few years has been developing rap-idly in all directions, the largest amount of activity in sections of the city not reached by the water mains has been in this area. A large num-ber of cabins and home sites have been developed and substantial bus-iness enterprises have been estab-lished in the section which will be serviced by the extension.

With the opening of the two Crock-er subdivisions a large amount of property has been sold to home seekers, who await only material to build new homes. Considerable difficulty has been experienced in securing material for this project on account of strikes and other causes, but it is thought that the contract will be completed in from 60 to 90 days.

Summing up the situation on the social security front, Miss Paul said that there is one serious cause of concern to the Board's field officers: some people do not know their rights under the old-age and survivors in-surance program, and so may lose some benefits through failure to act the program failure to act some program, and so may tost surance program, and so may tost some benefits through failure to act at the right time. To correct this she issued the following advice: "Whenever a person, who has worked at any time in a job covered by the at any come and find out how to protect his benefit rights, even though he does not plan to retire. Whenever a worker dies, after working for some period in jobs covered by the law, some member of his family should com-municate promptly with the nearest office of the Social Security Board. This is the only way to make sure that no benefits are lost.

YOUTHFUL ARTISTS

Over 1,200 Pieces Shown In Scholastic Art Exhibit

By WNU Features

PITTSBURGH - Students ranging from seventh grade to senior year in high school submitted entries in the national scholastic art awards exhibit recently held here. Youthful artists from every state in the Union sent in approximately 100,000 paintings and sketches, and over 1,200 pieces were put on exhibition.

An annual event, the display was held in the fine arts gallery at Carnegie institute. Seventy seniors were given scholarships to leading American art schools, and more than 600 awards were made.

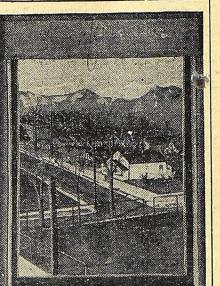

Established artists and art educators who saw the exhibit reported that it showed abundant talent. Among the 31 judges were such eminent artists as Louis Slobodkin, sculptor and illustrator; Georges Schreiber, whose works hang in the Metropolitan, Whitney, and other galleries; Homer Saint Gaudens, director of fine arts at Carnegie institute, and Royal Farnum of the Rhode Island school of design. Artists Painted Surroundings.

One of the typical talented students was Moise Smith, 17, whose portfolio of paintings won him a scholarship to Carnegie institute of technology upon his graduation from Cass technical high school, Detroit. In addition, he won first prize in oils and a Collier's magazine award of $100.

The young artists displayed an acute awareness of the details of their surroundings and included scenes of school and community life. Sam Sarkisian, 18, of Cleveland, Ohio, displayed a pencil drawing of students in a drug store complete with juke box. The artist even included the bored reaction of the soda-jerker as he watched a couple jitterbug.

Other artists such as Rose A. Greco of Endicott, N. Y., and Doris Friedrich, Denver, painted their physical surroundings-an abandoned log farm house and a suburban Colorado street scene through a window.

The scholastic art awards program began 19 years ago and is sponsored by Scholastic Arts magazine. It has met with wholehearted co-operation of educators and art schools and has grown into the largest competition of its kind in the world.

Also all ships damaged, with the single exception of the Independence, towed away and anchored far out in the lagoon, likely could have pulled away under their own steam, had they been manned with crews.

Study Effects.

In the meantime, Bikini lagoon has been turned into a vast laboratory of science, chief interest being the effect of the bomb and its subsequent radiological rays upon the live animals placed aboard the ships at various locations likely to be occupied by the men aboard. Amazingly, only about 10 per cent of the animals were killed by the force of the blast. Some are burned and sick and others may become ill intense heat will generate steam in from effects of radioactivity. As a matter of fact, a few already have expend a part of its energy in a been destroyed by medical doctors, who are studying this phase of and vapor shooting into the air. Persons or animals which receive these powerful rays into their systems are variously affected and the boarding teams upon these ships are preceded by a trained man carrying a "Geiger counter," a small box-like apparatus which registers radioactivity by a ticking noise.

