Tawas Township Boy Receives Citation

Former machinest mate first class of the United States Naval Reserye, Herbert Louis Miller of McMechen, W. Va., received a Bronze Star Medal and a written citation from the United States Navy last week.

The citation was signed by J. F. Schafrath, rear admiral of the United States Navy, and reads as

"For meritorious achievement in connection with operations against the enemy in western Pacific waters, adjacent to the island of Honshu during the period July 1, 1945, through August 20, 1945, while serving as machinest mate first class in the repair force on board the USS Massaschusetts which was repeatedly engaged in actual combat with the enemy. When during the night of 3-4 August, 1945, while en route to a position from which a strike was to be made against the Jap home islands, a casualty occurred to a line shaft bearing necessitating securing one of the main engines, he scraped and fitted the bearing, sive temperatures and extremely power conditions in the strike on August 4, 1945, and contributed ma-terially toward keeping his ship in a high state of readiness for action. His professional skill and steadfast devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest tradition of the U. S. Naval service.

Tawas High Loses to Harrisville

Win From Sterling Team Tuesday

In an exciting ten inning battle last Friday afternoon at the Tawas City athletic Field the Tawas City High School baseball nine came out on the short end of a 4 to 3 count at the hands of Harrisville. Herriman, the big right hander for Tawas City dueled with O'Callahan, pitcher for Harrisville, they both allowed six hits and one well-set they lowed six hits and each walked two batters. Tawas City had several scoring opportunities but just couldn't send them across the plate. Landon led the Tawas City team with the stick by knocking out two sin-gles, while LeClair collected two hits for Harrisville. This was the second defeat of the season for Ta-was City, both being at the hands of Harrisville.

Tawas City collected a couple of runs in the third inning when the second baseman for Harrisville misseed Young's grounder, Montgomery walked and Youngs took third on a wild pitch, Look was safe when the first baseman bobbled his grounder and Youngs scored, Montgomery was thrown out at the plate. SENATORS URGE RULE CHANGE

WASHINGTON.—Ten senators— Democrats and Republicans-got together secretly the other day to study that most sacred of all sacred cows-senate rules. Behind their meeting was the conviction that diehard Dixie Democrats can block any measure they oppose via the filibuster, and that the majority must rule if democracy is to function in

The secret meeting took place after senators received a flood of letters both for and against the attempt by Wayne Morse, Oregon Republican, to secure passage of the anti-poll tax bill through unani-mous consent of the senate. Only senators on the floor at the time Morse attempted this strategy were Morse himself and Republican William Langer of North Dakota.

Liberal Democrat Warren Magnuson of Seattle, Wash., was presiding. Had he immediately asked senators if there was objection, there would have been none and the anti-poll tax bill would have passed. Morse had identified the bill only by number, so Magnuson did not at once recognize it. But, even if he had, probably he would have hesitated to pass a controversial bill without debate.

He was rescued from this dilem-ma by Senator Ernest MacFarland, Arizona Democrat, who quickly came to the floor and objected.

Since then, senate mail has been strong with letters both objecting to the Morse attempt as trickery and supporting Morse on the ground that this strategy was no more unfair than the filibuster.

Regardless of the above merits, a bipartisan group of ten senators has determined that senate rules must be changed. They seek to limit debate on any single bill to ten days, which would bring up the antipoll tax bill, already passed by the house, before the senate recesses. They are thinking also of bringing up legislation to create a permanent FEPC-provided they succeed in winning their amendment to the senate rules.

The ten senators are: Democrats -Pepper (Fla.) Magnuson (Wash.), Guffey (Pa.), Glen Taylor (Idaho), Huffman (Ohio), Kilgore (W. Va.), and Mead (N. Y.); Republicans-Ferguson (Mich.), Knowland (Cal.) and Capper (Kan.).

FINAL PEARL HARBOR REPORT Believe it or not, but the longdelayed reports on the Pearl Harbor investigation at last are being whipped into shape. They will not be published until around June, but here is the inside story on how the final verdict is shaping up.

The Democratic majority on the committee, led by Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, will absolve the two top military leaders in Washington-Gen. George Marshall and Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Harold R. Stark-of major responsibility. They will receive some minor rebukes, especially for poor co-ordination of army and navy intelligence; but nothing serious.

Democratic members of the committee also will absolve the state department of any blame and will let major blame rest where the original Roberts re-port contended it belonged—on the shoulders of army and navy commanders in the Hawaiian area-General Short and Admiral Kimmel.

Republican members of the committee will file a sharply worded minority report upholding Short and Kinmel and charging (1) that Short and Kimmel weren't sufficiently advised by Washington about intercepted Jap messages presaging the Pearl Harbor attack; and (2) that the two officers weren't provided with enough long - range patrol planes to spot the Jap fleet.

PATTON'S DIARY

The war's stormiest hero, Gen. George S. Patton, was the center of many a controversy before he died. But today the war department is still sitting on one of the hottest of Patton's hot potatoes—the general's secret diary.

Only a few people in the war department and the Patton family know it, but the famous general kept a careful diary all during the Normandy campaign, jotting down his frank comments about the Allies and even about his superior officers. Some of the comments just about burned up the page.

General Patton especially paid his compliments to the famous British field marshal, Montgomery, whom he criticized with almost the same bluntness as the soldier in the Sicilian hospital whom he slapped.

CHIPS FROM A GRANITE LIFE Most people have forgotten, but it was Harlan Stone to whom the nation owes a debt for picking J. Edgar Hoover as head of the FBI. When Stone became attorney general, he swept out Burns and selected a young career man, Hoover, to take his place. No one had ever heard of Hoover before. . . . Stone was kicked upstairs from the justicks of powder to use in his mining operations and had left them in the back seat of his sedan. The next morning he performed his usual

TUCSON, ARIZ.—Many of Arizona's hunters had a big season hunting wild pigs during the winter months just past, for the season was extended to 59 days by the state game and fish commission, the reason being that the javelina or peccary have been increasing rapidly in the last few years.

