Soon Ready For Serving Public

New Plane Purchased For Charter Service

Work is nearly completed on the runways for the Tawas City Airport located west of the Tawas City limits on the Meadow road. The airport will soon be ready for use.

Located on what is known as the Fred Marsh farm it is ideally situated for the use of the public. The site has been used as a landing field for many years by barn storming pilots, especially in the days of the old Iosco County Fair when airplanes were used for the principal attraction. The location has been approved by engineers of the State Board of Aeronautics.

The new airport has two 1,800 foot runways, 300 feet wide and one 1,300 foot runway, 150 feet wide. The runways have been plowed, leveled with a bulldozer and seeded to grass. Other equipment will be 40x60 Quonset hangar, an office building and a service station for fuel, lubrication and repairs.

The owners and builders of this project are Fred Marsh, Wilbur C. Roach, Jr., and Earl Davis. Davis and Roach are veterans of World War II, and Marsh, an old regular army man, served as captain in World War I. Roach was commissioned lieutenant and was a pilot in the Pacific area. He was a member of the "I Bombed Japan" club. Davis, a radio operator and gunner on a B-17 bomber, made 35 missions over Germany during a year flying over Europe. He has had about 300 hours of pilot time during service in the Air Corps.

A new Taylor-Craft plane is in service at the airport. The public will be offered a chartered plane service, flying instruction and scenic rides. Plans are being made to enlarge these facilities with the increase in demand.

IRATE OVER PROSTITUTION
WASHINGTON—Admiral Nimitz is trying to hush it up, but a hot row has broken out in the navy's chaplain division over alleged discrimination against chaplains with combat records...

Four well-known chaplains already have resigned as a result of the dispute. They are: Capt. William A. McGuire, Catholic chaplain of the 11th naval district at San Diego...

Capt. William W. Edel, Methodist, who also chucked up a fine record as a combat chaplain. Capt. Raymond Drinan, Catholic, former chaplain of the battle-scarred airplane carrier Enterprise.

In addition to the claim of combat chaplains that they are being relegated to minor roles while their non-combat colleagues get the top commands, many also are sore over the navy's failure to crack down on prostitution in Japan.

A number of Protestant and Catholic chaplains who served in the Pacific contend that the navy is abetting the growth of prostitution in Tokyo by an indifferent policy in regard to the Yoshiwaras.

These chaplains further charge that those who have fought prostitution in Tokyo have been disciplined for their efforts—among them, Comdr. O. B. Cook, who was transferred from Tokyo to Guam.

PAUL PORTER A-BOMBED

FILIBUSTER AGAINST A-BOMB

It's Southerners who have the reputation for filibustering, but three northern Republicans are conducting a filibuster more secret and just as skillful as that of any Dixie Democrat. It's against the atom control bill—vital to the nation.

They know the house will pass the senate-approved McMahon bill for control of atomic energy if it comes to a vote; so for two weeks three Republicans have kept the bill bottled up in the military affairs committee by stalling at every turn.

The three filibusters are Farnell Thomas of New Jersey, Forrest Harness of Indiana and Charles Elston of Ohio.

Many committee members gave up an evening for a special session in order to complete the bill and give the U. S. a policy to back up Barney Baruch in the United Nations.

Half an hour after the time set for the meeting they lacked a quorum, and Ohio's recalcitrant Elston would not let them proceed. Only one more member was needed.

Finally Congresswoman Clare Booth Luce of Connecticut phoned that she was on her way to the committee room from her office five floors above. But while she was in the elevator, Elston grabbed his hat and left so there still would be no quorum.

Thus a dozen conscientious congressmen were forced to waste more than an hour, and Bernard Baruch was left high and dry before the United Nations with no law on the statute books to back him up.

IRKED OVER PALESTINE

It wasn't announced, but Prime Minister Atlee sent a confidential message to President Truman informing him that British troops had taken repressive measures against Jewish elements in Palestine. However, the message arrived only after British troops already had moved in.

