WALLGREN AND LUMBER WASHINGTON. - Lumber price ceilings topped the agenda of the President's conference the other day with his old friend Gov. Mon

Wallgren at Washington. However, Wallgren also took occasion to invite Truman to spend a vacation this summer in the northwest aboard the presidential yacht.

"The people of my state would be delighted to have you as a guest, and you can also take a trip up to Alaska on the Williamsburg," Wallgren told Truman accepted tentatively, saying he would go if he could possibly make it.

Wallgren's main business, however, was to strongly urge an increase in the price ceilings on lumber. He maintained that this was necessary in order to increase lumber output for the housing program.

"We are facing a serious job crisis in our lumber mills, Harry," said the Washington governor. "We have a model unemployment compensation law in my state, but many unemployed workmen are swiftly using up the 26 weeks they are entitled to draw as compensation. Both from the labor standpoint and the housing shortage, inventories in our mills must be built up as quickly as possible."

IDLE WAR PLANTS

Governor Wallgren also urged the sale of government-owned light metal plants, now idle in his area, to private operators as another means of increasing employment. Two idle plants in question are the Aluminum Rolling mill and the Aluminum Ingot companies at Spokane, operated by Alcoa during the war. Henry Kaiser wants to buy the former for the production of aluminum-built automobiles and prefabricated housing.

Wallgren told Truman that the lumber situation has been aggravated by a neat little device of certain big timber outfits, including the Weyerhauser interests, which, calculatedly or otherwise, has been stifling competition. Under the Washington constitution, the state government must sell timber to the highest bidder, but some big outfits have been bidding over the price ceilings. This causes all bids to be thrown out.

The President said he would talk to the RFC about the plants, but suggested that Wallgren thrash out his lumber price problems with price control boss Chester Bowles.

BUTTER BLACK MARKET The office of international trade, now under the commerce department, is planning to ask U. S. customs officials to investigate some strange shenanigans in the re-sale of butter this country has been exporting to Mexico.

Despite the serious butter shortage, which has caused the American housewife to turn to substitutes and jam for her table, we sent 5,500 pounds of butter to Mexico in the last quarter of 1945.

Some of this is now winding up at Tiajuana, the Mexican resort town across the border from San Diego, where the butter is being sold to American tourists for the fabulous price of $1.25 a pound.

Under export price ceilings, enforced by the OPA and the department of commerce, this same butter was sold to Mexican dealers at from 47 to 49 cents a pound. The price varies a couple of cents a pound, depending on the type of packaging.

In other words, we are now buying back American-made butter from Mexico for triple the price Mexican dairy dealers are paying us for it. Commerce department officials can only guess how much smuggled butter may be involved in this cross-border black market, but the customs office will be asked to make a thorough probe.

NOTE-Mexico is also one of our biggest purchasers of exported nylon stockings. Out of a total of 9,110 dozen pairs of nylons exported in November -the last monthly figures availble-Mexico bought 5,010 dozen pairs. Cuba received 2,603 doz-

Nevada's 'Lost' Turquoise Mine May Yield Finder Huge Fortune

GOLDFIELD, NEV.—A "lost" turquoise mine within 12 or 14 miles of Goldfield, if found, may bring riches to someone, according to a story published in the Tonopah Times-Bonzana recently, which quotes the experience of Harry Polin.

About 1908, when Polin was in business in Goldfield, he received an inquiry from Tiffany's, New York City, asking who could ship that firm about 100 pounds of turquoise. Polin later asked an old prospector if he could locate some turquoise.

"Sure, sure," the prospector replied. "I got a lot of that stuffain't worth anything, is it?"

In time the prospector appeared with two or three ore sacks of ma-terial he claimed was turquoise. The stuff was in large chunks, and Harry took it to be copper ore. Doubtful of its value, he boxed it and shipped it to Tiffany. Imagine his surprise two weeks later when he received a check from Tiffany for $500!

And a request for another shipment!

It was some time before the prospector showed up at the store again. When Polin handed him $250 in curthe old fellow almost collapsed. He lost no time in bringing in more of the turquoise, and this time delivered some four sacks of the gemstone. Harry asked him where he was getting it.

The prospector did his best to describe the location of the mine. He explained it was in the Cuprite district, some 12 to 14 miles south of Goldfield. The next check from Tiffany's was for $1,000, and Polin waited for the old fellow to come back for his The prospector never returned, and no one else has ever been able to locate that fabulous turquoise mine, said to be within a dozen miles of this town.

General, Admiral Agree U.S. Will Be Attacked First

WASHINGTON. - If there is a World War III, the aggressor's first move will be an attack on the United States, Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz declared here.

"Two world wars have shown beyond dispute that the United States is the real barrier to anyone dreaming of conquest," he said in an address prepared for the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense.

A few days later, in Chicago, a similar statement was made by Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, hero of Bataan.

"If war comes again, I firmly believe we will be the first nation attacked," Wainwright said. "Our oceans will be less of a barrier than was the Delaware river to George Washington's little army in 1777."

Both urged universal military training and preparedness against attack. General Wainwright also called for a merger of the armed

That, at least, is the claim of the Florida Brahman Breeders' association in describing "Florida's cattle of the future."