The Arizona species of the ani-mal is one of two varieties of pig-like animals ranging from Arizona and Texas to Paraguay. Some are slightly grizzled and have an indistinct white collar and are often called the collared peccary. The Arizona wildhog is often called the "couchajavalin." They are nocturnal and gregarious, says the diction-

But it's a great sport in these parts, where the javelina is well scattered. They are found in rock country on the edge of the desert around Tucson, and in mountain canyons which abound here. The animals usually run in small packs, are considered big game in this state, and as such may not be hunted with dogs.

May Use Bow and Arrow.

The law specifies that the limit is one animal of either sex per hunter for the season, and must be taken by a rifle fired from the shoulder and propelling a center-fire cartridge, or by bow and arrow provided the bow used has a pull of 50 pounds or more and the arrow is broadhead of one inch or more in

FITCHBURG, MASS.—It seems, said the Fitchburg police, that a gentleman from Ashby and a boilermaker-not otherwise identified -engaged in a dispute over the relative thickness of their respective skulls.

To settle the dispute, police added, they withdrew to opposite ends of a 30-foot room, then ran toward each other, crashing headon. It was sensational.

Apparently the Ashby man lost, for he required five stitches in his scalp. But he left the hospital after a few hours under his own power.

And that's what hard-headed citizens do when they meet in a tavern.

Half-Billion Acres Of U.S. Land Held By the Government

By WALTER A. SHEAD WNU Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON. - The United States chamber of commerce is polling its member chambers throughout the nation on the report of its natural resources department committee seeking amendments to the laws governing control of almost a half billion acres of public

The federal government now owns approximately a quarter of the land area of continental United States.

This huge acreage of public lands is controlled by the general land office of the department of interior. It is in two classes, 80 per cent being so-called public land, or public domain, and the balance is "acquired" land, purchased by, or deeded to the federal government from citizens, states or municipali-

There are 157,618,000 acres in national forests; 140,798,000 acres in grazing districts; 55,249,000 acres in Indian reservations; 13,585,000 acres in national parks; 7,481,000 acres in soil conservation; 1,326,000 acres are owned by the navy department, 19,355,000 by the war department and 2,760,000 by the fish and wildlife service.

According to the chamber, there have been repeated complaints concerning excessive withdrawals of these lands, unnecessary acquisitions, over-regulation, particularly on grazing and mineral rights.

Some of the amendments to public land laws which the U.S. chamber recommends is public hearings and adequate notice before further land is withdrawn and a time limit on temporary withdrawals;

That private ownership should be the ultimate objective of grazing lands subject to sound principles of conservation and protection of public interests, including reservation of rights to minerals and metals rights to minerals and metals, timber, water resources development and other potentialities not involving grazing, these grazing rights should be protected and preserved;

That the mineral leasing act of 1920 be further amended to remove all acreage limitations, or at least to grant expansion and to remove the limit to acreage held on a geological structure;

That royalty on all government leases be fixed at 121/2 per cent for leases heretofore and hereafter issued that are not on proven oil or gas structure; that to encourage exploration and development of deeper pools, a 12½ per cent royalty for all deeper discoveries in presently proven fields, the same apply to all leases in new zones;

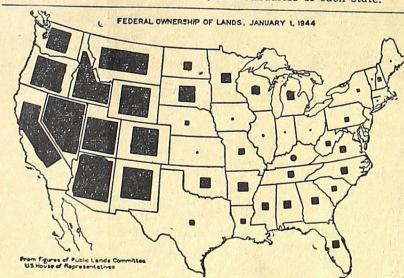

That the government either take the royalty in kind for sale or accept the market price of the royalty oil, gas or gasoline;

That the law grant the free right of assignment and relinquishment of government oil and gas leases with proper safeguards;

That all lands of the United States be registered with the interior department;

That surplus property act be amended to require disposal of all acquired lands not necessary and useful for a clearly defined governmental purpose.

In addition the committee recommends that the congress give the states statutory recognition to ownership and disposition of the shores and all lands beneath the tidewaters and other navigable waters within the boundaries of each state.

Denison Wastes No Time Converting Eisenhower Birthplace into Shrine

By WNU Features.

DENISON, TEXAS.—Birthplaces of great men are revered by the American people, and Denison lost no time in acquiring the house where General of the Armies Dwight D. Eisenhower was born. They expect Gen. Eisenhower to go down in history with Washington and Lee, and are prepared for it.

General Eisenhower was born & here October 14, 1890, in a neat white frame house a few yards from the railroad where his father worked.

It was in the best part of town then. Across the street was the mayor's home. Next door was the house of a prominent lumber dealer.

Both have burned since then, but the Eisenhower home still stands in the center of two large lots six blocks from the center of town.

A civic committee has bought the six-room one-and-a-half story home for $3,000 and will repair and re-

Denison Rarin' to Go After Business

DENISON, TEXAS. - Here is a town with a population of 19,000 that is looking forward. Denison is no war-boom camp. It processes cotton, makes mattresses, saws, cheese, candy and furniture, shells nuts, dehydrates eggs, kills cattle and dresses meat. The M. K. & T. railroad repair shops are still the largest source of income.

Lake Texoma, made possible by the Denison dam, impounds the waters of the Red river and Waushita river. The dam is three miles long and the largest earthen-rolled fill dam in the world. The project is a combination flood control and hydroelectric installation.