Atlee asked Truman for a public statement of support, but the President was so irked at the way Atlee acted first and advised him afterward, that he phoned acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson and told him to issue a statement keeping American skirts clear of the British move.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

John Snyder kept bobbing into the cabinet room during drafting of Truman's OPA veto message. He wanted to lend a hand in writing the speech but nobody gave him any encouragement. The speech was written largely by OPA Boss Paul Fortier, Reconstruction Czar John Steinman and Judge Sam Rosenman. The FBI already is digging into large-scale hoarding. Some very big manufacturing concerns may be implicated.

Whiskey Bath Listed as Old Cold Remedy

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—Fantastic remedies suggested for the common cold 60 years ago were described by Dr. Louis C. Jones of State College for Teachers, Albany, in an address here.

The Albany Times in 1886 suggested that, in the realm of preventive medicine, best thing to ward off a cold was to take a bath in hot whiskey and rock salt twice a year, Jones said.

Indiana Industrial City Maps Extensive Improvement Plan

By E. L. KIRKPATRICK
WNU Features

Three-quarters of a century after its settlement on the Blue river, New Castle, Ind., attracted the Maxwell automobile factory in 1907. From 3,000 population then, the town "grew like Topsy," to its present size of 20,000. Activity of an industrial city settled down over the frame of a small town.

According to Scott Chambers, president of New Castle's City Plan commission, "this tended to change the sense of values of the people, who became more interested in getting than in giving, more in what they had than what they were." There were fewer music and art teachers in the town's schools in 1940 than in 1904.

Scan Civic Needs.

So, in 1942, there was held a civic clinic in the form of public meetings whereby more than 1,000 people helped to figure out what their town needed. Better housing, more adequate parks, auditorium, new hotel, airport, community center, physical and moral clean-up were on the list.

It all spelled a job for a planning commission. Speakers were engaged for civic group meetings. Reports of the talks were carried in local papers. The mayor named a commission. Members read good books and pamphlets for self-education and employed the services of qualified architects. All the forces went to work for a New Castle that "would give its people both the opportunity of an industrial city and the charm and ease of life in a small town."

Foresee Future Growth.

The program is based on analysis of problems and outline of purpose. While some of it is being carried out, the rest still is in the planning stage. With more than a dozen substantial manufacturing firms to its credit, the city looks to brisk business and well-balanced growth in the years ahead.

A place where parking facilities are adequate is being substituted for a business district where traffic jams the streets. Quarters that will permit good health and induce good citizenship are replacing blighted areas and local public works projects are part of a general scheme for community developments. There is no leaf-raking in new goals for New Castle.

Two Elderly Fans Are Undeterred by Scooter Accident

MEMPHIS, TENN.—Although their first attempt at riding a motor scooter landed them in a hospital, two elderly Memphis women insist they will not desert the childhood sport.

When Mrs. Mattie Driver, 60, bought the scooter, she invited Mrs. Ida L. Frisby, 82, for a ride. The scooter got out of control and the women landed in a hospital, Mrs. Frisby with a shoulder injury and Mrs. Driver with a head cut.

Insisting that she had no regrets, Mrs. Frisby said, "I was doing something I'd always wanted to do." "This won't stop me," Mrs. Driver bragged, adding that she intends to ride her scooter to Chattanooga as soon as she is released from the hospital.

Former WAC Sees Name as Casualty

BILLINGS, MONT.—When the war department recently published its list of World War II casualties, Mrs. Charles W. Bruder, former second lieutenant in the WAC, scanned the list with amazement for her own name was included among those officially declared dead or missing.

Mrs. Bruder, whose service was confined to recruiting in this country, blamed a mixup of service records in Washington for the error. She was released last December. Her husband also was an army officer, serving in the European theater.

Long Way Proves Short in Solving Laundry Problem

LONDON.—Laundry problems, particularly delays in deliveries, irk many London residents.

Faced with the prospect of waiting two weeks to get his clothes back from the laundry, one ingenious resident devised the novel expedient of airmailing his laundry to Melbourne, Australia, on the other side of the world. Return delivery is made within 10 days.