Estimate Losses. et such as those which con posed the target fleet would normally carry approximately 30,000 men. It is reasonable to assume then that approximately 10 per cent, or 3,000 men, would have been killed by the atomic bomb blast and that more would have been injured by radioactivity. Whether much of the damage to ships caused by subsequent fires aboard could have been averted had crews been aboard is a moot question. Some ships captains de clare that damage would have been much less had the ship fire-fighting equipment been brought into play, and this seems reasonable in that most of the loss on the Independence was due to fire and explosion

WASHINGTON .- Juciest gravy in the current tax legislation is the continuance of the carry-back of unused excess profits credit. The senate finance committee, always friendly to big business, not only knocked out the excess profits tax last year, but retained carry-back refunds. This permits corporations whose current earnings do not proportionately match their 1936-1939 earnings, to claim adjustments in their 1946 tax payments. This is one reason some firms didn't worry too much about prolonged strikes. General Motors alone will probably hit the treasury for a refund of 80 million dollars. To head off this drain on the treasury, Rep. Cleveland Bailey of Clarksburg, W. Va., Democrat, introduced a bill last January to repeal the carryback provisions. On January 23, the house ways and means committee asked the treasury for a report.

Recently impatient Rep. Wilbur Mills of Arkansas, Democrat, proposed that congress act independently, without waiting for the treasury report. He pointed out that large credits can be claimed by corporations which actually make more money this year than they did in any of the years from 1936 to 1939, simply because their capital investment is now larger.

Mills charged that many large corporations are taking advantage of this loophole, and as a result the taxpayer foots the bill for the expansion of private industries. He also listed a long series of "abuses and transactions which will no doubt be resorted to in order to create carry-back refunds or tax credits."

KANSAS ATOMIC STRAW

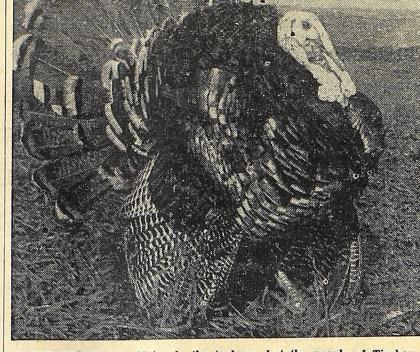

The Eastman Kodak company has been having trouble as a result of the first atomic bomb test in New Mexico-one year ago. Eastman found that, for some mysterious reason, some of its film was turning black before exposure. Finally experts discovered that the film had been packed in straw which came from western Kansas.

After the Los Alamos bomb test, radioactive dust from New Mexico settled on Kansas wheat fields, and is still so powerful that the Kodak company has had to stop using Kansas straw for packing film.

TRUMAN WRITES A VETO

President Truman was convinced that the half-breed price-control bill would not work. The Taft amendment, he especially argued, was absolutely impossible, and he cited accountancy experts of various big manufacturing firms, all of them cost-plus formula as likely to bring chaos to industry. "I just have to put what I consider the country's welfare first," the President told his

Virginia Town Proves Turkey Flocks Can Bring Prosperity

By E. L. KIRKPATRICK WNU Features.

Picture 175,000 to 200,000 turkeys strutting around a town of less than 400 people. That's what happens at Timberville, Va., in Rockingham county, one of the outstanding turkey and broiler producing areas of the state.

"Last year we counted that many marketable turkeys within a five-mile radius of Timberville," says Sam Cox, district county agent. This enterprise has been developed largely to supplement the rais-ing of broilers which was started with a workable contract plan of local and nearby hatcheries and feed companies during the de-pression. Through this plan, baby chicks, young turkeys and poultry feed are provided on a share-the-profits-above-cost basis. The plan put chickens and turkeys through the valleys and up the mountains, enabling many farm families, once on relief, to clear $1,000 a year.