But Denison is not satisfied with all this. It is after more business, big business, big industry. Denison wants to manufacture fertilizer, plastic, synthetic rubber and chemicals, among other things. It has the raw materials, the electric power, and believes it can find or im-It is thought that the sun shining port the labor necessary. Production costs in Denison will be lower than in crowded cities, it believes. The decentralization of industry is coming, and when it comes Denison wants a segment of it to come where owners and laborers will be

CAP HELPING AIR FORCE CURE JOBS

The Civil Air patrol is co-operating with the air forces in a nationwide program to organize AAF vets in placements in all types of civilian jobs requiring skills similar to those soldiers used while in service.

Jobs for air force vets do not necessarily center on aviation work. Many trained mechanics can work on other engines, while electricians and radio men have skills that may be turned to many fields. In Denver alone the CAP has placed over 60 AAF vets in jobs.

TO MAKE MOVIE

How a boy of 13 or younger can be taught to fly is the theme of a motion picture to be produced by a group of veterans who have set up in the movie business. Star of the picture will be 13-year-old Marvin Whiteman Jr., who recently completed 61 hours at the controls of his father's Ryan S-T. Young Whiteman began taking lessons at the age of eight. Marvin's sister, 11-year-old Lynn Carol, is also learning to fly.

SURPLUS PLANES

Over 300 surplus Fairchild PT-23s were sold in the first 15 days they were put on sale at fixed prices ranging from $590 to $1,275, the war assets administration has reported. There are more than 500 PT-23s in surplus stocks still, most of them at Cape Girardeau and Union City. Surplus AT-11 Beech twin-engine aircraft, formerly sold on the basis of allocations to priority holders, now can be bought directly from sales-storage depots without an allocation.

Legs and Inflation

Milady's legs have a bearing on inflation, reconversion, prosperity and economics. Those "gams," it seems, are definitely related to the state of the union.

By being a little skimpy on clothes a girl may be helping America over the crest and hastening a more stable economic order. The less she wears the more she may be lessening the burdens of the President, his cabinet, OPA, the Democratic National committee and perhaps the Big Three.

All of which is apparent from the news that the subject of one inch more or less of the female knee has been causing huddles and debates in Washington. Whether or not to lengthen skirts has been agitating the Civilian Price Control administration and its advisory committees no end.

The advisory committee have suggested that Washington permit skirts to be an inch longer, but CPA has been extra cautious. Even a half inch more of leg may mean millions of yards of skirt material. Hence the committee sessions, administration | conferences, policy makers' huddles and frantic debates among national leaders, lobbyists, congressmen, etc.

President Truman's "Hold the Line!" ultimatum may be taken as applying to the kneecap of American womanhood. (Harry has not personally made any public announcement of his convictions on knees. But unofficially he is said to believe them a good thing for the nation.—Ed. note.)

But the news that they figure in OPA ceilings, inflation problems, etc., and that OPA and CPA are in fact right in milady's boudoir, and that Chet Bowles thinks the legs of our women are definitely involved in the war to stop runaway inflation comes as news to most people.

The United States Agricultural Department's Division of Marketing and Transportation Research incidentally reports that the length of skirts is a barometer for depressions and prosperity. Possibly along

The state of New York now has a law requiring that all new barbers take out a license. To get it they must submit two photographs, evidence of good moral character, a certificate of health and evidence of an elementary education. We await the first revocation for careless shaving. Or taking too sharp a turn around the ears.

Yale is opening courses in civilization. The question whether "Boola Boola" is a jungle cry will be gone into thoroughly.

RUSSIAN LABOR NOT ALLOWED TO ORGANIZE

I CANNOT FATHOM the reasoning of those leaders of labor who father the demands of the workers for increased wages, changes in working conditions, insistence on seniority regardless of merit; who foment strikes to enforce the demands they create, and go so far as to defy government, and then endorse and approve communism. Many of those labor leaders are loud in their approval of the dictatorial government of Russia, and do all they can to install the same system of government in this country. In Russia that system of government does not tolerate such activities as these men follow in America. The conditions that labor, under the leadership of those admiring communists, refuse to consider in this country, are all, and more, than the established practices under the Russian dictatorship.

Labor in this country objects to and, as a rule, refuses to accept the piece work system. The poor worker must be paid regardless of his ability to produce. The capable worker is encouraged to slow down on production to meet the speed of the sloth.

In Russia the worker is paid by the piece. He is also assigned a stint, and failure to meet that assigned quantity and quality of production calls for a fine or imprisonment. Workers are paid a bonus for exceeding the assigned stint, and when they do meet it the stint is increased.

Superintendents of governmentowned and operated plants are paid high salaries; provided with fine homes, equipped with all modern conveniences, and are paid a bonus for forcing increased production in the plant by driving the workers.

WAGES OF ALL WORKERS FIXED BY GOVERNMENT

THE RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT fixes the wages of all workers. It designates the hours, the place of employment, and all working conditions. Labor unions, or labor leaders, as we know them, are not tolerated. In Russia the worker is a serf. He is not a free man.

If that is what the Russian people want we can have no reasonable objection, but why do some labor leaders in America advocate the Russian system for this country? For us to adopt the Russian system of government would mean the labor leader would be out of a job, and the worker would have no voice in the matter of hours, wages, working conditions or place of employment. Individually or collectively he would have nothing to say. He would do just as he was told, or else.