Vigilantes Ride but Not after Thiefs

SHERRARD, ILL.—Although they haven't set out on the trail of a steed snatcher since August 24, 1899, the Richland Grove Vigilantes, formed 87 years ago to catch horse thieves, remains an active organization.

Formed principally of kin of the founders, the organization endeavors to perpetuate the association for sentimental and social reasons. The group, which has a present membership of 130, meets annually.

CONTROL IS PROBLEM

Congress Battle Rages In Face of Atom Test

'TASK BAKER'—Radio impulses sent out from the USS Cumberland Sound, indicated in top drawing (1) were to detonate the underwater "A" bomb for the "Task Baker," second of the Bikini experiments. The bomb was suspended from a special barge (2). As indicated by the arrows (3) a number of "drone" ships were directed into the lagoon to test the effects of radio-activated water.

By WALTER A. SHEAD
WNU Washington Correspondent.

HONOLULU, OPERATIONS CROSSROAD.—While army and navy officials in charge of Joint Task Force 1 at the Bikini atomic bomb tests are interested in the squabble now going on in the congress as between civilian and military control of atomic energy, their single interest here is to complete successfully the important experiments on the possible damage which an atom bomb can do to a fleet at sea.

In the meantime, Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, commander of Operations Crossroads, has intimated that weather conditions may force a week's delay in the underwater test in Bikini lagoon scheduled for July 25, which would make "Baker-day" Aug. 1 or thereabouts. As has been pointed out, the weather for this second test need not be as perfect as for the first test when the bomb was dropped from a B-29, but it must be clear enough for aerial observation and photography.

The press ship USS Appalachian has completed her trip to Pearl Harbor for minor repairs and now is anchored with the rest of the maintenance fleet in Bikini lagoon, ready to pull out and cruise outside to the seaward side of the island when the time is ripe for the second test.

Few Remain. Only approximately 23 correspondents are left aboard the ship, since most of them returned to the States immediately after the first test.

The pattern for the underwater test has been completed with the battleship Arkansas, which was barely blistered by the first test, and the carrier Saratoga, also undamaged as a result of the first bomb, almost equidistant and nearest to the proposed bomb burst.

A little to the east are the battleship New York and the cruiser Salt Lake City. Both suffered negligible damage in the first blast. Then to the west of the two center ships are the cruiser Pensacola and the carrier Independence. The old Independence is merely a hulk in the water with her insides torn out and her topsides blasted away as result of the bomb and her own internal explosions. The Pensacola is undamaged below decks, but her superstructure is pretty well battered up as a result of the first tests, with both stacks blown away.

Further out in the circle are the battleships Pennsylvania and Nevada, the Jap ship Nagato and the German pocket battleship Prinz Eugen. Just forward of the Arkansas and the Saratoga are several submarines which are submerged at various depths with the double-hulled Pilotfish almost as close to the center of the burst as the Arkansas. Lighter ships make up the balance of the target array.

Opinions Vary. The effect of the bomb on these submarines is awaited with interest and in the meantime the discussion goes on as between those who predict this underwater blast will sink several capital ships including the submarines, and those who declare the damage will be negligible.

Over on Kwajalein where the army air force section of the task force is holding forth, Maj. Gen. William E. Kepner, deputy commander for air, still is seeking to find an answer to the questions of reporters as to why Major Swann-cut and his crew missed the Nevada or bulls-eye of the first test by something like 2,500 feet. This reporter does not believe the miss was that far, since my calculations indicate the bomb fell astern and a little to port of the Nevada about 600 yards away or approximately 1,800 feet.

At any rate, General Kepner now comes up with an answer, according to his latest conference, that the bomb was an "eccentric" and that the drop was in the category known as a "wobbler." In other words that the bomb veered and did not fall true.

'Eccentric' Bomb Explains Wide Miss

ELMER TWITCHELL ON RESTAURANTS

Either the wrong men are operating too many lunchrooms and restaurants in this country or else they're just too scared to speak to the help about things.

