THE STORY THUS FAR: Lt. Andy Blake, assigned to Operations, was agreeably surprised by the arrival of his wife, Arab, who announced she had taken a job in Washington with Ordnance, to aid in the war effort. They left the office to look for a room for Arab. Arab told Andy that thoughtless people talked too much about their war work and plans. While on the bus, she decided to walk around and take down in shorthand the various war conversations she overheard. While in the act, she was spotted, and the word "SPY," first a whisper, developed into an angry cry. Andy pulled the stop cord in order that they could both jump off. Arab started running with Andy fast after her.

CHAPTER II

There was only one word needed. A small, hissing word. My eardrums ached as I waited for it. Then it

"Spy." It broke the ice jam in my blood. My legs and arms came alive, tingling. I started wrestling forward through the crowd. White faces turned. Eyes stared blankly. They didn't want to let anybody through. They were already jamming toward the front of the bus. Moving forward under the sting of one word. It had started in the back of the bus and was working forward like slow poison.

"Spy . . . Spy." They let me move grudgingly. It wasn't for me that they moved aside, though. They moved a little for the gleam of shoulder bars and buttons and the wide-winged eagle on my cap. I got to the exit at the middle of the bus. That was the limit. Beyond that point the jam was solid. I yelled at the nearest people and they didn't even turn. They shoved back blindly, not looking around, when I tried to drive through

I grabbed the handrail on each side of the exit and hoisted myself up. I caught a flash of Arab's pale face. She was jammed against the front entrance. The people right around her didn't know yet what was happening. They had turned to push back resentfully at the mob. But Arab knew. She was clawing at the tight folds of the door.

"Spy . . . spy . . . spy . . . spy

The word was striking at her like snake. I yelled at people to stop it, but not a back turned. It would take a half-dozen cops to halt them now. I put all my lung power into a yell.

"Arab! When the door opens, run!"

Then I grabbed the stop-signal cord and hung on it. Ordinarily the driver would have waited until the next loading station . . . and that might have been too late, for Arab. But he must have known something was wrong, without quite knowing what. As I hung on the cord, praying, the bus suddenly swung to the curb and halted. I jumped on the step which automatically opens the center doors. They flapped back. I leaped out, skidded once, and swung toward the front entrance. The front doors folded back and Arab slipped out while was still three strides away. "Run!" I yelled.

She jumped to the sidewalk and I faked a dive at her and clipped the first two men who spilled out after her. My nose left a rut in the street, but it seemed worth while. It gave Arab a few seconds start into the blackness of a private driveway. I scrambled to my feet and followed. Fifty yards up the curving drive of the big estate I saw a white blur. When Arab runs she doesn't flap her feet the way most girls do, like a hen trying out clipped wings.

I pounded up the drive well in advance of the others. But was I really ahead of the rest? Once or twice the white blur of Arab's raincoat seemed to be blacked out by another figure. Arab flashed past a lighted ground-floor window of the big house, and a moment later I thought I saw a shadow flick across the same light. A shadow as squat as a tub. It was nonsense, of course. My imagination was pulling things out of hats. Tubs can't move that

Then, in a split second, my foot hit something and a fuse blew in my head and I plunged down into ringing blackness. I opened my eyes and peered up at a lighted room. A circle of faces hung above me like a Halloween group bobbing for apples.

"How do you feel, Lieutenant?"

somebody asked. 'Swell," I said. 'Is there an undertaker in the house?"
"Oh, Andy," a familiar voice sobbed. "I thought you were dead."

"What made you change your mind?" I said peevishly. "What—" I broke off suddenly and stared around at the circle. Here was Arab with a half dozen of the people who had been ready to get rough with her not long ago. "What happened to the girl?" I asked. "The girl in the white raincoat and the black felt hat?" Arab asked in a clear voice. "She got away." "We called the police," somebody added. "They'll get her."

"If they do get her," I growled,
"I'll be happy to testify for the prosecution. What happened to me?"