No, I cannot fathom the reasoning of the labor leader who advocates the communistic system for Amer-

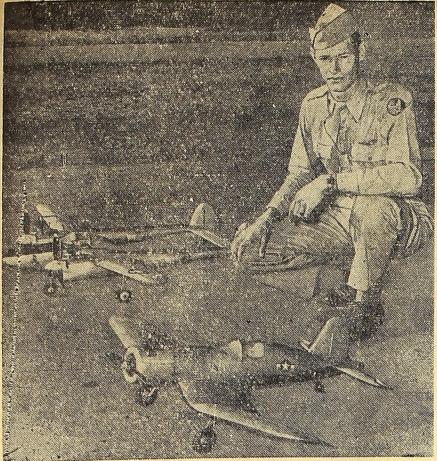

It is quite possible that those communistically inclined labor leaders are phonies. It may be they are serving a foreign master as fifth columnists, wolves in sheep's clothing, a master whose every practice and precept is diametrically opposed to what the American worker considers his best interest. If that is true why does organized labor permit them to promote their diabolical schemes under the banner of American labor? It might be well for labor to do some house cleaning if it is to further its own interest, and retain the respect of the American public. Something of the same thing can apply to our federal government.

> SOME OF THE industrial wage and hour disputes have been settled for a time. There will be a constant stream of others. Whatever the result it is only temporary. No basis on which wages and hours will be adjusted has been arrived at. Increased wages today but means new demands for tomorrow, and that will continue until there is some recognized method of determining the workers' share in production returns. It is the consumer, who is never consulted, who must pay the price in increased costs of commodities.

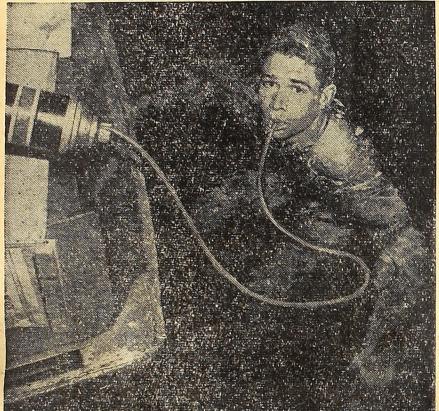

GOVERNMENT has become so complicated that none of those we employ to operate the machine can know all of its parts. In that machine are many needless cogs that perform no function.

While we and our dealers would like to tell you that this means an immediate end to the shortage of service parts and machines, it is more accurate to say that it means the beginning of the end of it. If illness or bad weather delays you seriously in the Spring, you know how much it throws you off your schedule. The strike has thrown our schedules off balance, too. There are many "chores" we must do before new machines reach you.

Material shortages

The preliminary chores of getting our plants back into shape for full production are finished. But disturbances in other industries and resulting material shortages may affect our plans. Light gauge steel sheets, brass and copper, fractional horse power motors, and many other items are all very short. The coal situation may also prove serious—we hope not.

Refilling the well

Both our dealers and our branches have run dry on parts and new machines. So the biggest chore is to get their working stocks back to normal. It will take time to fill the pipeline to dealers-just as it takes time for you to refill a well or cistern after it has run dry.

Stock and display rooms of our dealers represent not one, but ten thousand reservoirs which must be refilled. The most heroic proyour local dealer can expect only a small number of parts and machines at a time. Since we must play fair with all our customers, there will be a sprinkle of parts and machines all over the country-not a downpour in any one

At the start of the strike we had on hand at all our factories and branches just 837 tractors of all kinds—less than two days' production-and 405 of these were not completed. Many of those on hand had one or more important parts missing-principally radiator cores. Most of the rest represented the normal daily "float" between the end of the assembly line and the shipping platform. Naturally no tractors were made during the strike.

Hand Duster

A good hand duster or sprayer will give effective control of insects and plant diseases. Only in large gardens is power equipment economical, whether for cultivation, spraying, or dusting. The duster or sprayer should be equipped with an extension and an angle nozzle or blower, to make it easy to hit the underside of the leaves, where many insects do most of their feeding.

One time there were two farmers

One day Jake stopped over at Bill's farm. "Got a great plan to save money this winter," he said. "I'm mixin' a little sawdust with the feed. Hoss don't notice the difference."

Around Christmas they met again. "Say," Jake grinned, "you oughta try my system. Got the nag eatin' half sawdust an' half grain now. It's a lot cheaper."

Bill wasn't so sure. "B'lieve I'll stick to oats."

Along about spring plowing time Jake came over to Bill's place, looking kind of glum.

"What's wrong?" asked Bill. "Isn't your moneysavin' idea workin'?"

"Oh, it worked fine," Jake said. "Had him trained so he was eatin' nothin' but sawdust. Only this mornin' the ornery cuss fell down an' wasn't able to get up. How 'bout lettin' me hire your hoss for my plowin'?"

HERE'S a big "plowing" job ahead if Michigan Bell is to expand and improve telephone service and supply it to all who are waiting. It can't be done on sawdust. Here is why. Thousands of thrifty people have their savings invested in Bell System securities. Their money makes good telephone service possible. In fact, Michigan Bell's 5-year $150,000,000 expansion and improvement program will be financed largely by these and other investors. And that program will provide more and better telephone service for you.

So you see, our earnings are important all around. And telephone rates - such a small part of your monthly budget - must be maintained at a level which will keep our earnings adequate. Otherwise, investors would not put their money into the telephone business, and the future quality and extent of your telephone service would suffer.

We believe our customers want good telephone service, even if it costs a trifle more than

Technical improvements over the years have brought rates for good service down and have kept them down in the face of rising costs. But if the recent rapid rise in costs continues, rate increases may become necessary. In any event, Michigan Bell wants rates no higher - and no lower - than necessary to insure good telephone service.