The turkey and broiler enterprises are helped materially by Mutual Cold Storage and the Rockingham Poultry Marketing Co-op, both locally owned and locally operated organizations. The poultry marketing group processes as much as $6,000 worth of produce per year. In a heavy run, 6,000 turkeys or 4,000 broilers are picked, cleaned, cut up and frozen in a day. The plant em-ploys more than 200 local workers with a payroll of $250,000 a year. Timberville also has a canning factory that handles 60,000 bushels against OPA, who branded the Taft of peaches and 300,000 bushels of apples during a good fruit year. Likewise, it would be unfair to ignore Timberville's 100 to 500 carloads of fresh peaches annually, which go out by rail. Freight revenues on congressional leaders. "Let's not fool the country and give them something that won't work."

When they told him that they would not be able to persuade their reluctant colleagues to pass any sort of price-control bill, the President replied:

"If it's this or nothing, then we'll just have to take nothing."

Among other things, the President figured that during the chaotic period sure to follow if the polyglot price-control bill were passed, congress would claim it was his fault for not making the bill work, when, in actual fact, the bill was unworkable. He felt also that if congress did dare to go home without a price-control bill, things would be hotter for them in their districts than in Washington. He also warned that in this case he would call a special session of congress.

WHO WON THE WAR?

It is now getting close to a year since the end of the war with Japan, and yet the strategic bombing survey for Japan has not been made public. Inside reason is a vigorous backstage tug-of-war between the army and navy which boils down to the basic question: "Which of them won the war in the Pacific?"

Civilian members of the survey staff, however, summarize the situation:

1. Heaviest damage to Japan was inflicted by U. S. submarines. They had just about shut off all Jap supplies toward the end of the war and Japan was paralyzed.

2. Next greatest damage was done by long-range army landbased planes.

3. The navy's carrier - based planes were important, but ranked second to the B-29s. . . .

Tall tales about Timberville!-Nevertheless true. And these things "didn't just happen," Mr. Cox concludes. "Take that poultry processing plant—it was built on faith. There was only $50 on hand when operations started in 1940. Farmers saw their folly of flooding the maring made freely that no capital ships will be sunk, although lighter craft may be capsized. Another feature of the second blast is the placing of submerged submarines in the target fleet, and it will be interesting to note the effect of the bomb force upon the steel hulls of these vessels beneath the water.

Naval scientists predict that force of the underwater blast will create waves of sufficient height, possibly 10 or more feet which will sweep over low-lying Bikini island, although this was also forecast in the first blast and did not materialize.

Meantime, endless arguments proceed as to the degree of damage to the ships, the location of the bomb burst, whether the drop from the plane was a "near miss," probable loss of life had the ships been manned with full complement, and comparative efficiency of this first Bikini bomb as compared to the bombs at Alamogordo, Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Precision Bombing.

When it is considered that this bomb was dropped from a height of something like six miles and hit within a 1,000-yard circle, this reporter would consider that pretty good precision bombing.

Adm. T. A. Solberg of the bureau of ships, however, declared that insofar as he could judge, every ship damaged by the bomb, with the exception of the Independence, could be put into fighting shape within two or three months.

Some Thoughts About Unionized Baseball

That uneasiness in the bleachers these days is due to apprehension among the fans as to how unionized baseball, still being talked of, will change the national game. Up to now it has been regarded wholly as a sporting event in which nothing counted but athletic supremacy, physical fitness and skill with a ball and bat. Now it may become tied up with the rights of man, economic equality and the war between capital and labor.

No matter how good a pitcher may be, the question may become: "Can he go the route on a picket parade?"

We may look at a sensational shortstop grabbing them from all angles and merely wonder how good he is in a double header between management and the working man. Even as we rise to cheer an out-fielder for spearing one at the fence we may find ourselves thinking: "A fine outfielder, but has he commu-nistic leanings?"

"And how is baseball going to benefit from a lot of arguments over whether Abner Doubleday or Samuel Gompers was the great trailbreaker of baseball and which was the greatest figure on the diamond, Bob Wagner or Honus?

Mr. Twitchell said he was greatly worried, too, whether, once organ-ized, a player would stand for boo-"When I boo Leo Durocher ing. will I not be booing the CIO and the AFL? Can I yell 'Gwan, ya big bum!' at Hank Borowy without having it interpreted as applying to the Baseball Guild?" he asked.