Likewise, J. M. Frost of Houston, Texas, president of the American Brahma Breeders' association, praises the quality of the breed. Edgar Hudgins of Hungerford, Texas, owner of the largest Brahma herd in that state, declares these hardy cattle are exceptionally adaptable to all of the South. All of them say, "Buy Brahmans."

More than $50,000 of these cattle were sold at auction when the second annual registered Brahman show was held here recently.

VETS PILOT TRAINING

What are the chances for veterans eceiving pilot training under the Bill of Rights? Not too bright, they have improved slightly. The Veterans' administration has granted educational institutions the right to judge what elective courses may come within college study under the G.I. Bill of Rights. Therefore, if a student wants to take flying lessons along with his other studies, he may do so if he works out an agreement with the school in which he's enrolled. Of course, the veteran will have to find a school near an aircraft training service, and the $500 limit won't go far in Dick has his telephone connected flight training, especially when it's an elective taken in addition to other studies. Congress will have to amend the B. of R. before the veteran can have any real assurance that his government-paid education can consist of pilot training.

ty, Illinois, has been opened near St. George. A new cub trainer has been received and instructions in flying will be given by August Stadler, former AAF pilot with 5,000 flying hours. Richard Granger will be in charge of mechanical work and service on the new field.

Nevada Air Squadron? War department officials have promised Sen. Pat McCarran of Nevada that his state will be given an opportunity to form a national guard air fighter squadron, according to the Reese River Reveille, published at Austin, Nevada. The state has ample bombing and target ranges. World War II veterans and the American Legion backed the plan.

The new freight line is known as the "Flying Tiger Line," because it is headed by Bob Prescott, formerly of Fort Worth. EDITOR FINDS NEW ERCOUPE HANDLES LIKE AUTOMOBILE

"Flying the new Ercoupe, the editor of this paper made his first attempt at flying recently, and it was conclusively demonstrated to him that flying can be made almost as easy as driving a car.

S. J. Porterfield

"First came a few minutes of ground instruction while in the cockpit of the Ercoupe which gave the passenger a chance to look over the instruments. Then the engine was started and allowed to warm up. A few taxiing runs were made up and down the field with the editor handling the controls. The Ercoupe steered just like an automobile. Next we made the take off run and in a few minutes we were in the air. During all the time of the flight until just before the landing run, your editor did all the flying with the exception of handling the throttle."

For Both Sea and Air Planes It seems to us that the Rock Hall,

Md., business men were extremely wise when they purchased a permanent airport for that town. The property included an old ferry wharf and an extensive shore line which will afford adequate facilities for sea as well as air planes.

How Vets Buy Planes

After state, federal and local governments get a crack at surplus planes and aviation supplies, the veteran then has first priority. To buy surplus equipment, the veteran must make an application to the Smaller War Plants corporation which checks his situation and certifies him, if he is eligible, to the appropriate disposal agency. He will be given the same terms allowed anyone else, regardless of the size of his purchase. Improvements are being made in the sales setup.

UNIQUE IRRIGATION

PLAN FOR MISSOURI THERE ARE SEVERAL PLANS being considered for controlling the Missouri river, and to utilize its waters for irrigation, navigation and the production of electric energy. I do not find in any of them a simple program a resident of North Dakota explained to me early in this century. We were crossing the state, and, as an enthusiastic citizen, he was expounding on a means of turning the dry, and largely barren, fields into prolific food producers.

"The water flow in North Dakota, between the Missouri and the Red river of the North valley, is from northwest to southeast," he said. "At the eastern border of the state the flow changes to from south to north through the Red river, and the waters enter the Canadian lakes north of Winnipeg."

He pointed out to me many depressions, ranging in extent from a few acres to those that were miles in circumference. In the dim past those depressions were, in all probability, fresh water lakes.

"Give this state a supply of water, such as it could have, and it would become a garden spot. Turn those depressions into lakes and the evaporation would produce rainfall, and provide the water we need without the necessity of the canals and ditches of an irrigation system,' he explained. To accomplish that is a simple, and comparatively inexpensive problem. A dam across the Missouri near the Montana border would turn the flood waters of the river into that series of depressions, and North Dakota would have a chain of more than 100 fresh water lakes, draining southeastward into the Red river.

"Such a project would make the farms of this state as productive as those of any other of the states; it would solve much of the flood problem further south; it would make of North Dakota a summer playground and a duck hunter's paradise, and it could again make the Red river navigable for small steamers, such as those Jim Hill at one time operated as far south as

As the North Dakota man told it the idea sounded practical and easily feasible. The state could do nothing about it because of the interstate water rights involved, and the possible effect on the so-called navigation of the Missouri river. Its very simplicity and inexpensiveness, if nothing else, would bar it from consideration. Any scheme to attract congressional attention must have many complexities and cost hundreds of millions or billions of dollars. An expenditure of a mere 10 or 12 million would not be worth thinking about on the part of congress. That North Dakotan's dream will not come true. It will not even be considered, as I, for one, wish it might be. The man who told me of that idea was in no sense an engineer. He was but a practical minded farmer, who was interested in his own acres, and in the welfare of his state.