Richard Powell ~ Shooting AN INNER SANCTUM MYSTERY STARRING ARAB AND ANDY BLAKE WAU FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lt. Andy Blake and his wife, Arab, discovered evidence of a spy ring headed by a Mr. Jones. Followed to Andy's house by Jones' gang, Arab was taken prisoner, but Andy, who they believed dead, was left behind. Andy reported to the army and then set out for a service station operated by the gang. He took the operator prisoner and called Intelligence. Before help could arrive, two members of the gang drove up and took Andy with them. When they got to the seashore, Andy offered to run the boat to the island hangout. Before they got to the island, Andy managed to upset the boat and to swim to the island. Both men, unable to swim, were drowned.

CHAPTER XV

Or I could go down to the boathouse. The garvey was probably there, but I didn't know how to start a marine engine-or any other, for that matter. It's all I can do to start an electric razor. If I had an arsenal I couldn't handle it. Except maybe a seventy-five. Perhaps I could remember enough of my Field Artillery to fire that. Yes, sir, if I could only find a seventy-five nobody was using and emplace it right here and let them have it over open sights, everything would be jake.

I got up disgustedly. The dumbest dogface from a replacement training center would be better equipped for the job than I. He would have got at it sooner, too. He would pick up a hunk of driftwood and walk into the house and start batting people over the head. It wasn't a bad

I slipped down the dune and crept toward the house, keeping in the shadow of the pilings. My toes buckled against a nice hunk of driftwood. It was baseball-bat size and had some nasty-looking nails at one end. I took it along. The concrete building loomed up over my head. I scrambled across the pilings and examined the place. The locked door was faced with sheet iron and it had no windows. Up near the roof, however, perhaps twelve feet from sand level, were slots in the concrete: two on each side of the building. The place looked like an heirloom dating back to Prohibition. You could store a lot of Scotch inside, and if you had a rifle you could make hijackers think bathtub gin was healthier.

When I pressed my ear against the door I picked up a faint hum and a ticklish vibration. Five would get you ten it was a dynamo; the place had to provide its own power. I bruised my shoulder against the door, but it wouldn't budge. Now I would never find out whether or not you needed a B.S. in Electrical Engineering to wreck a dynamo.

I took a few practice strokes with the hunk of driftwood. The followthrough wasn't perfect, but that didn't matter. It wasn't a case of trying to break eighty. Just heads.

I crept around a corner of the house and spotted a man sitting on the back steps. He wasn't looking toward me. I walked up quietly. He wasn't anybody I knew, so I turned the rusty nails away before letting him have it on the back of the head. He dove into the sand face first. I dragged him into the shadow of the steps. He seemed to be alive but he would need more than aspirin before he would want to take an interest in things. I switched a Luger from his pocket to mine, hoping that it wouldn't start shooting holes in my leg, and then padded into the house. I inched along the wall and found a door. It wasn't going to be fun to take a room-by-room census, but it had to be done. The knob turned easily. I slipped inside, waited. Somebody was breathing. Once before I had waited in a dark room while the fat man breathed near by. The memory of it made the back of my neck prickle. I couldn't tell whether or not the breathing sounds were like those the fat man had made. I reached forward, touched a bed. I lifted the hunk of driftwood, stretched out my hand farther . . . farther . . A chill skated up my arm. My fingers touched a slender body. It was half naked and it tried to move away from my fingers. A girl's voice said wearily, "Please don't, please don't, please don't, please . . ." The sound droned on as if a worn needle had stuck on a very old phonograph record.

My throat felt sandy. "Arab?" I whispered. "Arab?" "They haven't brought her back yet, they haven't brought her back yet, they-" I shook the slim bare shoulders.

"Stop it. I'm not going to hurt you. I want to help. But you'll have to tell me a few things first." "We've been all over it before," she said fretfully. "I didn't see anything from my window except some people in that house giving each other a Nazi salute and Joey and Mrs. Fielding were there and I don't know anything more and I've told you and told you I'd forget it if you let | call her Arab. Did you say she's me go."

"Paula."

"Yes?" "You are Paula Thompson, aren't you? You lived in Mrs. Fielding's house? On the second floor?"

"You know that, you're just trying to drive me crazy," she sobbed. "And I get scared talking this way in the dark, You're going to hurt might be in it. Or upstairs."

"Paula, I'm your friend. I'm opened it. Whispers still crept along the walls. "Get going, Paula. And you out of—"

She began crying quietly and repeating, "It's just another trick, it's just another trick . . .'

I ran my fingers down her arm and located a strap at her wrist. Below it her fingers were cold. The strap held her wrist to the bed frame. I found the buckle, unfastened it, and reached across to free her other arm. A sharp intake of breath cut off her sobbing. I couldn't see her but I knew she was lying there rigidly, eyes dilated, trying to understand. A small icy hand touched my undershirt, crept up over my chin and face and hair.

"I . . . don't . . . know . . . you," she whispered. For the first time there was hope in her voice.

"Of course you don't. Now you've got to answer some questions for me, and then you're leaving."
"You won't turn on the light, will you?" she gasped. "A minute ago I was afraid of the dark . . . but now I . . . I . . .

There was a blanket at the foot of the bed. I yanked it loose and tossed it around her. "Everything's clear on the first floor," I said. "Go quietly downstairs and out the back. Don't worry about the man beside the steps. He won't bother you. Can you swim a long way? Or start a motorboat?"

"Well, then, run down to the inlet. Dig a hole in the sand and wrap yourself in the blanket and crawl in and sprinkle sand all over yourself. Don't move unless you see a Coast Guard cutter in the inlet. Know what a cutter looks like?"

"Oh, yes. Once they made me stand behind the curtains and they pointed out a cutter to me and laughed and then they-"

She was getting choked up again, and I broke in, "If you see a cutter near enough, scream like hell. If it gets daylight, make sure you're well covered. And don't worry about what may happen here. All I want you to do is get away safely. Got

"What about you?" "I'll make out. How many people are here right now?" "Joey and Mr. Jones, and and Bill . . . Something stirred in my memory. "Bill who? McAdams?"