"I do my share of eating in middle class eating places," said Elmer Twitchell today, "and it is my conviction that most of the operators are glorified dog-wagon men. I am no chef myself but I could get up better dinners with an old broom and a bucket of switch-grease."

Elmer was quite sore. "What's become of the old-fashioned restaurant proprietor who wanted things right? Whatever happened to the chef who had pride in his work? Where is the old-fashioned bartender who knew how to mix a drink right?" he demanded.

"It's years since I have run across a proprietor who has a conscience, thinks it important to hold his trade and won't water the soup, cut down the portions more than necessary or feel upset if he discovers the potatoes have not been served cold."

"And I am not referring merely to the Grade B restaurant. Some of our best clubs are now employing cement mixers as chefs."

"I had a business man's lunch at a private club last week and I still can't figure if the manager and chef were former pig feeders or just a couple of boys who confuse human beings with seagulls."

Elmer wanted to be fair. "I admit it's hard to get foodstuffs," he concluded, "but it seems to me the boys should know what to do with it when they get it."

Ex-Pfc. Purkey in A Quonset Hut

Dear Ed:
Well now I know how it feels to live inside of an egg, or even inside half an egg. The wife and me has just got one of them Quonset huts. We already got roundshoulders and we stoop over even when standing up.

After you have been in one a day you have no more doubts about the world being round. Already I am working on a book which I will call "The Half Egg and I" or maybe "Life With Low Ceilings." The first thing you got to learn is not to get off a chair too sudden. You can't tell how long a couple has lived in one of them huts by the bumps on their noggin's.

A real love life is necessary on account of if a couple do any scrapping there is no neutral corners to go to after the knockdowns.

We know a fellow who would write his congressman but doesn't know how to spell OPA.

BUCK BEEF MAKES THEM BEEF . . . "Meat, all you want," says the enticing sign painted onto the window of the grocery company window on Olive street, St. Louis, but the irate housewives are not having any—not at $1 a pound. They form a picket line, complete with home-made signs before the shop to protest the price. This was one of several stores in St. Louis which were picketed in similar manner. Other cities also reported organized boycott, demanding return of OPA prices.

Warns Against Spotted Fever

Health Service Urges Folks To Guard Themselves From Bite of Ticks.

WASHINGTON. — The public is appealed to by the public health service to safeguard themselves from Rocky mountain spotted fever. Ticks, the blood-sucking insects which carry the often fatal malady, flourish during the summer months. Several cases of the disease already have been reported this year, reports the United Press.

Infected ticks have been found in 42 of the 48 states but the greatest danger is in the Rocky mountain and Eastern states. One of the most heavily infected regions is made up of Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, where 133 fever cases were reported last year.

Public health officials estimated that one tick out of 300 is infected. The disease is so acute, however, that the public is urged to consider all ticks dangerous.

The health service said that any one exposed to ticks should be examined carefully at least once a day.

Effective Vaccines.

"Children playing in uncleared land, campers, fishermen, picknickers and people who work in tick-infested areas should have this inspection," it said.

Two effective vaccines have been developed for prevention of the fever but because of the limited supply, it is usually recommended only for persons exposed to ticks in the most heavily infected areas. The vaccines must be administered each year, preferably during April and May.

The National Institute of Health recently developed an immune rabbit serum which, according to health officials, is "probably of value" in treating infected persons. It is the first specific treatment ever developed.

The first symptoms of the malady appear from 4 to 12 days after the tick bite.

The attack usually comes on suddenly with a chill, rapid rise in temperature, headache and insomnia. After three or four days a skin rash, pinkish in color, appears.

The rabbit serum should be given as early as possible in the course of illness, preferably before the rash has been present for three days. An emergency supply of the serum is kept at the National Institute of Health at Bethesda, Md., and at the Rocky Mountain laboratory at Hamilton, Mont.

Dogs Carry Insects.