LITTLE REDUCTIONS ON FEDERAL PAYROLLS

ALMOST AS IMPOSSIBLE as that Biblical task of passing a camel through the eye of a needle, is that of detaching a bureaucrat from the government feed trough. Senator Byrd of Virginia reported to the senate recently as to the results of his efforts on that problem. Despite the end of the war, the closing, or practical closing, of a large percentage of the war created bureaus, the number of civilian, full time employees of the federal government has been reduced by only a meager 445,000 from the peak point of 3,650,000. The 3,215,000 civilian employees still feeding at the federal trough is a long way upward from the 500,000 of 1932, or the 861,000 of 1938. By getting back to the 1938 figure we might save enough to be able to balance the federal budget.

THE best pitched ball game isn't always a matter of what the pitcher figures, but what the opposing batter knows. For example, Joe DiMaggio has faced more than his share of great pitchers, including Bob Feller, Bob Grove, Tex Hughson and the pick of the National league.

Bob Feller. But in this World Series game Dizzy had no arm. It was gone. We watched him warm up and he could just about get the ball up to his warm-up catcher. This was to be our day. We figured we ought to get about three hits apiece from that daffy-dill Diz was pushing over. It was something pitiful. "Well, anyway." DiMaggio continued, "here was our pushover. And we all knew that Dizzy Dean had been one of the great pitchers of all time. One of the tops. But he was a crippled duck now. He

"So what happens? Here come these dinky-dinks floating up to the plate. No speed at all. Not much of a curve. Just a shot put. But they would come at tough spots. Low and inside-around your shoulders-just balls you don't like. Balls that are hard to hit solidly. And we swing and pop up or go outand there's Diz grinning at us and getting by with only a head and a heart. No stuff at all.

'And if those two Cub infielders hadn't collided early in the game to give us two runs on a weak, dribbling infield roller, Diz would have had us shut out 3 to 0 up to the 8th and I think would have beaten

'This game convinced me that Dizzy Dean was one of the greatest of all time. Think what he must have been when he had his arm. I'm glad he was in the other league when he was right.'

More About Pitching

At this point DiMaggio and your correspondent became involved in a

"What's your answer?" Joe said. "A low curve ball side corner," was my reply.

"Any low curve ball," Joe said, "inside or outside. I hit on a level plane. So did Hornsby, Bill Dickey and Babe Ruth. But when you get one of those low ones around your knees, you have to swing in a different way. It's a great thing for the hitters that only a few hurlers can handle this type of pitch. For it takes perfect control to make this low throw. Here's a funny thing. A low curve breaks much faster and sharper than a high curve. Why? I don't know. But it does. After all we have to deal with facts, not with ideas. You know, Grant, from the pitching distance, that ball comes up to you in less than half a second. Johnson's speed was 130 feet a second. You don't have time to do much figuring in half a second. It's different with just a fast ball. You can time that. But you can't time a fast breaking curve around your knees."

Strong Hands Needed

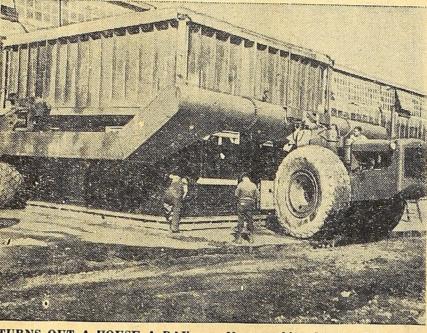

You read in various gazettes the number of earnest and enterprising athletes who are now working to build up their legs and arms. Such men as Louis, Conn, Greenberg, Dickey, DiMaggio, Ted Williams, etc. But too many of these, and a great deal too many of the youthful competitors just getting under way, overlook a section of the body just as important. This happens to be the two hands. Hand strength and hand action play a big part in baseball, football, boxing, golf, tennis, riding, basketball, fishing and other sports. Especially in baseball, boxing, horse racing and golf. A pair of big, powerful hands was Hans Wagner's crowning glory. Jack Dempsey's two iron fists, almost never injured, were a big help. Two of the strongest looking pair of hands I ever saw belong to Tommy Armour, the golf star, and Bill Dickey, the Yankee catcher.

It isn't everybody who happens to be born with Wagner, Dempsey, Armour or Dickey hands. But this defect can at least be partially cured by the right sort of hand exercise. One of the best methods is to use rather small, hard rubber balls, squeezing one in each hand,

A PEOPLE IN CONFUSION

LESSON TEXT: Judges 2:7, 11, 16:23.

MEMORY SELECTION: The Lord is my nelper, and I will not fear.—Hebrews 13:6.

Confusion is a word well suited to describe the world today. With the end of the war we had hoped for peace and goodwill, and what have we? We may learn from the experience of Israel the reasons for such confusion. They, too, had come into their land and should have had only peace and prosperity. Instead there were turmoil and disorder.

The success or failure of both nations and individuals is ultimately determined by their attitude toward the law of God. He is always right and true. The constant factor in a world order that swings wildly from one extreme to another is his law, which is perfect and eternal.

God is no respecter of persons. Even Israel, his own chosen nation, found that observing God's law meant blessing, and failure to do so brought judgment and sorrow. No man is great and powerful enough to ignore this rule, and none is exempt from its operation.