"Yes." "The guy you were supposed to have eloped with?"

"Yes. But I didn't, really I didn't! Why, I didn't love him at all! I thought we were just having friendly dates and I phoned him about the Nazi meeting and . . . and he was terrible and—"

"He made you call up the next morning and tell the girls you had eloped, didn't he?"

"Yes, and all the time I was right in that house next door where the fat man lived. They stood around me and made me call. Then the next day they brought me here. They were going to make me write letters if anybody got suspicious of what had become of me. It was awful! And they—''

"Take it easy. Bill McAdams is the one I clubbed as I came in. Who else is here?" "That's all the men. And Mrs. Fielding and a slender girl with shoulder-length blonde hair. They your wife?" "Yes. Have they . . . well . . . is

"O. K." I went to the door and

The blanket rustled and a hand touched my arm and the stairs be-gan mewing under her feet. There was no change in the whispers. I waited a few minutes until I was sure that she was out of the house. I slipped down the hall, counting doors. One . . . two . . . I eased it open a crack, and looked in. A hooded desk lamp was lighted, but no one was in the room.

This was it. This was the fat man's Berchtesgaden. This was where he sat like a plump white toadstool brewing poison. I knew I ought to get on with the job of batting people over the head, but the room was too fascinating to leave. I wanted a closer look at the filing cases and huge maps and the shortwave transmitter studded with gleaming knobs and dials. I walked in and closed the door.

Somewhere in the big sweating country behind me people had been talking. Talking proudly of "my son" and "my war work." Some of the words had echoed from one person to another until they became whispers scurrying through this gray house. A fat man had moved slowly to a filing cabinet and pulled out fat envelopes marked with divisional insignia. He had studied what the contents of the envelopes told him of the state of training, strength and location of the divisions.

Then he had moved little flags on a wall map: to a maneuver area, to a staging area, to an overseas base. Or he had pulled out an envelope marked B-17 and had added the fact that they had started to come off the line with twin stingers in the tail.

There were plenty of gaps in his collection. I checked a subject on which I had some inside information, and found that he was far behind the parade. That wasn't much comfort. Even when he only had one extra fact, it was one too many.

It seemed like a good idea to mess up his collection as much as possible, just in case anything went wrong with my plans. I let the files alone. It would take hours to open every cabinet and destroy the contents. The pins on the n. ip were another matter. He might not have a small scale duplicate, and it would take days of studying the filed material to replace the pins properly. I swept my hand over the big map. The pins bent like tiny bows, leaped free. With them fluttered small paper bags lettered with the numerals of divisions and airplane

The maps were clean. Too clean. I couldn't resist a temptation. I picked up the Fifth Air Force and First Armored and the Eighty-second Air-borne and a couple of hot infantry divisions, and landed a task force in Berlin.

In a glass case in a corner were four rifles, a shot-gun, a Tommy gun, several revolvers, and even a hand grenade. I let them alone, My Table of Basic Allowances called for one club, and I was already overequipped with a Luger I would never be able to handle.

The gleaming panel of the shortwave transmitter deserved some attention, though. I looked behind the panel and selected the biggest tube I could find: one which bulged with cathode and grid and anode. I decided against breaking it because it might explode too loudly. Instead of that, I dropped it in the wastebasket and covered it with papers. It was only a start, anyway. By the time I finished with the shortwave set, the only way it would ever reach Deutschlandsender would be by parcel post. I stretched out a hand toward the wiring . . . then got an idea which wiped the radio from my thoughts. I raised the blackout curtain of one seaward window.

I swung the lamp around on the desk so that its light glared directly out to sea. There's one code signal everybody knows. I blinked it on the desk lamp. Dot-dot-dot-dash. Dot-

A voice jeered, "That's illegal, Jack. Wanna get us fined?"

I swung around, clawing for the Luger. I might just as well have tried to coax a live crab from my pants pocket. Joey Raeder and the fat man stood in the doorway, watching with polite interest. A couple of automatics were looking my way, too. I froze.

I glanced at the hunk of driftwood, three feet away on a table. If it had been in my hand I could have thrown it. I said, "That sporting instinct of yours will get you booted out of the Herrenvolk."

Joey said, "The guy asked for it, Chief, so-'

"Wait," the fat man said. "But, Chief-"

"Lower the window shade, Joey. And you"—the blind glasses glared at me-"bring your right hand out of your pocket slowly and clasp both hands behind your head."

I obeyed. There wasn't anything to be gained by seeing if I could jump ten feet in less time than a trigger finger could move a quarter inch. Joey detoured around me and pulled down the shade. Then he came up behind me and carefully worked the gun out of my pocket.

Cottons Steal the Spotlight For Cool-as-a-Breeze Fashions

By Ertta Haley

EEPING cool is the first consideration for summer clothes. The other consideration, which in the past has too often been neglected, is style or smartness.

Style is difficult to achieve in a summery dress because no matter how lovely, it can take on the appearance of a rumpled, dowdy thing within an hour after you've put it on, simply because the weather takes all the starch out of you and your dress.

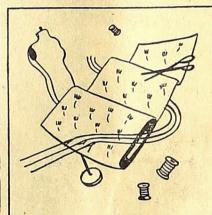

Because it is difficult to keep cool and at the same time look wellgroomed, I'd suggest you concentrate on the simpler fashions for summer. Pleats are very nice, but they're hard to keep well-pressed when the temperature's soaring. Ruffles may look very nice on a blouse for a dressy suit, but they wilt easily when you're perspir-

All this is said to suggest you consider the choice of a summer afternoon dress carefully. Look at the work of the country's best designers and you will always see simplicity the basic note, the guiding factor in a dress, suit or coat.