"It looks bad," sighed Mr. Twitchell. "I'm afraid we may see double headers of the future played on forums of the air!"

THE STORY THUS FAR: "I want you the store to Hemmings and get the sheriff," Jim told Sherwin, who pro-tested that he didn't know the way. His real reason was that the sheriff would arrest him. But Jim wanted Sheriff Cutler to go after Jordan, the outlaw. Sherwin got on a horse at last, but went the wrong way deliberately. Suddenly he feelded he was a coward, and turned to go back—and face the worst. He heard Jane's voice, then saw her in a clump of bushes. He saw something else-Jordan creeping up to abduct her. Jane tried to fight him off, but Jordan lifted her up to carry her away. Sherwin attacked, but Jordan escaped again, wounding Sherwin's arm with a knife.

CHAPTER V

"Jim, he's faint from loss of blood -look at him!"

Old Mac intervened. "I'll fix him wp; you go 'phone for th' doc, Jane,' he thrust his hand through Sherwin's well arm. "You come along with me, son. Hello!" he shaded his eyes with his hand. "Say, Jim, his eyes with his hand. "Say, Jim, if I ain't mistaken—th' sheriff's coming across th' bridge right now!" he added, pointing. Jim gave a quick exclamation of satisfaction. "So he is. Got a posse, too. Just in the nick of time—it's all right that you didn't go for him now, Hazlett!" Sherwin flushed suddanly to high Sherwin flushed suddenly to his hair, but no one noticed it. Jane was running on ahead to telephone for the doctor, Mac had him by the arm, and Jim had apparently become absorbed in the approaching posse.

"Send a man over for that horse, Mac," he threw back as he hurried off.

Sherwin's face was set. The old man peered at him sideways, ruminating.

"Thought you knew the way to Hemmings'." His tone was casual, and he went on at once; "It's a pity you missed baggin' Jordan; he's got th' start of us now."

"We'll have to get him," Sherwin answered absently. He had watched Jane's figure disappearing into the house and now he saw the sheriff's posse riding up the long slope to Las Palomas.

"It seems to take a good many men to hunt down one out here," he remarked dryly.

"Kinder nasty hurt," old Mac said, "but there ain't no bones broken. I'll wash it an' th' doc'll fix it up all right."

While he worked, his patient sat by the window watching the posse. He expected to be called to tell his story of Jordan, but he was not, and, as time passed, he began to wonder why. Then old Mac startled him more.

"I reckon you don't know that Jane's said to be goin' to marry Stenhart, do you?" he asked casually. He felt Sherwin stiffen under his sobbed chokingly. Jim intervened. He stepped in front of Jane and took Sherwin by the unwounded arm. "Come!" he said sternly. Sherwin cast one quick look of anguish at Jane, turned without a word and went.

As he went Stenhart collapsed into a chair, but Jane did not even glance at him. She stood with her back against the wall, staring in front of her with unseeing eyes. He had dared to make love to her and he was a convict! Her head swam and her mouth was dry, but she said nothing. Outside the house, Jim had his

"Melt away," he said grimly; "you saved me and you rescued my sister-I'll do nothing, nothing at all. Melt away!"

They stood still in the broad daylight. It was afternoon now, and some doves were cooing in the trees. Sherwin turned gravely and looked at Keller, his pale face flushed a little.

"I don't want to make such a dismay, as she lifted her troubled eyes to his.

I don't want to make such a claim upon your generosity," he said stiffly. "Better give me up." Jim swore a little. "I'm not that kind," he said; then his eyes trav-eled toward the distant windings of the road. He took out his field-glasses and searched it as far off as he could see. He made out a dark patch moving on the upper road. 'You go and stay with Mac until dark; that's the sheriff up there. After dark you can get off.' Sherwin said nothing; if he wanted to make a plea in his own defense he saw it was useless, he was judged. Yet there was something

"The sheriff's got a description of some one that's wanted," he said finally. "I've seen them papers before now."

