattern counter to choose the latest in jumper, party and play clothes. Or perhaps mother will decide to buy the little garments ready-made. In ei-ther event the result will be just such cunning styles as are here pic-

Designers of little folks fashions are using this year many of the details that distinguish college-girl and big-sister clothes, much to the delight of the youngsters. For example, the popular and practical jumper dress such as you see pictured herewith to the right has become as important a "success" fashion for little girls as it is with their elders. The jumper dress stands out pre-eminently as about the most practical style for youngsters that mothers could choose. The cordurella of which it is made is a favorite because of its style-with-stamina qualities. It's so easy to launder, too. Nice for balmy days with a cunning blouse, and worn with a sweater top in cold bleak weather it's a perfect answer to the "keep warm" prob-Iem. Buttons all the way down the

More Scarf Strategy

This clever shoulderette is created from a very beautiful scarf. It is a large square with a huge cabbage rose on a background wallpaper print done in black and white. The focal point of interest in this lovely topper for dress-up occasions is the realistic rose. The shoulderette is achieved in a jiffy. Merely knot the ends of the square to form armholes and turn the border back for added sleeve and collar interests.

A winsome dressy version is seen

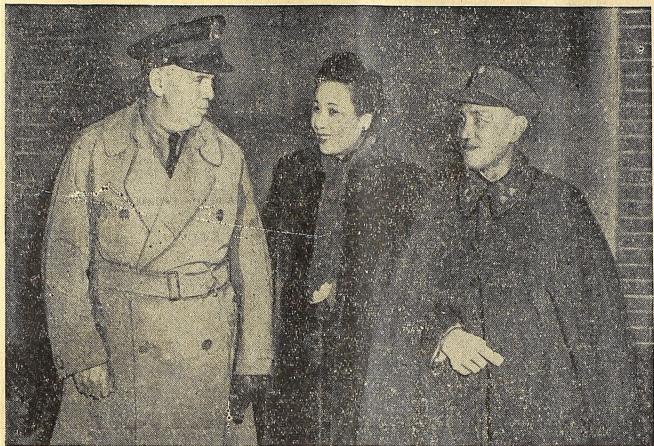

Gay little flatterers are the charming hoods of wool jersey that are seen everywhere these wintry days. It seems that wool jersey has everything that goes to make up the perfect hood. It's a success from the "keep warm" standpoint, and the way designers are letting imagination have full sway in way of picturesque effects is something to admire. Although other materials are also used for the now-so-popular hoods, when it comes to actual count it's the hood of colorful wool jersey that outnumbers them all. It adds to "the picture" that many of these fanciful hoods are trimmed with glittering sequins. Very charming too is the jersey hood that is yarnembroidered in gay flowers. It adds to their practicality that many of the jersey hoods have scarf ends to throw about neck and shoulders.

Simplicity Is Keynote of 1946 Graduation Dresses

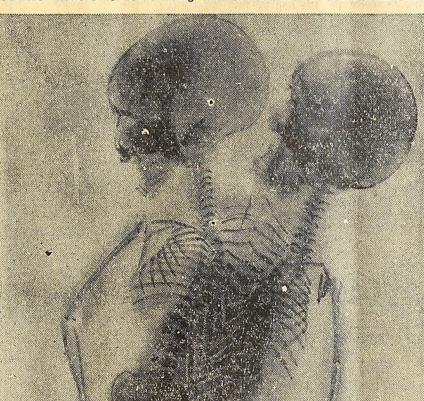

Graduation dresses for the most part are very simple this season. White jersey, crepe and sheer white wools are leading fabrics. Two pretty dresses for mid-winter grad-uates include a short dress of winter-white rayon jersey. It has a low round neck and is styled with a wide corselet effect which accents the little waist. This style is also pretty in white wool jersey. The other dress is for the older graduate and is a bit more sophisticated. This model has a full floor-length skirt of stiffened net with a perfectly plain fitted bodice top with cap sleeves done in white satin.

TAKING THE CLIMB OUT OF SKIING . . . The fly in the ointment when it comes to the real enjoyment of skiing is the long, weary trudge up the ski slope, before one can make that exhibitating dash down. It Seems Einstein's Theory May Become Too Simple!

Albert Einstein was to lecture in a small town. The place buzzed excitedly in anticipation, but few knew why he was important.

"Why he's the guy who invented relativity," explained one.
"Relativity?" asked another,
"What's that?"

"Well, I'll explain," said the expert: "If you sit down on a het stove for a minute it seems like an hour-but if a beautiful blonde is sitting on your lap for an hour it seems like only a minute. That's relativity."

"My goodness!" said the small voice, "he makes a living from such nonsense?"

The Michigan Intangible Tax Law, as amended by Act No. 165 P. A. of 1945, provides for a levy of 1/25 of 1% (40c per $1,000) on bank deposits as of the year 1945 and thereafter, this tax to be due and payable on or before March 31st following the tax year.

This Bank, however, has elected to pay this tax (for the year 1945, at least) and thereby render its depositors exempt. You will therefore disregard and not pay tax on any funds on deposit in this bank when making your annual return for the year 1945.