The public health service said that dogs which run at large also are dangerous because they frequently bring infected ticks into the home. The danger can be lessened by examining the dog carefully each day or having the entire family vaccinated.

If you discover a tick on yourself or your child, here is the best procedure to follow:

Remove the tick with a small forceps, eyebrow tweezers or a small piece of paper or cotton. Be careful not to crush the insect; it is possible to contract spotted fever by getting the blood of an infected tick on the skin. Paint the tick bite with an antiseptic, such as iodine. Then wash hands and forceps thoroughly or rinse them in alcohol.

There is danger of acquiring the fever if an infected tick has been attached to the skin from 6 to 8 hours or more. If it is removed before it attaches itself or within an hour or two afterwards, the danger of infection is considerably less.

After removing the tick, a careful watch must be kept on the person involved for any symptom of the fever. At the first suspicious sign, call your doctor.

Dentist Beside Patient

Robbed at Point of Gun

The robber, about 18 or 19, took Dr. Behnke's wallet containing $175. He made no effort to rob Mrs. Anne Blair, 1444 S. 56th street, the patient who was in the chair.

A blue stocking cap pulled over his eyes and a red bandana handkerchief covering the lower part of his face, the youth burst into the office brandishing a .32 caliber revolver.

"Stick 'em up—give me your wallet," he shouted to Dr. Behnke.

The dentist handed him the wallet and he ran out.

The robber was described as six feet tall and wearing khaki trousers and a brown leather jacket.

Bumper Crop of Peaches

Expected, Say Reports

WASHINGTON.—Peaches will be plentiful this season.

But the crop will be 1 per cent smaller than the all-time record crop of last year, the department of agriculture forecast.

Putting up peaches is especially important, officials said, because commercially canned fruits will not meet consumer demands next winter and spring.

How to Outbluff a VICIOUS DOG at night!

...as recommended by Lt. Comdr. Willy Necker, Wheeling, Ill.—noted dog trainer and judge at dog shows...and wartime head of U. S. Coast Guard War Dog Training.

1 The fact that 999 dogs out of a thousand are friendly, safe and lovable doesn't alter the fact that occasionally—through mistreatment, neglect or disease—a dog may turn vicious.

2 Such animals are dangerous. Especially at night! If cornered outdoors, at night, turn on your "Eveready" flashlight! Shine it directly at the dog's eyes, to blind and perhaps bewilder him. He may leap at the light, however; so don't hold it in front of you. Hold it at arm's length to the side. Most important...

3 Keep still. It's instinctive with most animals to attack anything that runs away or moves aggressively. If the dog refrains from attacking for a few seconds, you have probably won—but, if not, protect your throat. Use flashlight as club. Shout! If bitten, see a doctor as soon as possible.

4 For bright light, white light, effective light—insist on "Eveready" batteries. Your dealer now has them. Ask for them by name. For "Eveready" batteries have no equals—that's why they're the largest-selling flashlight batteries in the world. Yet your extra light, extra life, cost you nothing extra!

What a HEADACHE!

... And WE WERE ALL SET TO DO A BIG JOB ON RURAL LINES

Yep, if it were not for those "circumstances beyond our control" which you have been reading about in the papers, maybe by now we would have the materials and manpower to extend our service to you folks who have asked for it.

Of course, we are building lines but our progress is nowhere near the goal we had set. Poles, transformers, wire and almost every other item entering into a line construction job are still mighty hard to get. We know you understand but we want to thank you for the patience you have shown and to assure you that we are doing out best to rush our rural extension program toward completion.

W. N. U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Sherwin told Mac that Stenhart is his cousin. It was Stenhart's testimony that convicted Sherwin of killing his uncle. After eight years, he escaped from prison and finally tracked Stenhart to the ranch—to kill him. They went to the stables and got two horses. Old Mac led the way to a trail that led up to the cliff. Hobbling their horses they proceeded on foot to a hidden cabin old Mac had known about for years. But Jordan was in the cabin! Jordan had escaped again. Mac advised Sherwin to skip at daybreak. "I don't believe you did it," Mac said as he rode away, leaving Sherwin to stare after him. Sherwin bedded down in the brush to wait out the night.