A man said, "You tripped over something, Lieutenant. Your head hit the stump of a tree. We found you crumpled right up against the stump, and carried you into the house here."

'An . . . an ambulance is coming from Walter Reed," Arab sniffled. Colonel Parker came in first, shook my hand, and said, "Glad you came through all right, Blake. Got to ask you some questions. These gentlemen"-he sketched an introduction - "need information.

Know you need rest, but this can't wait. Feel up to it?" 'Yes, sir," I said faintly. It appeared that I was entertaining the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Counter - Intelligence, the Military District of Washington, the Provost Marshal General's Office, and other serious-minded organizations. "Yes, sir," I said, "but first I ought to tell you-"Save your strength, Blake. Let them ask the questions first." Another colonel grumbled. "Can't make head or tail of the stories of | the people on the bus. One says she was short, another has her nearly six feet tall. She has red, brunette, and platinum-blonde hair, is knock-kneed, has beautiful legs . . . you see what we're up against."

"Sir," I groaned, "it's a long story. She—"

"Let's have a description." "Sir, I wish you'd let me go at this my own way. She-"

'Blake!" I babbled, "She has blonde hair, shoulder-length, height five feet seven and one half with high heels,

I saw a white blur.

weight one-ten, blue eyes, nicely cut cameo features, age twenty-three Somehody whistled softly "Are you sure of all this?" a civilan asked.

"Yes, sir." Somebody else said, "Nope, too good to be true. They don't come like that. The last female spy I saw had hair like a broomstick and must have topped one-sixty. Athletic girl. Went in for weight-lifting." Colonel Parker said nervously, 'Blake, you don't happen to know this girl's name, do you?" I sandwiched a gulp between a yes-sir.

"What is it?" I closed my eyes and said, "Mrs. Arabella Reynolds Blake." There was silence for a few moments. It was so quiet you could have heard a lieutenant drop, if I hadn't been lying down already.

"Tell it your own way," my chief muttered.

My own way would have been by long-distance telephone, but I went ahead, anyway. After I finished, one officer said, "Well, cross that one off the books as a wasted evening."

After he left I decided that things weren't so bad. They couldn't really put a black mark on my 201 file in the Adjutant General's Office for the night's work. And Arab ought to be grateful. After all, I had helped her out of a nasty spot in the bus.

Arab phoned that she would bring the car out for me whenever I was ready to leave, and I said not to worry because the Army nurses were very lovely. After that Arab called every hour and the hospital authorities got tired of it and decided in the late afternoon that I could be returned to duty.

Arab got out to the hospital without delay, and I coaxed the prettiest nurse to escort me to the door and even let me lean weakly on her. This had the proper sobering effect on Arab for at least five minutes. Then, as we drove away, she started fighting the war her way again.

"You're just bitter," I said, "because nobody consulted you before starting the war."

"Why, Andy, do you really think I'm going to keep quiet after the way those people were talking last night on the bus? I'm going to do something about it whenever I get a chance."

You utter damned fool, are you trying to get yourself killed?"

(TO BE CONTINUED) 26 Nazi Plants to Go as Reparations

Gen. McNarney Says Factories Ready for Delivery.

WASHINGTON.—Gen. Joseph T. McNarney said 26 large plants in Germany have been made ready for delivery as war reparations to the countries which suffered at Nazi hands, and 58 others have been earmarked.

The general, military governor of the United States zone of occupation, reported that "many more" of the plants in the American zone are being surveyed for inclusion in the planned removal of Germany's war potential. He spoke from Germany on an NBC broadcast.

Approximately 100,000 Nazis now are in custody as members of organizations being tried by the international tribunal at Nuernberg, McNarney said. Thousands of Nazis have been removed from government and industry and "denazifica-tion is well advanced," the general added.