I. The Cause-Forgetting God (vv.

The Lord had promised the land to them as they went in and pos-sessed it by faith in him. He fully kept that promise in the measure that they believed him. They never did take the whole land, but that was because of their failure, not God's.

As the people of Israel took possession of the land, they went forward in the way of blessing as long as Joshua, and the elders who remembered God, kept them steady and true. We have here an excellent illustration of the power of a godly example. It is far stronger than

The fact that a nation has been highly privileged and has been exalted to a place of power and honor will not save it in the day when God is forgotten. Israel no longer had God-fearing men to bring it back to the Lord, and so began its awful drifting.

We Americans are rightly proud of our great land, its mighty resources, its fine past and promising future. But what is the future to be? Oh, we say, the most glorious days are ahead! They may be, but only if we, like our forefathers who established this nation, recognize God. If we do not, America will go the way of the forgotten empires of centuries past, and that in spite of all its past achievements and its present promise.

It is a significant thing that our business and national leaders often come from Christian homes, but it is sad that they themselves are so frequently not Christians. Their lives are shaped by the teaching and influence of godly parents, but what will their children do if they are not brought up in the fear and admonition of the Lord?

II. The Condition-National and Spiritual Confusion (vv. 16-19).

The history of the period of the judges in Israel is incomplete, but what we have shows the awful condition of the nation. Not only were they in separate tribes, but the people as a whole were divided into three groups-north and south of Jerusalem, and east of the Jordan. The moral and spiritual decay were evident in their turning to the immoral practices of Baal-worship. One would have thought that God would give up a people so set on sinning, but he did not. He provided deliverance for Israel. That gives us courage, for we know that he has not given us up, but has pro-vided in Christ a sure deliverance, if America will turn to him. It is interesting to note that God works through men. Some of these judges were great men; others were just ordinary men. But each in his appointed place, at the appointed time, was God's man.

Confusion, sin and disobedience cannot be tolerated indefinitely. So Israel stubbornly went on to

III. The Conclusion - Judgment from God (vv. 20-23).

God not only will not hold a backsliding nation guiltless, but will bring judgment even if he has to turn over his people to a despoiling nation. He has instruments of individual and national chastisement, and he is ready to use them.

Notice that wherever they went the Lord's hand was against them. There is no place to flee from the presence of God. Anyone who thinks he can do it should read Psalm 139: 7-12. It can't be done. That is a comfort to the believer, but it is very disquieting to the unbeliever.

They compromised with evil, and lost not only their testimony but their very spiritual life. They forsook God and took into their friendship the enemies of God, only to find that they were their own enemies.

We are in danger now of compromise with evil, both in our personal and in our national lives. As we do -and if we do-we may expect only disaster and judgment.

STATE OF MICHIGAN IN THE CIRCUIT COURT FOR THE COUNTY OF

IOSCO IN CHANCERY In the matter of the Petition of John D. Morrison, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State, for the sale of certain lands for taxes assessed thereon.

To the Circuit Court for the County of Iosco, in Chancery:

John D. Morrison, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, respectfully shows unto the Court: 1. That he is the Auditor General of the State of Michigan and makes and files this petition under, by virtue of and pursuant to the provisions of Act No. 206 of the Public Acts of 1893, as amended, and Act No. 126 of the Public Acts of 1933, as amended; That Schedule A annexed hereto is the tax record required by the act first above mentioned and contains the description of all lands in the aforesaid county upon which taxes, which were assessed for the years mentioned therein, have remained unpaid for more than one year after they were returned as delinquent, the description of all lands in said county heretofore bid off in the name of the State and thus held and upon which taxes which were assessed subsequent to the tax for which such lands were sold to the State have remained unpaid for more than one year after they were returned as delinquent, and the description of all lands in said county which are delinquent for any installment of taxes under the provisions of the act last above mentioned; 3. That extended separately in said schedule against each description of said lands therein contained are (a) the total amount of delinquent taxes upon said description for the non-payment of which the same may lawfully be sold at the next annual tax sale, (b) interest computed thereon as provided by law to the first day of May, next ensuing, (c) a collection fee of four per cent and (d) $1.00 for expenses, all in accordance with the provisions of the act first above mentioned; 4. That all of the aforesaid taxes, interest and charges are valid, delinquent and unpaid, and have remained delinquent and unpaid for sufficient time to authorize and require, as provided by the foregoing acts, the sale of the aforesaid parcels of land against which they were assessed and are extended in said schedule at the next annual tax sale for the honpayment thereof, and that the said taxes, interest, collection fee and expenses so extended in said schedule against each parcel of land therein described constitute a valid lien upon each of the said several parcels of land described in said schedule as therein and against which extended in favor of the people of the State of Michigan, the payment of which lien this court may enforce as a preferred or first claim upon such lands by the sale thereof.