CHAPTER VII

There was small likelihood of Jordan following so far, and Sherwin turned back to the mountain path at last, with a feeling that Mac, at least, was safe.

It was half an hour later when he found himself near the cabin again. He had approached from the ledge and stood in the shadow of a live oak, listening intently. Personally, he had no thought that Jordan would return here, for Jordan did not really know how many had been in the attacking party, and he must know that the sheriff was after him with a posse. Sherwin reasoned that he would scarcely venture back that night and, on the other hand, Mac thought that he, Sherwin, meant to leave at daybreak. He smiled grimly, he wanted Mac to think just that! Meanwhile, he hid his food pack and his blanket; he should not starve while he waited. And he intended to wait here until he met Stenhart again face to face. He advanced cautiously, made sure that the cabin was empty, and, determined to take no risks, found a spot in the redwoods where he could look out on a scene as bright as day with moonlight, himself unseen; and unrolling his blanket, he lay down there to rest. He wanted to smoke, but the chances were against that, although he believed himself to be utterly alone. He clasped his hands under his head and lay there thinking steadily, not only of his purpose, but of the past. He recalled his uncle's violent end. The old man had made a will in Stenhart's favor, having quarreled with Sherwin's father, then, when his father died, the eccentric old man sent for him, liked him, and spoke of altering his will and dividing the property between his two nephews. No one knew of this. He had spoken only to Sherwin, and when he was found dead, Max Stenhart accused the cousin who was, he said, cut off and disinherited because of a quarrel. He had come upon Sherwin just after the latter discovered the dead man, and he swore the knife was in his cousin's hand. Perjury? Yes! Sherwin could have believed that his cousin had killed the old man to make sure of his inheritance before the will was changed, but Max had proved his alibi. There was no one to testify for the newcomer, the nephew who was little known in the neighborhood.

Sherwin had escaped from jail by a mere accident. Two other convicts had tunneled a way out, and at the last moment they invited him to join them. The thought of liberty had set him wild; he had taken their chances, jumped into the river with them, got ashore in the dark and, with their help, changed into another suit of clothes. He had one faithful friend who had taken care of the little money he had of his own. He had got that secretly and, against the pleadings of his friend, started west—after Stenhart!

Search for him had been so far fruitless; he had been advertised, tracked—all in vain. The fates were with him; he would not be taken until he had reckoned with his enemy, the man who had sworn away his liberty. He had found him! Found him making love to a girl who could not know how vile he was, the liar! And that girl—?

Sherwin rose and began to walk to and fro; he had forgotten the outlaws, what were they to him? He was himself an outlaw! Jane had recoiled as if he were in very deed the criminal Stenhart's black lie had made of him. Love is so close to hate that he almost hated Jane in the passion of his shame that she had scorned him for Stenhart's sake. More than once, when he had looked into her eyes, his stern purpose to kill the man had wavered. She had roused the best that was in him, but now her shudder of horror at the crime had turned him into a human tiger. He wanted blood—nothing else but Stenhart's blood would satisfy his fury. He would kill him.

Jane had passed a sleepless night, a new experience for her cheerful youth, and she rose early, dressed in her riding-suit and slipped out into the hall long before breakfast time. She was going out and she did not want questions asked. She had phoned to the stables to have Tex saddled and waiting.

The wide old hall was flooded with morning light and, almost unconsciously, her eyes turned toward Jim's desk. She seemed to see Sherwin standing there as on that first night. She stopped a moment and stood looking at it, remembering every word that he had said.

She was still there, motionless, when she heard a step behind her. She looked up, startled, and saw Stenhart.

"I didn't know you got about so early," she exclaimed. "How much better you are!"

He did not believe it, she saw that in his eyes, and her flush deepened. He leaned his hand on the desk beside hers. She could feel the emotion that shook him and she dreaded it. She tried to escape.

"I must be going—" she began nervously.