Maj. Gen. John H. Hilldring, chief of the war department's civil affairs division, also a speaker on the program, said that the four power rule of Germany "has been exceedingly successful" and that "our ability to get along with our allies is no longer an academic question-it's a positive and proven fact." Hilldring said he was confident that the disagreement between France and the other allies over centralization of administration will be "argued out and settled." The French, he said, want to hold up centralization "until we decide what we're going to do with the Rhine-land and the Ruhr."

30-Day Travel Around signed up with civil service under World Predicted Soon

NEW YORK.—Business men will soon have an opportunity to buy tickets for a 30-day "contact trip" around the world by air as well as week-end jaunts to London and Paris, it was revealed.

We had dinner downtown, and "It is obvious that these business Arab mentioned that she hadn't recovered her white raincoat and hat trips will be available within the next 12 months, well ahead of ordinary pleasure travel," A. WASHINGTON. - The Reconstruction Finance corp. announced recently that it would conduct a series of sales of building materials at Port Hueneme, Calif., in the near future.

The actual date of the first sale of excess stocks of various army and navy depots throughout the country, the RFC said, will be announced later.

The sales will be that part of the materials and equipment which have not already been sold locally. The sales are part of the plan to carry out recommendations made by John W. Snyder, reconversion director, that surplus army and navy building supplies be made available for commercial, private and veterans' construction.

About 30 per cent of the materials will be reserved for priority holders and veterans' preference with the balance to be channeled into housing with veterans' housing projects getting the first claim to

Jap Sub Goes Down. Cheats U. S. Gunners

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF.-Navy gunners were cheated by a Japanese submarine.

The undersea craft, captured near the Japanese home islands, had been taken on a tour of American cities in war bond drives.

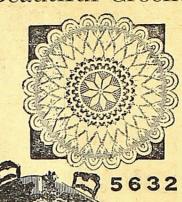

Recently it was towed out to sea to be sunk by the gunners. Plowing through heavy swells about 60 miles offshore, the empty submersible was struck by a wave, listed and went to the bottom before a gun could be trained upon it.

FARMERS AND LABORERS

WASHINGTON. - It gives no joy to issue storm warnings. But the price-wage turmoil of today may have equal or even greater repercussions next spring when farmers lose their food subsidies.

What most people don't realize is that the public is squarely in be-tween two powerful, well-organized pressure groups, both with very conflicting interests, both sometimes taking a public-be-damned attitude. One is organized labor. The other is the farm organizations, which, while they can't strike, can and will exert effective pressure when subsidies are removed.

Both groups work against each other in the following manner: When labor raises wages in the cities, this sucks labor away from the farms. Whereupon the farmer has so raise farm wages in order to comjete with the cities. This in turn increases his cost of production, forcing him to increase prices or go out

At present, the farmer can't increase prices because of OPA. So the government, recognizing the injustice of his higher operating costs, gives him a subsidy. When this subsidy is removed, he will have to increase prices — unless operating costs are reduced. And the current strike wave is constantly forcing up the cost of labor.

All this operates in a vicious circle. For, the minute food prices go up, labor will come in for more wage increase, based upon the cost of living.

Organized labor, of course, can better take care of itself. But unorganized and unprotected are a great body of white-collar workers, unskilled labor, plus the middleclass business men who get squeezed in between. This is the group which is getting sorer and sorer at labor. There was a time when they were sympathetic, but not now. This is 'be red flag of public opinion which arganized labor needs to watch.

U. S. MARES TO EUROPE

Biggest foreign purchase of horses since Mussolini drained the southwest for his Ethiopian transport divisions is now taking place in the middle west. UNRRA is buying 16,-000 American mares for disposal in Greece, Yugoslavia, Poland and Czechoslovakia — countries from which the Nazis drove away most of the horse population.

The mares are being purchased under the supervision of the department of agriculture which has passed the job on to the Sparks-Norris horse and mule company in St. Louis, Owen Brothers in Memphis, and Dean Bowns and W. L. Elder in Des Moines. Average price paid by UNRRA to the dealer is $77 and $97.50 per head.