Wherefore your petitioner prays: a. That within the time provided by law this court may determine and decree that the aforesaid taxes, interest, collection fee and charges are valid and constitute a valid lien upon each of the said several parcels of land described in said schedule as therein extended:

b. That within the time provided by law this court make a final decree in favor of the State of Michigan against each parcel of said lands for the payment of the several amounts of taxes, interest, collection fee and expenses, as computed and extended in said schedule against the several parcels of land therein contained;

c. That said decree provide that in default of the payment so ordered of the said several sums computed and extended against said lands in said schedule, the said several parcels of land, or such interest therein as may be necessary to satisfy the amount decreed against the same, shall severally be sold as the law provides;

d. That your petitioner may have such other and further relief in the premises as to this court may seem just and equitable.

And your petitioner will ever pray, etc. Dated: January 17, 1946.

JOHN D. MORRISON, Auditor General of the State of Michigan, for and in behalf of said State.

STARRING ARAB AND ANDY BLAKE WAN FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lt. Andy Blake of Operations was joined in Washington by his wife, Arab, who took a job with Ordnance. After an exciting time on the bus, a chase in which Andy was knocked out, Arab secured a room, where she had reasons to believe that enemy agents were at work. At the house, Andy got into a fight with one of the roomers, met the landlady, whom he had previ-ously known in Paris. Arab told Andy about a girl that had disappeared from the house, and looking out the window they saw a newly erected bird house. They noticed that the bird house built in the backyard tree hid from view a window in a near-by house. Arab thought It was there to hide something.

CHAPTER V

I slipped into the shrubbery of the house on Q Street. After all, I was still responsible for Arab. I walked quietly through the grounds until I came to the pin oak. It had one lowhanging branch and I had no trouble scrambling up to the crotch which held the birdhouse.

The thing had been put up recently, all right. There were spots where somebody's feet had crumbled bark. The birdhouse was new, and the nail heads were shiny. There had been rain the night of the crazy bus ride. If the birdhouse had been up then, the nail heads would have started to rust. I sighted along an imaginary line from Arab's window through the crotch of the tree. She had been right. From her window, one of the second-floor windows of the next house would show through the crotch like a target in a V sight.

I climbed down, took a last look at her window, and came close to clearing out for good. Silhouetted against the drawn shade was Arab, fixing Joey's necktie. The only thing which kept me from leaving was spotting a light on the first floor. It was in the room where I had dumped Joey last night. The snade wasn't down all the way and I felt curious. I slipped over to the house and peered in the

I took a final look around. There was a coat on the bed. A white raincoat with acorn-shaped leather buttons. I would have known it anywhere. Arab was playing cop in a very tough neighborhood. She was safe only as long as nobody knew she was playing cop. She was upstairs laughing and having fun, while down here on Joey's bed was the white raincoat she had worn two nights ago . . . the raincoat which would label her as the girl who had heard too much on the bus.

And beside the raincoat was a pencil, paper, and tape measure. Joey was getting ready to try the coat on somebody for size.

An idea tiptoed shyly into my head and I pounced on it before it could die of loneliness. It wasn't a great idea, or even a good one. But it was worth trying. I shut the window quietly, took the coat and crept out into the first-floor hall. I had to have the raincoat altered. Arab was unavailable, and I could take a chance on only one other person in the house: Sadie, the maid. She already knew we were suspiciously interested in Paula Thompson's disappearance. If she happened to be working against us, we were already she were friendly, this was a good time to find out.

I sneaked down the hall and through the big dining room to the door of the lighted kitchen. Sadie was in a rocking chair, knitting. The chair squeaked like boards in a haunted house. A black cat was curled at her feet, staring at me from candle-flame eyes. A pot bubbled on the stove.

Sadie said, without looking up, "You want something?"

I gulped. "Yes," I said, "I want you to help me."
"Um."

then happened to glance at the cat and got angry. No cat can look at me with a man-or-mouse question in its eyes. "I need your help and I need it badly," I said. "I want a couple inches taken off the skirt and sleeves of this raincoat. It has to be done so it won't show. It has to be done fast. A half-hour from now might be too late."

"Too late fo' what?" I was in this too deeply to try to be cagy now. "Too late to keep somebody out of trouble," I said.

She got up, took the raincoat, and studied it. "You come in through Mistuh Raeder's window an' got this," she stated.

"That's right. But it isn't his.

"Sit down," she said, "an' don't tell me anything mo'. I ain't interested."

She went into a small bedroom opening off the kitchen, came out again, and spread the raincoat on the kitchen table. Scissors gleamed in her brown hand. "If I just took up the hem an' sleeves," she said, 'you could tell what was done." She straightened out the bottom crease and showed me that it was marked by a discolored line. "So we got to cut it off."

"There," she said, handing me the raincoat.

She had folded the raw edges up inside the new hems and had sewed them into place. You might be abie to tell that the coat had been shortened, if you looked carefully, but nobody would know when it had been done. And it would no longer be the right length for Arab. "I'd like to pay you for this," I

Sadie shook her head.

I thanked her, and couldn't help asking, "What's going on in this

"I don't know an' I don't want to know," she said. "I see things I don't understand an' keep my mouth shut. Like the way Mis' Reynolds keeps playing with one of the fingers on her left hand. Like she was used to having a wedding an' engagement ring on it, and was used to turning them so the stones would be straight. But of course she ain't married."

"Well," I said, "she's really—" "I don't want to know. Just tell her to leave that ring finger alone. Now maybe you better hurry."