Another factor that has an important bearing on your style is the fabric you use. You would hardly consider a waffle weave for a ruffled effect, nor would you consider the cool but weighty mesh prints for lots of furbelows on a dress.

If you want to look cool and collected, then you'll choose your print and color with a lot of care. Unless you want to appear very gay, don't buy red unless it's relieved by plenty of white or neutral. Nor do I suggest you choose a very warm shade, like orange or yelloworange.

Take your pick from the pale yellow tints or cool colors like green, blue and violet. Brown and black with touches of white or neutral are also very attractive. White is difficult to keep clean in some sec-any part of sewing if you work as a professional. Naturally this will permit no slip-shod cutting or careless fitting. If you are working very carefully and with fabric which is quite expensive, it may be best to cut and fit your pattern of inexpensive unbleached muslin. This can be run together on a machine with long stitches - just well enough to hold it through a good fitting, and then ripped and used as the pattern. The easiest way of keeping the material from which you are cutting in a straight line and even fold is to tack it lightly on your working table. Clerks try to keep material straight when they cut it for you, but some fabrics are so slippery, this is impossible. It is better to take a little time to get it in

Tailored Interest

The skirt of topaz brown with a flat-seamed center panel is teamed with a taffy gabardine jacket to make this a smart selection from Molly's collection. Notice the fine interest in detail and careful tailoring.

darts are mighty important in making the garment fit you. The neckline may require more than one or two darts to make it fit snugly. The darts at the waistline may have to be a little smaller than shown in the pattern. Perhaps the underarm darts should be just a little deeper to give you good line. All of these little things can be determined by basting first, then fitting.

A recent bit of news suggested that we women were spreading across the hips much more since the war than our designers anticipated. And, they tell us, that does not apply only to the older women, but to the teen-aged youngsters as well.

Because the skirt fit is so important it's a good idea to baste the entire skirt in place before attempting any sewing. Slip the garment on, and if the seam allowance has been too generous, you can always let it out. If the garment is too snug, it may be necessary to place Remember there's nothing hard panels at the sides to give more room. At any rate, it's better to know just what the score is before you put in those hard-to-rip stitches. Don't feel that just because you're sewing on cotton that you can afford to be careless. Whereas cotton used to be an inexpensive material before the war, it is anything but that now. A good piece of material deserves just as good treatment as you can give it.

Care of Fabrics

For washing woolen garments use a neutral soap. Soaps with alkali have a harmful effect on woolen garments. Use as little friction as possible when wash ing, as it may ruin the fibers. Squeezing gently in lukewarm suds is the best method. Hang the garment where air circulates freely and is neither too hot nor

These same precautions are necessary for washing silk. To prevent yellowing, hang silk in the shade.

Cotton and linen wash easily, although alkali cleaning agents should be used carefully. Sunshine tends to whiten both of these fabrics and they can withstand the higher temperatures fairly easy in washing. Soft water and mild soap are the essentials for washing rayons. Two sudsings should be used if necessary. The fabric should not be rubbed or twisted. Ironing with just warm heat is very impor-

Bemberg fabrics are handled like silk, wrapped in a towel and ironed with just a warm iron.

Spring Fashion Notes

Button interest is paramount for summer clothes. A simple cotton dress receives elegance from rich, frosty white buttons or jet black

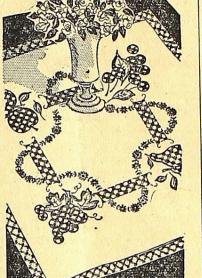

Black skirts with pink blouses make nice dress-up costumes, that are bound to be arresting. Don't forget black poplin or linen-like fabrics with white embroidered touches for dressy and smart suits.

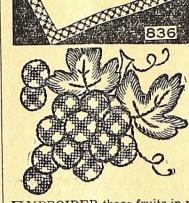

Skirts of cocoa or blue chambray are nice business like affairs when teamed with yellow or pink blouses. Easy to keep looking neat, too.

You'll be seeing more frills and furbelows on women's clothing now that some Civilian Production administration controls have been rescinded. The main features restored by this are french cuffs, pocket flaps and all types of belts.

3-Ton Candle Expected To Last 1.800 Years

As a memorial to Enrico Caruso, the largest candle in history was made in New York in 1924 and set up in Naples, but it is now in Rome, where it was sent for safekeeping when Italy entered the war, says Collier's.

Requiring the work of five men for four months, this candle is 18 feet in height, 7 feet in circumference, weighs 3 tons and cost about $5,000. Lighted for 24 hours on every All Souls' Day, it is expected to last at least 1,800 years.

One of the oldest houses in the world still in possession of the original owning family is the ancestral seat of the Oglanders in the vii-lage of Nunwell on the Isle of Wight, a few miles off the south coast of England.

This house has been occupied successively by 27 generations of this family since it was built by Roger Oglander soon after he came over from Normandy with William the Conqueror in 1066.

HE argument broke into a rash concerning the easiest position to play on a baseball team. We put the debate up to Joe McCarthy, who knows what it is all about, no matter what the position might happen to but do I still get paid on the first and fifteenth for playing third?' "

We accepted Manager McCarthy's challenge and soon lined up the viewpoints of all the earnest athletes we could corral. In the concensus that followed, the catching assignment was rated the toughest by an extensive margin. What about the pitcher? The pitcher only works every fourth or fifth day, and too often only toils four or five innings. But the catcher, the better catchers, get few vacations. You might talk to Bill Dickey some time about this and discover the beatings they take around the plate.