This has aroused criticism in the farm belt, because dealers are paying only $50 to $60 per horse, thus netting a profit of about $25 each. However, agriculture department officials defend prices on the ground that dealers take a risk on sick horses, accidents during shipment,

The army paid an average of $165 per head for horses during the war, but was more particular, rejecting horses for scars and blemishes. Mares now being purchased must be three to eight years old, broken for both work and riding. They are being shipped overseas from Baltimore, New Orleans, Jersey City, and Portland, Me.

NOTE. - Tip-off to the fact that Mussolini was plannning to conquer Ethiopia came two years before his war started when, in 1933-34, the Italians suddenly bought $342,798 worth of mules from Missouri, Arkansas and Texas.

ADMIRAL NIMITZ'S POINTS

Adm. Chester Nimitz, new chief of naval operations, was sitting in the navy building barber shop near a captain in the naval reserve.

FLIERS AND FLYING

Business Up in the Air!

At least five manufacturing companies are busy fixing up surplus army medium bombers as "flying offices" for business executives. They are adapting Douglas B-23s, Lockheed 12s and Lodestars and Cessnas into planes suitable for the business man who must fly 100,000 to 500,000 miles a year, and who is prepared to pay from $80,000 to $100,000 for his flying office.

Representing a 40 per cent increase over the largest previous air hop to Florida of aircraft limited to 125-horsepower or less, a total of 2,500 light planes or "puddlejumpers" attended the annual All-American air maneuvers at International airport, Miami, in January. The show was a demonstration of the utility of private planes.

Prices for two-passenger planes now on the market range from $1,500 to $3,000. Family

This prediction is based on Civil Aeronautics administration figures.

John C. Leslie, a system vice president of Pan American Airways, was technical advisor in charge of the historic flight of Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Casablanca conference. Leslie joined PAA in 1929.

Dr. William F. Durand, one of the original members of the national advisory committee for aeronautics appointed by Pres. Woodrow Wilson in 1915, was recalled by President Roosevelt to serve on the same board again in 1941. He resigned last October, however, at the age of 86 years.

One of the new types of planes has controls so simplified that beginners have learned to fly it in less than three hours. To fly in any direction, the pilot has only to turn the steering wheel just as in an

Skypilot a Pilot

The Rev. Emerson Miller, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church, Davenport, Iowa, started flying a little over a year ago and has now earned for himself the title of "Flying Pastor." He flies a three-passenger cub-type plane to fulfill a busy schedule which includes conferences in other cities. Last winter, when the snow was too deep for other forms of transportation, the Reverend Miller had skis put on the plane and flew to Machusa, Ill., to attend a board meeting of the Lutheran orphanage there.

The chief limitation to flying is airfields. Of 17,000 incorporated cities and towns in this country, only 3,000 now have airports.

Cows Can't Fly!

One of the largest manufacturers of light planes expects to make 60 per cent of its sales to farmers and ranchers. Many of them can find space on their own property for landing fields, use their barns or sheds for hangars. Planting seed, dusting crops and orchards and inspecting ranges and herds are only a few of the uses to which they can put aircraft.

ever before. Minerals for manufacturing modern weapons and equipment, and the fuels to propel them along world-wide battle fronts, along with civilian demands at the same time, cost the United States more than 36 bilion dollars. This amount, according to the bureau of mines, is about six times as much as used in a normal year, and it is one-fifth of the total value of all minerals and fuels produced in the United States in the 65-year period from 1880 to 1945.

Secretary Ickes' report reveals that only nine of the major minerals remain in our known domestic reserves in sufficient quantity of usable grade to last 100 years or more. The known reserves of 22 other essential minerals have dwindled to a 35 years' supply or less.

Our supply of petroleum is even less. Our assured domestic deposits of oil will last from 14 to 20 years under the sea along the Continentat the present rate of use! Unless al Shelf.