I tried to thank her again, but she rocked in the chair and didn't look at me or speak, and the chair was sounding like a board in a haunted house again, so I left.

I slipped back to Joey's room and found that he hadn't returned yet. Maybe I should have considered myself lucky, but I didn't. There isn't anything unusual about guys not breaking away from Arab any sooner than necessary. Back in Phila-delphia I almost had to wave good night with a gun to some of our bachelor friends. If I were having luck tonight, it was the kind you run into when you find a four-leaf clover in a bed of poison ivy. I left the raincoat on the bed in the room. I was tempted to do some snooping among his things but it wasn't worth taking a chance. Renee Fielding or one of the girls might happen by to see if Joey had a headache and needed his forehead stroked.

I returned to the hall and le self out the front door. I didn't feel very successful. Maybe I had kept Arab out of one kind of trouble, but if she went on encouraging Joey she was headed for another kind. And I couldn't do anything about it. A warning would be useless.. Women don't seem to recognize trouble when it comes wrapped up in a six-foot package of husky blond virility. Sure, she could be putting on an act. Maybe she thought that by encouraging Joey she could pry some interesting bits of news out of him. That's how she might figure at the I stammered for a moment and start. But after encouraging him for a while she might find herself enjoying it more than she had planned. She wouldn't be the first dame in history to fall for a guy she started out to take.

I started trudging toward my bus stop. Perhaps to some people the stars overhead looked like diamonds on black velvet, but for my money they were moth holes.

During the next morning I had to fight against the desire to call Arab in Ordnance Department to make sure that she was all right. I won the fight but didn't feel very proud about it. At eleven-thirty Arab called me. Her voice sounded wist-

She asked, "Do I always have to be the one who telephones?

"Sorry," I mumbled. "A lot of work piled up on me." "I'm sorry about last night, Andy.

About giggling, I mean." "That's all right. My fault. I've got to break myself of getting mad when people laugh at me.'

"Please don't take it that way, darling. I didn't really laugh at you. I was laughing at the whole situa-

"Yeah, sure, I know. Uh . . . did everything go all right after I left? Have any trouble getting rid of

There was a pause, and while I waited for her answer my lungs began to ache, as if I couldn't get enough oxygen. This was the time for her to tell me about driving with If she confessed, things Joey. weren't bad yet. But if she didn't tell me . . .

"Why, no," she said carefully. 'Did you worry about anything?"

"Oh, no. Just wondered if you had any trouble with Joey."

"Why . . . why, no."
"I just wondered, that was all." "Can we have lunch together today, Andy? I'm supposed to go in fifteen minutes." The air I breathed didn't seem to get to the bottom of my lungs. I would take a deep breath and my ribs would bulge, but the suffocating feeling went right on. "I'm pretty busy," I muttered.

"Oh. Well, you'll be around early tonight, won't you? Or why can't we have dinner together instead of me going back to Q Street for din-We could go to-'

"Things are piled up here."

"You know how things can get."
"Yes. Yes, I do," she said brightly. "Well, you'll give me a call sometime, Andy, won't you? After all, we have a few things in common, don't we? Like a marriage license and all that."

"Sure, I'll give you a call." I went out and caught a bus into Washington. If I had to be miserable I might as well be miserable hanging around the house on Q Street, waiting for Arab to get into

It was past eight when I arrived. I wandered along the street and spotted Joey's roadster. Seeing it there gave me a senseless feeling of relief. The guy could be making as much time with Arab inside the house as in his car. Evidently Joey had been one of the smart boys who bought cars just before the freeze, because his car was quite new and had white sidewall tires. Judging from the treads it had been driven hard and far in less than a year. I peeked at the speedometer. He had racked up 21,921 miles.

Of course he could have put that on before gasoline rationing started last May, although it would have meant a lot of concentrated driving. But I was curious. The door was unlocked. I opened it and looked around inside, lighting matches to study dark corners. I was looking for the tag which lots of gas stations put on a car when they change oil; a tag showing the mileage on the date the car was in for servicing. There was none inside the car. I lifted the hood and found a tag wired to a rod above the oil intake. The figures were interesting. They might even had seemed fascinating to Joey's ration board.

The oil had been changed at a Washington service station two weeks ago and the speedometer reading had been 20,885. Joey had driven more than a thousand miles in the past two weeks . . . on a fourgallon-a-week A card. I wouldn't have thought you could get that kind of mileage from anything bigger than a cigarette lighter.

I crossed the street to the shadows hiding the horsemounting block, and settled down to keep an eye on things. There were a lot of lights in the house on Q Street, but the shadws were all down. I wondered what Arab was doing. Maybe she was trying to telephone me at the Crowleys'. Maybe she was feeling bad about our scrap. It was a still night. My ears were tuned to catch wisps of sound. The rustle of leaves seemed as loud as the turning of newspaper pages. My watch ticked like a grandfather's clock. And so, when the silence was ripped apart for a split second, my ears tingled.

Across the street, in the shaggy grounds of the house on Q Street, a woman had screamed.

She hadn't screamed long. Something had stopped her. Stopped her as fast as if her vocal cords had snapped on the fourth or fifth vibration. But she had put everything into that splinter of sound. I ran across the street and plunged into the tangled garden.