"Jane!"

She raised her eyes reluctantly to his. "You're not fully yourself yet, Max, you look pale—sit down here, let me call Fanny—"

He laughed bitterly. "You can't evade me, Jane. I'm here for my first!"

The flame of jealousy within him leaped up and tortured him. He saw nothing of the beauty of the day, the near hills green and brown, the distant blue peaks against the blue sky, the shadows in the canyons, the wooded spurs, the slopes of Las Paltomas falling behind him. Presently his horse forded a wide stream. It ran swiftly, and it seemed to him his ear caught the sound of a cataract somewhere in the ravine, then he saw Jane so close ahead that he reined in violently. His horse plunged and he was near discovery. But, happily for him, the girl took no thought of being followed; she had found an unused trail and turned into it. For an instant Stenhart thought he had lost her and his heart beat stormily, then he sighted her through the trees. He dismounted, hid his horse in the brush and followed on foot. Ten yards up the trail she had slipped from the saddle and vanished up a steep ascent. Passing Tex, where he was cropping grass, Stenhart crept after her, treading softly, and, as he climbed, the tumult of the cataract came nearer and nearer; it must be below him now, hidden by the trees. Far up he caught a glimpse of a slender figure still ahead and he followed doggedly.

Sherwin had slept heavily, physically exhausted, and it was sunrise when he awoke. The solitude of the wooded height seemed drenched in peace. He saw only great tree-trunks about him, and the sun had not yet penetrated their dense shade. Somewhere a bird sang sweetly. For a moment it seemed impossible that he had fallen asleep with hatred in his heart, but his first waking consciousness brought it all back; he was to stay here, hidden, until he killed Stenhart! Nothing less would satisfy his thirst for vengeance.

He opened his food pack and ate sparingly; there was a lovely spring close at hand, and he lacked for nothing now. His meal finished he rose and began to explore the place; it was evident that Jordan had not returned. There was no sound but those innumerable small noises of life in the woods, and the music of the cataract far below him. He moved on in profound leisure, and since he did not now intend fight he had ample time on his hands.

Presently he came upon a rocky ledge and, as he climbed, his foot slipped, and he rolled down into some brambles and felt a strong current of air. Only slightly bruised from his fall, he rose to his knees and found that he had torn the brambles away from the open mouth of a cavern. The keen breeze that came from it lifted the hair on his forehead; there must be another opening somewhere. Curiosity made him explore carefully.

No one had known of this spot; it was webbed with cobwebs, choked with roots, and he pushed them aside and entered, stooping. To his surprise, he found himself in a cavern of considerable size. Away from it ran a passageway through which the wind blew keenly. He struck a match, found an old bit of wood on the floor, the broken root of some tree, and succeeded in firing it. Carrying his improvised torch carefully, he explored and found a twisting passage that led downward a long way. He could not follow it to the end without more light; his torch was failing him, and he recollected the candle in Mac's cabin.

He turned back at once. He had chanced on an ideal hiding place and he must know it thoroughly, know, too, if Jordan had found the other opening. Emerging, he rearranged the screen of brambles and made his way, more cautiously, toward the cabin. There was always the possibility that Jordan or his pals might return there. But it was vacant, and he had ample time to look for what he needed most, candles and matches. He found only the one half-burnt candle and two matches, evidently tossed there by the watcher after he had lighted his pipe. There was an old blanket, a remnant of Mac's camping-out there, and a coil of rope.

Sherwin stood still, staring at that coil of rope; suddenly it had an immense significance—it brought into his mind a full-fledged scheme of vengeance! The cave and the rope!

"Get a move on you! Saddle up."

"I'm sorry, Max, I must go—I'll see you again at breakfast."

"You shan't go! You're in love with that fellow!"

"You've no right to say that to me!" Jane flashed at him angrily; then she remembered that he had been ill, and relented. "It's all over, Max; can't we be friends?"

He shook his head, folding his arms and standing there, motionless. His expression was sullen, but there was a strange light in his dark eyes.