A MERICA'S natural resources something is done about it, or new deposits are found, you'll use some-War II, especially petroleum and thing else in the family car after that. Wars cost more than money, for money is renewable. Iron ore, coal and petroleum are not. No one need worry, however, about our coal, for we have enough to last hundreds of years. But metal ships that were sunk by submarines, airplanes that crashed in oceans or on mountains, and the fuel used by those ships and planes, are all lost-and lost for-

The picture, however dark it may appear, is not as black as some would paint it. During the war, the bureau of mines, the geological survey, and many commercial experts engaged in the most thorough exploration for minerals ever undertaken in this country. The results are not yet known, but the information obtained will be highly useful in planning the use of our remaining mineral resources.

One example of the wartime research of the bureau of mines may be seen in the exploration of a tungsten ore deposit in Idaho. This deposit alone produced over a halfmillion tons of tungsten ore. Also, the bureau is working on a plan to utilize the marginal mineral deposits, through mining and metallurgical investigations and the establishment of improved techniques that will make their commercial exploitation possible. America has vast quantities of low grade ore, virtually untouched, which may soon be utilized now that the "cream" of the mineral deposits has been skimmed. The interior of the earth is full of minerals. There was a time in Colorado when prospectors picked up gold nuggets on top of the ground; but at Cripple Creek and Victor today, the gold is found hundreds of feet below the surface.

As for petroleum, new wells are being brought in all the time. The "known" petroleum resources may be used up in 20 years, but the "unknown" black gold that may yet be found can easily change the picture. Also, the scientists and chemists have provided a synthetic substitute which can be used when the time comes—or perhaps before we actually need it. -

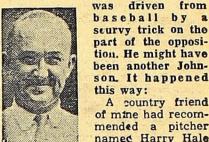

In addition, President Truman's proclamation of the United States' jurisdiction over the mineral re-sources of the "Continental Shelf" surrounding the country below the waters of the Pacific and Atlantic coasts, an area of 760,000 square miles in extent, may provide a rich source of oil and other minerals for the future use of the nation, according to Secretary Ickes.

Finally, the war hurried the development of many devices and techniques which have already been applied to the search for minerals on land, and which may be applied to the search for oil and other minerals

Ty Cobb was talking about the oddest characters he had ever known about in baseball and he happened to mention a pitcher I dug up for Abner Powell, owner and manager of the Atlanta team, over 40 years ago. I still recall the unfortunate matter, and was scrry Ty brought it up.

For this pitcher was the only incipient star I had ever known who was driven from been another Johnson. It happened this way: A country friend of mine had recom-mended a pitcher scurvy trick on the part of the opposition. He might have mended a pitcher named Harry Hale from Happy Hollow, Tenn., population 312. "All this tuy has," my pal wrote, "is a fast ball. But he's plenty fast." Well, that was about all Walter Johnson had for some 15 years. had for some 15 years. I persuaded Powell to bring Happy Harry Hale from Happy Hollow to Atlanta, at a total cost of $37.50. Walter Johnson cost only a little Happy Harry was 6 feet, 7 inches and weighed 138 pounds. He was the original buggy whip. He really had a fast ball. But he had never heard of a curve or a change of pace, because he had never been out of Happy Hollow before.

"I remember that fellow," Ty said. "He had a lot of speed. I remember the day you got Powell to try him out." I remember it too. For the first four innings the other team, I think it was Shreveport, under Red Fisher, failed to get a scratch hit. Happy Harry from Happy Hollow was having a field day.

'I was a kid then," Ty said, "but I was thinking of what a great judge you were of pitchers. I remembered you'd made Ab Powell bring in Nap Rucker from back of a Georgia plow. I don't have to tell you what later happened to

New to Harry

Ty was right. Here was another Johnson blazing them by helpless bats. And then in the fifth inning some fiend suggested bunting. And t so happened that Harry Hale had never seen, nor even heard of a bunt. Nobody ever bunted in Happy Hollow. They were all swingers. He let the first bunt go, much after the manner of watching a Tennessee moccasin or a Georgia rattlesnake crawling his way. He ignored the second bunt. He finally picked up the third bunt and threw it into the stands over first.