Sherwin did not answer; his arm was bound up and he rose suddenly and made for the door which opened on the posse. But Mac caught him back.

"Don't you do it, son!" Sherwin stared at him. "What do you mean?"

The old man smiled grimly. "I reckon I kinder suspicion why you took th' wrong road, son; you don't need to meet th' sheriff here, Jim ain't called for you."

For a moment longer Sherwin stared at him sternly, then he flung himself into a chair beside the table, and leaning across it, buried his head in his arms. Old Mac came and stood beside him, looking down at him pityingly, for he saw his broad shoulders shake with a hard drawn, bitter sob.

"Got any new men on?" Cutler had asked. "Seen a fellow like that picture?"

Jim, studied the picture a long time silently, then he looked around at the sheriff.

"What's he wanted for, Cutler?" ; "Murder, first degree. Escaped convict from Rhode Island; it's for life there, you know.'

Jim nodded. "Better leave the paper with me," he said at last; new men come along every now and then."

"That's so! Personally I don't think likely he's round these parts; too far off his beat, eh?" The sher-iff moved to the door. "By the way, Keller, where's that feller who mixed it up for Jordan? Send him along to show us the way he went.'

"I'll send old MacDowell, he knows," Jim said promptly. "The "The other man's got a bad arm; I've phoned for the doctor for him." As he spoke he accompanied the sheriff to the door and shouted for Mac. The old man answered at once and got his orders to go with the posse. He cast a sharp look at Jim's face and obeyed without a word.

"Good Lord, Fanny-my darling girl, what is it?" Jim forgot his quandary as he caught her in his arms.

"Nothing!" she tried to smile. "I -I was a little dizzy-there's Jane now!"

Jim, still anxious and perplexed, looked around.

"Hello, Jane - Stenhart! Come along. Fanny's overdone, she's faint; I've made her sit down," as he spoke he was putting the nurse into the big chair at his desk. Stenhart, following Jane, came in slowly, leaning on his stick.

"What's it all about?" he asked. Jane was getting a glass of water for Fanny, and as she brought it Jim held out the sheriff's paper. "Look here, Jane!"

His sister ignored him, fussing His sister ignored hill, tussing over the other girl. "Feeling bet-ter, dear? Sit down, Max, or you'll overtire yourself!" Then, straightening up: "What's that, Jim?" He handed her the description and the picture.

Jane stared at it, changing color, then she flung it down. "Well," she said defiantly, "what of it?" Jim saw the anger and pride in her face. Suddenly he remembered the scene by the creek, when he found her there with Sherwin. "By Jove!" he breathed, and turned sharply. "Max, look at that!" He snatched the paper up and handed it to Stenhart. Stenhart was reading it when they heard a step on the veranda and Sherwin came into the hall. His arm was bandaged and his face was colorless. "Oh!" cried Jane impulsively,

"you shouldn't-your arm-" But he did not look at her, he was looking at Stenhart. There was a tense moment. No one spoke, then Stenhart laughed-laughed out loud, holding out the paper and looking at about Jim that was so likeable he could not be angry with him.

Jim. "It's the man," he said; "can't you see? Use your eyes! I've known this fellow before-his name's John Sherwin; he killed his old uncle because he'd left him out of his will, cut him off. He's escaped from jail.

"We're not so far from the border after all," Jim added casually. "I'd head that way-if I were you. Sherwin looked up. "You're gen-erous, I appreciate it."

Jim turned away awkwardly. He was half way to the house when he turned and spoke over his shoulder. "I'm relying on you not to stay around Las Palomas," he said grim-

Sherwin nodded; it was the only thing Jim had said which infuriated him. It made him feel his position; he was an outcast-spared because he had done something for both of them, the girl and her brother. Her last look at him had repudiated him as completely as Jim's words; they both believed him guilty. The girl would marry Stenhart!