Catching a hundred ball games a year is harder work than playing any other position for three hundred games. All of which leads up to the easiest or softest job on the team. This is where the argument started.

'Hot Corner' Easiest

We talked with the Cardinals, Yankees, Red Sox, Tigers, Indians, and several others about the easiest position to play. From the start the players began voting for third and first base. The consensus finally settled on third base.

As one veteran expressed it-"I'll tell you about playing third base. On a general average when they slap one at you, it is either a hit or an out-but nearly always a hit if you don't handle it. Yes, there are bunts to cover, but as a percentage proposition, third basemen get few errors thrown into their records. It always happens in a hurry at third base and it is all different at short and second. They have room enough and time enough to move around. The third baseman deesn't."

The next soft job consensus went to first base. But a first baseman is supposed to be one of the best hitters on the club. Charley Comiskey was the first of all the first basemen who left the safety of the bag to cut down a few drives slashed towards right field. That, 50 years ago, was a daring innovation. It remained for Hal Chase to prove how an artist could handle first. But Hal was too great an artist for his own good along certain devious lines we won't discuss here.

Now here is a peculiar angle. has known more great first basemen and more great second basemen than it has ever known shortstops and third base-

Just how can you explain this? At first base we have had stars from the days of Fred Tenney on, through Frank Chance, Stuffy Mo-Innis, Hal Chase, George Sisler, Len Gehrig, and Bill Terry.

Many Stars at Second

Second has the longest parade of stars - Lajoie, Collins, Evers, Frisch, Hornsby, Gordon, Doerr. But outside of the enduring Honus Wagner, shortstop has given the game few outstanding names. There have been such good ones as Bancroft, Jackson, Jennings, Tinker, Long, Wallace-but only a limited list ranged below Wagner's fame.

Third base, voted as the easiest job on the club to hold, should be arrayed and bedecked with great names. The list of good ones is fairly long. The list of great ones very scant. Jimmy Collins, Pie Traynor, Art Devlin, Heinie Groh, Red Rolfe, Bill Bradley, these were among the best.

UNSCRUPULOUS

WILL YOU BE

SURE

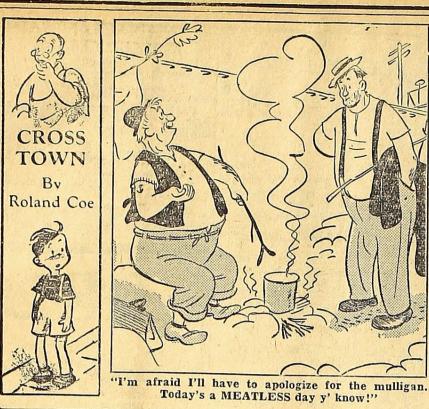

In order to ward off indignant and protesting letters we'll admit in advance that many good names have been left off the list, due mainly to a zigzag memory.

The tough spot and the most important spot on the infield is the combination of short and second. Two fast men here can take pretty good care of the infield, especially those of the Rizzuto-Gordon and the Pesky-Doerr type, not to overlook Marion and his mate on the Cardinals. Third base may be the "hot corner" but it also requires less terrain to patrol.

No Room for Alibis

The box score is a national institution that has been attracting more and more popular interest in the United States for 70 years. It carries compact news to countless millions from the smaller hamlets on to the greater cities and the smaller hamlets furnish most of the stars who gather their fame in big league centers. Here it is again with a complete record of runs, hits, errors, strikeouts, stolen bases. It offers no space for alibis or excuses.

Soil Plans Should Cover Several Years

Fertilize to Replace Lost Organic Matter

Stressing that there are no "short cuts" to producing high yields on poor, run-down, overcropped land, Prof. A. L. Lang of the agronomy department, University of Illinois, advised farmers to let soil tests guide their soil improvement and fertilizer program.

"When soil tests show strong acidity and a need for limestone, they also indicate a low state of organic matter," he pointed out. soils are low in organic matter, they are usually in a state of poor tilth, lack nitrogen and have insufficient water holding capacity. amount of mineral fertilizers cannot be expected to economically raise corn and other grain crops yields until the lime, organic matter and nitrogen requirements of the soil are met.'

Lang urged farmers to apply limestone, phosphorus and potash fertilizers for the legume sod crops in accordance with the needs of the land as indicated by chemical tests.

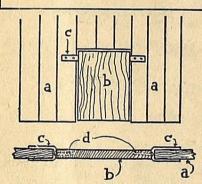

Phosphate being mined for inclusion in mixed fertilizer.

Then, he added, grow maximum legume hay crops, either plowing them back into the soil green or as animal manure.

'The best method is to plan a business-like, systematic program or action on the farm that will over a period of years return the land to its native state of high and per-manent productivity," Lang stated. On highly productive soil, mixed fertilizer of the proper grade and properly applied may supply eco-nomically a portion of the main-tenance rations and in addition give that extra "umph" so often needed during the early stages of growth, he said. Quickly available plant foods applied near the seed of crops at planting time help overcome many external handicaps such as insect damage, weed competition and unfavorable weather conditions, he concluded.

Clipping Dairy Cows Insures Milk Quality

A few minutes spent clipping the cow's belly, udder, flanks and tail will not only save time of brushing and washing them but will greatly reduce the bacteria count, according to tests conducted at Michigan State college. It was found that the count was two to four times higher in the case of milk from unclipped cows than from those which had been properly clipped.

Farm Doors Opened

By Automatic Control Many automatic controls are being applied to reduce the man-hours of labor on the farm. One of the newest is an adaption of the proximity control, so sensitive to any object which comes near, it automatically throws a switch to open gates when cows gather before milking time. The Minneapolis-Honeywell device is worked in conjunction with an automatic timer, thus preventing gate opening too soon.