Fifty feet away, a shadow moved out of sight behind the pin oak which masked Arab's window. I sprinted toward the tree. I couldn't have acted more brainlessly if I had been a puppy charging a cat. A man stepped out from the shelter of the tree. He was short and squat but moved like a panther. I swerved too late.

Trees and sky and ground pinwheeled around me. I yanked my body into a tight ball, hit the ground, and rolled most of the shock out of the impact. When I scrambled up he was waiting for me. Waiting in an odd, hunched-forward position. It reminded me vaguely of the way Jimmy Londos used to wait for a chance to slap a flying mare on a challenger for his wrestling title. But there were a lot of differences be-tween this man and Londos. The man facing me carried as much fat as muscle. And he was off balance. Way off. Nobody could produce power from a stance like that. Nobody except . . I shivered. My memory hadn't really been trying to dig up Jimmy Londos. It had been groping for a picture I'd seen once. A picture done on shiny rice paper. There had been a short fat man in this same hunched pose. He had been naked except for a G string and his belly had seemed enormous. In the back-ground the artist had painted a tiny white-capped mountain. Fujiyama. This was the way Jap wrestlers

The picture flashed through my mind as I sidled toward him. I watched his hands. His fingers were stroking the air in front of him, feeling it, almost like a pianist getting the feel of keys. I flicked out a jab.

Pert, Pretty Pinafores May Be Remodelled from Old Shirts

By Ertta Haley

OUR little boys have always worn make-overs from Daddy's shirts, but have you ever thought of using these shirts for dressing up daughter? The beautiful fabrics and interesting weaves of men's shirts make excellent material for sprightly little pinafores and blouses.

Most of you mothers know the high cost of those frilly blouses for sister to wear with her jumpers. Or you know how quickly she grows out of pinafores. Yet the cost of converting Dad's old shirt into one of these items is frequently only the price of a spool or two of thread to match.

If the shirts are worn or torn around the armholes, this need be no problem in making the pinafore, because this material is not necessary. Only the back and front of the shirt need be in good condition. Worn sleeves will not spoil the plans at hand.

Cutting the Pinafore. The back of the shirt is used for the front part of the pinafore, as this takes the greatest amount of solid material. Since the pinafore is open in the back, the front part of the shirt may be used for that. To get the most material from a shirt, wash it carefully, then press and rip, being careful not to tear any of the fabric.

If You Have a Man's Shirt ...

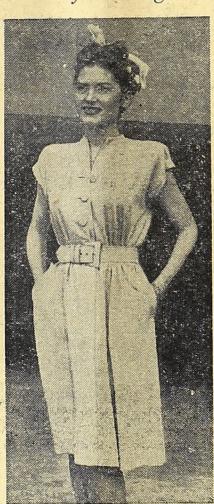

If the sleeves are in fairly usable condition, cut tie-strings from them, and perhaps a ruffle to substitute for sleeves and a pocket or two. A belt is desirable, too, and there should be a big, perky bow in the back to make the pinafore look crisp and dainty. If, however, the material is short, use a slim belt that ties in the front.

Trimming Is Important.

One of the little touches that makes a pinafore is, very often, the trimming. This may be as simple as ric rac around the sleeves or pockets, or a thin edging of lace around the neckline or bow.

The delicate shirt fabrics are best for the frilly, dressy pinafores. White shirts can be made gay with red touches of trimming, or navy blue or red or white. For the more sturdy pinafores, use a minimum of trimming and depend upon tailoring and detail to put the pinafore across. A feather stitch around the pockets may be all that you will need, provided this is in an attractive, contrasting color thread. Making a Blouse.

If your daughter is a little too tall for a pinafore made from Daddy's shirt, try a blouse. Blouses can be made short for the youngsters and there will be ample material in the shirt for such a project.

As in the case of the pinafore, the back of the shirt is used for the front, if the blouse is buttoned all the way down the back.

If, however, you are making a shirtwaist style, use the back of the shirt for the blouse and the two front pieces of the shirt cut down to make the front. Very often the tiny buttons on the shirt will go very well with the blouse.

The sleeves of the shirt will provide ample material for a little round collar and puffed sleeves. These may be trimmed with lace or crocheting, or even bright-colored piping.

Whenever you are working with this type of remodeling, it's best to keep ironing board and iron handy. Seams should be pressed often to make them easier to stitch. Basting takes time, too, but the more exact work resulting from it is a gratifying reward. Both of these precautions are essential in making smallsized blouses and pinafores.

Patching Pointers

For tears in children's play clothes, use a double-stitched patch for its durability.

If you have a perfect figure, settle on satin for your best dress. Its shiny surface reflects light in such a way as to point up your best qualities.

The good portions of a wornout dress may be used to line a wearable jacket, for making a blouse or jerkin, or cutting off the bodice and making a separate skirt. In darning fabrics with a distinct pattern, study the pattern carefully, and match as closely when darning. This is known as reweaving, and when carefully done, the darn can be almost in-

If a skirt is too short to hem. a facing may be placed in it. Stitch the facing, which should be of material fairly similar to the skirt, to the bottom. Press the seam before turning facing to wrong side, and baste. Turn up material and hem to place.