Suddenly he laughed aloud, harshly. What a mad fool he had been. He might have killed Stenhart under the trees that morning. It was useless to play fair with a snake. His eyes swept the wide slopes of the ranch. The men had stopped hammering; it was near supper time, and he could see groups of them down by the corrals. In the water under the bridge he saw the big white horns of a drowned steer; there had been too much to do to recover all the bodies for cremation. Presently he too might be found lying in some creek, starved on his long hike for freedom. He had not moved from the spot where Jim had left him when he heard old Mac call to him. "Come in here, I've got something for you to eat," the old man said brusquely, holding open the door of his own room behind the kitchen. Sherwin saw that he had a good meal spread for him and a knapsack packed. As Mac closed the door behind him he looked around at him and saw compassion on the lined face.

"You knew I was going," he said quickly. "Did Keller tell you over the 'phone just now?" Mac smiled. "You told me, son! I've lived a long while. I learned how to get behind a man's spoken words, a right smart while ago. Sit down and eat, ain't any use starv-in'."

To make a pinned seam, place the pins close together and set in from the edge so they can be removed as you stitch.

The flat-felled seam is very popular in men's and boys' clothing because the seam is flat, easy to press and looks well tailored. To make it, first stitch the raw edges of the outside of the garment as for a regular seam. Trim off one edge of the seam to within ¼ inch of the seam line. Turn under the raw edge of the other side 1/8 inch and pull it flat over the short side. Hem by hand or machine so the seam lies flat.

as shirts and pants. Cut the pattern from a piece of cardboard, but do not leave an allowance for seams on the pattern itself. Place the cardboard pattern over each of the pock-

Summer Fashion Notes

Rhinestones and sequins are still expected to hold down the main bulk of trimming, although it's probable we'll see some other new decorative shirring and other such details that require a fine fabric. Notice the bright colors in coats notes like braid borderie anglasie. There will be brims and wellbeing shown for summer wear. You'll like particularly the bright molded millinery for the after twenty and older crowd, while off-theface hats are favored for the teengreens and reds, but if you like pasaged group because they're so very tels, there are enough to delight flattering. anyone.

because almost all the pieces look so similar it is difficult to assemble them. Always use the flat-felled seams for shorts.

If you are altering a pair of Dad's trousers for the boy, you can cut them down yourself, if you feel competent enough to do so, or if you wish, buy a pattern and cut from that.

Closet Arrangement

Make the most of your closets by arranging them efficiently rather than hit or miss, which gives you little space.

Hooks should be placed about seven inches apart, and their placement behind the rod is not to be encouraged because they are difficult to reach.

If your closet has room for shelves and drawers, these will give you additional space for storage of many small articles like underwear, belts, socks, etc. Store shoes on vertical or horizontal racks or rods, or, if you have room for a tilted shelf above the clothes, this will also give a very heat appearance.

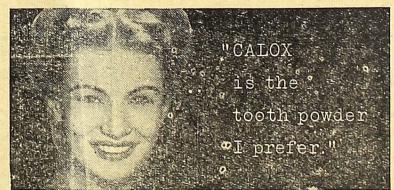

Avoid wire hangers unless they are well padded, since they tend to make sleeves poke out in the wrong direction. If women have a closet to themselves, they will like the dainty padded hangers that come in lovely pastel shades. If you like an especially lovely closet accessory, choose these padded hangers in your favorite scent and they will keep your closets delightfully per-fumed and also prevent that musty odor on your clothing.

HIS sporting life may be check-I ered, dizzy and dumb, but it is never wholly dull. One never can tell from what direction the harpoon will be thrown. Here is a double example. A few weeks ago the Louis-Conn party was to be the season's greatest thriller. At that time the Phillies were the joke of the sporting world. They had 200 E.s. been tagged as the eternal occupants of baseball's doghouse. They were supposed to be imbedded in the cement of the cellar.

Grantland Rice All this sounded reasonable enough as we looked over the chart. Then, with little warning, a cloud no larger than a man's hand or thumb worked into a western twister, while the Louis-Conn fight broke all records as a monumental flop-an alltime record.