"But the big pay-off," Ty said,
"was the fourth bunt. Now Happy Harry was desperate. As he tried to field the fourth bunt he spiked himself in the right hand, requiring five stitches later, plus a return ticket to Happy Hollow. You snow, there might have been other Walter Johnson if only some one in Happy Hollow had ever bunted. For he had that fast oneand it was fast."

"Anyway," Cobb concluded, "Harry Hale remains my favorite ball player." This varn about Happy Harry Hale from Happy Hollow may sound like a pipe dream. But it had an amazing aftermath.

"Back around 1907," Ty Cobb told me, "we were playing Washington. We ran into another tall lanky pitcher who wasn't as tall and thin as Harry Hale, but he was ever faster. His name was Walter Johnson and he had just blown in from Weiser, Idaho, or Humboldt, Kans., or some place like that. I think it was from Weiser. Anyway, he had that fast one, and we couldn't foul him.

"So I remembered your pal. Harry Hale and it occurred to several of us on the Detroit team that maybe Weiser had never heard of the bunt. Hale gave us the idea.

Bunt Strategy

"So we started bunting. And Waiter started throwing those bunts around. I happened to be a part of that bunting attack, so I know what happened. You may recall that with all his speed, Johnson only won five games that year for Washington, while he lost nine. He had another bad year in 1908 and also in 1909.

"Of course, he had a bad ball club. But if it hadn't been for the Harry Hale you dug up from Happy Hollow several years before, Walter might have made a much better start. The old bunt is still useful, especially if you've seen or heard of one before.

And so, if you want a moral, it's how the unknown, unsung kid of more than 40 years ago could affect the career of the great Johnson, still the top of them all.

It was Hale - and farewell for Happy Harry. It was hail - and fame for Johnson.

No, he never quite had the amazing artistry of Hal Chase or the power and durability of Lou Gehrig. But he was still a star fire baseman, better than a .400 hitter before sinus trouble struck him down. He was fast enough to steal 50 or more oases a season.

Food, Minerals from Indian Lands Contributed Greatly to Victory

The American Indian, his lands and his work were effective contributors to this nation during World The new unit can be moved around at will. All it needs is an War II, the Indian office in Washington has reported. The Indian office has supervision of nearly 57 million gallons and has automatic control. acres of land owned by approximately 300,000 Indians.

During the war years, 1942, 1943, and 1944, agricultural products raised on Indian lands had a value of nearly $95,000,000. Livestock marketed and consumed by Indians was valued at $51,570,000. Lumber production totaled 1,600 million board feet valued at $7,000,000.

While the amount of Indian-owned livestock grazing on Indian-owned land increased to a remarkable extent during the war, there was less damage to the range than might have been expected, since during the drouth years the livestock population on the ranges of the Great Plains had been depleted and in many instances has not yet been fully restored. While the Indian ranges in the Southwest were exposed to heavy pressure by the war demand, generally conservation practices continued and no permanent damage was inflicted on any of the ranges which before the war were stocked only to their safe carrying capacity.

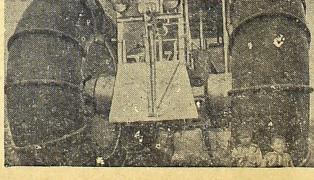

The principal non-renewable resource of the Indians affected by the demands of the war was oil. Under the stimulation of war demand, production was enlarged, new fields discovered, and the boundaries of existing fields expanded on a number of reservations. Production from this area during the war amounted to 415,000 tons of lead and zinc concentrates having a market value of $38,000,000. While there has been a tremen-

TRUE TO A GREAT HERITAGE

LESSON TEXT: Dueteronomy 4:1, 32-40. MEMORY SELECTION: He hath made his wonderful works to be remembered.-Psalm 111:4.

A goodly heritage is the gift of God to his people. By faith they must enter into it and possess it. Thus they honor him who has promised, and they witness to all the earth that he is a great God and a loving heavenly Father. It magnifies his name to believe on his word and to act on his promises.