Before you wear a dress even once, protect the underarms from fading or wearing out with a pair of dress shields. Sew or pin them in, and remember, they must be washed frequently. Shields such as these will save cleaner's bills and often prevent the dress from becoming ruined.

A plain, drab dress can often be made wearable and even quite gay by an applique around the shoulder, on the pockets, around the belt or even to the side on the skirt. Choose a simple flower design and trace the outline on contrasting fabric or cut the design from a scrap of gay print. Or, use old, leftover yarn to embroider a bouquet.

You can completely disguise an unsightly tear or burn by covering it with a decorative patch. These patches are especially suitable for youngster's clothing, sports clothes and casual lingerie. Use an applique made of contrasting colored material from an illustration or a transfer pattern. Be sure that the design is large enough to cover the dam-aged place. Felt appliques are effective on many rayon fabrics; cotton prints are good against cotton; and silks may be used for silk or woolen material. Hem close to the edge, using a fine needle and matching thread.

Fashion Notes

If you are making a dark suit with a plaid trim, it's smart to have three - quarter dolman sleeves, cuffed in the plaid trim used for the rest of the ensemble.

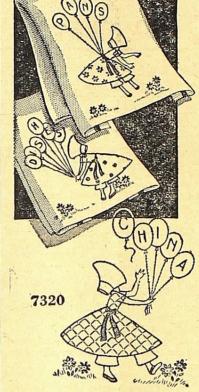

Cape stole suits are popular in the checked fabrics for spring. A new note is added by pleating the jacket softly, and making the belt stand out by putting a silver buckle

Interesting effects with scarves are popular. They may be worn just as a scarf, or planned as part of the dress, sleeves or skirt.

Plaid ginghams are going oldfasioned with bustle and backdrop treatments for afternoon and evening wear. Dust ruffles, big bow sashes and deep-rounded necklines from picturesque bygone days are back in fashion again.

Okapi Seems Made Up of Giraffe, Horse, Zebra, Ox

If naturalists of the 19th century believed they had discovered all of the world's large animals, they were mistaken. The rare and remarkable okapi was not found until 1900, in the deep forests of Belgian Congo. The okapi is a walking puzzle. It has the legs of a zebra, the head of a giraffe, and the thick neck of a work horse. Its body is that of an antelope, and its tail and hoofs like those of an ox. The strange creature has a two-foot-long blue tongue. And its skeleton is precisely the same as that of a preranean sea 10,000,000 years ago.

Immediate patching of worn spots may add years to the life of a roof if it is, on the whole, still in good condition. It is, however, usually poor economy to do a patchwork job on a roof that is well worn.

To make a good wire splice, lay the ends side by side, pointing in opposite directions until the doubled portion is about two inches long. Grasp firmly right in the middle with the jaws of a pair of pliers. Wrap one free end firm-ly about the splice at the left, and the other in reverse about the splice at the right. The result is neat, easily taped, and won't pull apart. Such joints should be soldered, particularly if the wire is part of an electrical unit.

Retarding Sprout Growth in Storage

Loss With Root Crops Eliminated by Process

> By Ora Smith Cornell University

All who have stored any of the root crops such as beets, carrots, turnips and rutabagas know that two of the most important storage difficulties with these crops are sprouting and shriveling. The higher the humidity of the storage air, the lesser the amount of shriveling. However, if at high humidities the temperature also is much above 40 degrees F., the foot and top growth will be excessive, often resulting in decay of the stored product.

By a very simple procedure, it is now possible to prevent or greatly retard root and top growth of these root crops in storage. Methyl ester of alpha naphthalene acetic acid, which prevents or retards sprout growth in potatoes also will retard root and top growth in the root crops. This results in less decay and better keeping qualities.

Probably the best method of application of this chemical is to spread a small amount of it impregnated in shredded or confettied paper or in an inert dust in the container, bin, pile or pit where they are stored. The paper or dust con-taining the chemical should be distributed fairly evenly throughout the bin or pit of root crops at the rate of about 10 pounds of paper or 25 pounds of dust to each 100 bushels of root crop.

The use of this chemical should be of value especially for the home storage of root crops as well as to market gardener and truck grower who stores in outdoor pits and cellars, and also to the canners and dehydrators.

Effective Use of DDT

In the Poultry House

While DDT offers little encouragement for the control of the common chicken mite, it has proven effective in the control of other insects that infest the poultry house. When 3 per cent DDT is added to to nests. When sprayed over the roosts and droppings it has proven effective against maggots.

For the control of flies and mosquitoes; a 5 per cent solution should be used during the height of the season. At other times a 21/2 per cent solution will prove satisfactory.

A 2 per cent suspension or dust with 5 per cent DDT powder will rid poultry of blue bugs.

of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—de not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whols body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backachs, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or biadder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

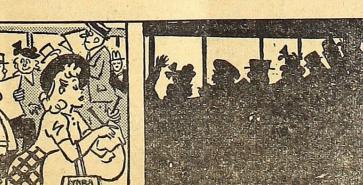

There should be no doubt that promps treatment is wiser than neglect. Uss Doon's Pills. Doon's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!