About the same time, the lowly Phillies began their upsurge. Within two weeks they stole the glory of baseball. They became more talked about than the Red Sox or the Yankees, than the Dodgers or the Cardinals. They have made the Louis-Conn dull merry-go-round look like a taffy-pulling exhibition. The Phillies have emerged from the grottoes and the underground into the open. They finally see the light of the sun again. They can see the summer dawn and feel the rain.

Challengers Now

Through the combined efforts of owner Bob Carpenter, general manager Herb Pennock and manager Ben Chapman, one of the most liberal and one of the ablest combinations in baseball, the Phillies no longer are baseball's doormat. They no longer belong to the tribe of "God's green footstools." At last they are a real baseball team.

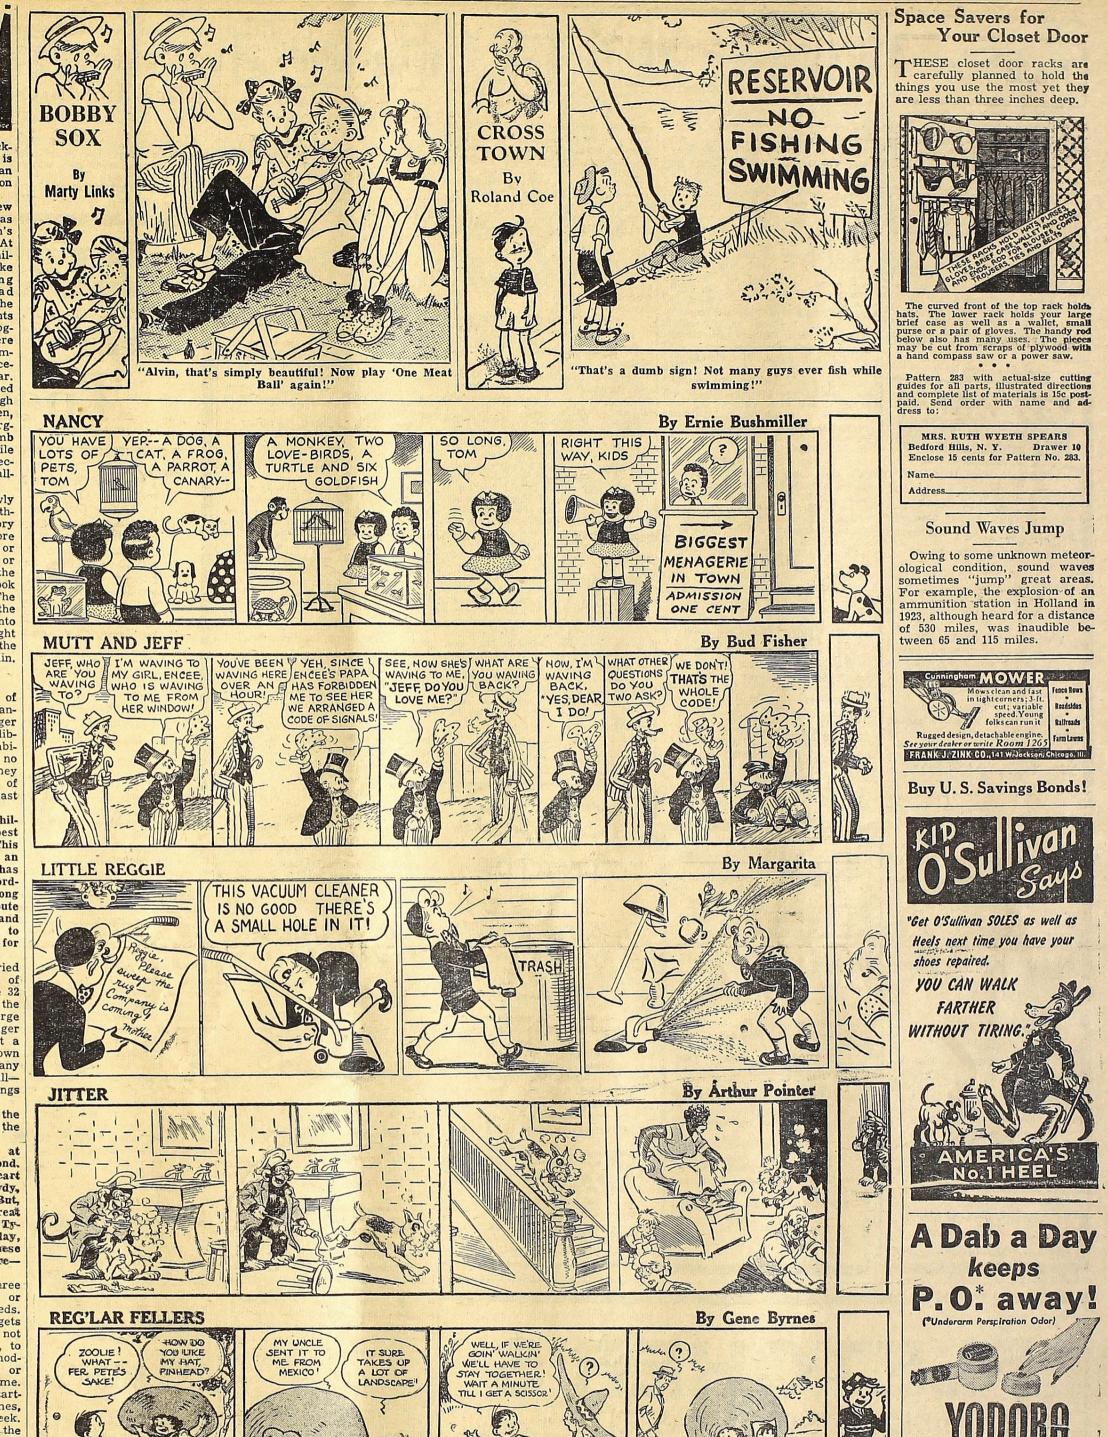

For several weeks now the Phillies have been playing the best ball in the National league. This may be no high tribute, but it is an amazing tribute to a team that has defended the cellar with recordbreaking stubbornness for a long time. It should go as a high tribute to Messrs. Carpenter, Pennock and Chapman, who have combined to turn out the best job in baseball for 1946.

The Phillies of 1946 have carried us back to the Boston Braves of 1914. That happens to be some 32 years ago. Around this date the Braves were in last place. George Stallings, the fiery Braves manager from Georgia, was wearing out a suit a week, moving up and down the bench. There have been many hard-losing managers in baseballmost of them are-but Stallings holds the record. Then, around the first of July, the short and Johnny Evers at second. Great field-smart brain-big heart -no hit. They had Hank Gowdy, the old Sarge, back of the bat. But, above all, they had three great pitchers-Dick Rudolph, George Trler and Bill James. Day after day, game after game, we saw these three pitchers in the box score-Rudolph, Tyler and James.

Braves began their move from the

This trio proved to us that three pitchers, working every third or fourth day, are all a ball club needs. Working that often a pitcher gets control and confidence. I'm not referring to the some-arm boys, to the once-a-week pitchers of the modern era, where it takes three or four pitchers to finish a ball game. Rudolph, Tyler and James started and finished their own games, working at least twice a week. They were not pampered as the modern pitchers are, barring such men as Feller, Newhouser and a few others.

From Bottom to Top

So the Braves moved from 8th to 7th place, then to 6th. They moved from 6th into the first division, then headed for the top. They made the top-and they didn't need eight or ten pitchers to carry them ics in four straight games. They outplayed and outgamed and outpitched and outhit one of Connie Mack's greatest teams. Hank Gow-dy hit over .500 in that series, But the main answer again was Rudolph, Tyler and James, who had been seasoned under fire for over three months, who had been worked

Any pitcher who can't start and finish over 20 games, who can't work in over 300 innings-or 350 innings-isn't much of a pitcher. What baseball needs today is a combination of Rudolph, Tyler and James, who can handle a three months' schedule practically unaided. Modern pitchers need far more work than they are getting. No set of

If Chapman only had another Rudolph, Tyler and James he would breeze through this 1946 pennant race. It wouldn't even be a contest.