Israel, having failed God and plunged themselves into years of wandering by their unbelief when they just came up to the Promised Land, were now ready to go over Jordan and take the land.

A new generation had grown up, and for their instruction Moses re-hearsed the history of the people, repeated the promises of God, and renewed their remembrance of his law. The book of Deuteronomy gives that "second law" - actually a review of what had been given before.

As they entered upon God's rich heritage for them they were admon-

I. Hearken to God's Law (v. 1). To hearken means more than to hear and forget. It carries with it the giving of attention to what is heard with the purpose of doing something about it.

God's law, his statutes and judgments are for the good of his people. They are not designed to limit their freedom, but to provide the channels through which they shall be most free to live and to accomplish that which is good and noble and useful.

Two things were assured to Israel if they hearkened to the law of God. They would first of all "live." This does not mean only that they should escape death, but that they might enter into the fullness of life.

"The Bible teaches that we are free to choose between a high grade of life or a low grade, between a life which involves fellowship with God or a daily existence which means nothing more than the enjoyment of animal comforts and following our own willful ways" (Earl L. Douglass).

The second result of obeying God's law would be their going into and possessing the land which God gave them. There is victory and attainment, as well as blessed fellowship for the one who obeys God. That is true today as it was in the time of Moses.

II. Remember God's Love (vv.

The loving mercies of God toward his people had revealed his infinite greatness and glory.

He revealed himself in the fireand they might well have been consumed by it—vet he graciously spoke to them instead of destroying them. They were to recall, too, that he had done a mighty and wonderful thing in taking them out of the powerful hand of Egypt and making them into a people for his name.

Sad is the state of the soul of the man who has lost his sense of the miraculous. To live in the midst of the constant demonstration of God's power and his mercy, and to see and feel nothing but the commonplace touch of humdrum daily life, is to be blind and deaf-yes, to be dead spiritually.

Is he any less powerful today? Certainly not! He is still the God of the miraculous and nowhere is that divine energy more evident than in the spiritual life of man.

The wonders of God in creation were rehearsed for Israel. They learned of his care for his people. 'But far more wonderful are the works of God in the new creation and his infinite care for his people redeemed from a ruined race, and made inheritors of eternal residence in the heavenly Canaan" (Hight C. Moore).

III. Depend on God's Promise

(vv. 37-40). The Promised Land was before them, but it was for them to go in and possess it. There were warfare and struggle ahead, mighty warlike peoples to overcome. Were they able for it? No, not in their own strength!

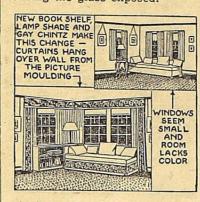

How were they to accomplish this formidable task? By counting on God. He had promised to drive out the nations now holding the land. He is a God not only in heaven, but also on earth (v. 39). The people who believe him may go forward, expecting miracles to hap-

Obedience to God's law brings fellowship with the eternal and omnipotent One, and the confident assurance that he will bring victory and the full accomplishment of his will for the obedient believer.

That is as true now as ever. Yes, let's be accurate and say that it is more true than ever, for believers now are indwelt by the Holy Spirit of God who makes real in and through them all the grace and beauty and power of God.

Creating a Modern Air in Living Room

HOUSES of glass are realities today and, if you want to give any house a modern air, try to make the windows seem important. One way is to frame them in a group by covering the wall and leaving the glass exposed.

An inexpensive chintz with grey-green ground and a flower pattern is used for draperies and to trim the couch cover of heavier gray-green cotton material which is also used for the cushions. The glass curtains are hung on rods suspended from the picture moulding with pic-ture wire and hooks. The side drapes are unlined but the valance is made over buckram. Both are tacked to pine strips and are hung with picture hooks. One end of the book shelves is closed in to make a head for the couch. The outside is painted grey-green and the inside dark green. The parchment lamp shade has green bindings.