"Oh, if you don't want to be friends!" Jane turned away proudly. "I'm going out now, Max!" She lifted her chin scornfully. He was behaving like a sulky boy, she thought; she liked to see a man lose like a good sport, like—well, like a brave man!

Stenhart said nothing at all, but she was aware of his tall figure motionless there behind her. She felt his eyes on her back, but she hurried away, ran down the slope to the stable and swung herself into the saddle.

"I'll be back presently, Jose," said she lightly, giving Tex his head. The vacquero stood watching her ride off, a smile on his dark face. "She some rider!" he thought.

Tex had cleared the bridge almost at a bound. The horse was full of pep today, ready to run, but Jane rode like a boy. The man stood watching, shading his eyes with a hand burnt black by the sun. He was surprised at the way she went. So surprised that he jumped when a voice spoke sharply at his elbow.

"Saddle one of the horses, I want one right off!"

The vacquero stared. "You able to ride, Meester Stenhart?"

"Get a move on you! Saddle up."

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

"Many a young wife has been led to wonder if the baring of her soul to some sympathetic adviser might not brighten her life."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

THE FASHION today is to be psycho-analyzed. This alarming word means that whoever is restless, unsatisfied, ill-adjusted to his or her life, goes to a specialist. The specialist digs deep into the unhappy person's consciousness, asking all sorts of intimate and embarrassing questions, trying to find out what influences in the past have created her timidity, jealousy, fear, hate, or whatever else is wrong with her.

Sometimes the psycho-analyst is a person qualified by nature, science and training to help, and does help. More often he or she knows nothing, and only vaguely repeats phrases that mean nothing. Not so much from any real intention of cheating, but rather in pleased surprise that they have stumbled upon anything so easy and so lucrative.

The anxious family of the sufferer takes this very seriously. They are cheered when the analyst says hopefully: "We are coming on. We are learning to live with ourselves honestly. I think we are bringing the real cause to the light. We want to help ourselves now, and that is the great thing."

Enjoys 'Baring Her Soul.' The theater, beginning with "Lady in the Dark," has helped the spread of psycho-analysis immensely. Many movies have followed suit. Many a young wife who might, a generation ago, have accepted her lot as housekeeper and mother with philosophy and common sense, has been led to wonder if the baring of her soul to some sympathetic adviser might not brighten her life. She enjoys going back—we all do—to the disappointments of childhood, the embarrassments and humiliations of school days, the first awakening of young love. She enjoys talking about herself; who doesn't? Fortune tellers command attention because their fascinating topic is always oneself.

Some years ago the Coue doctrine took this country by storm, and persons whose lives were running smoothly went about beaming because "every day in every way" everything was "getting better and better." When the first blast of real trouble struck them they fell silent, and as the second and third blows fell—and light or heavy no one escapes them long!—the Coue formula fell away into nothingness.

Undoubtedly Coue did some good. Undoubtedly psycho-analysis helps some cases. But nine times out of ten the patient could help herself faster and cheaper than the professional can.

So in case you live far away from the nearest psycho-analyst, here are a few hints that may help you out of your own predicament at no expense at all.

Money Troubles, Jealousy.

The first cause of marital discontent, with all its ramifying lines of quarrels, hurt feelings, failures, is money. So if your husband considers you extravagant, or you consider him stingy, settle this question yourselves. You don't need a third party to tell you that hunger for pretty things all during your girlhood had made you wasteful, now that you can have them, or to tell him that his father's debts, his mother's financial worries, his own fear of hard times, have made him somewhat penurious. Work out

ANALYZE YOURSELF

In some cases of mental ills, the psycho-analyst can be of great assistance. It has become the fashion, however, for discontented, unhappy people to turn to psycho-analysis as the great cure-all of the age. It is nothing of the sort, says Miss Norris. It has a limited use. Patients must be co-operative. The practitioner must be skilled and sympathetic. Improvement often takes a long time.

Most people do not need the services of a psycho-analyst so much as they need common sense and a little soul-searching, continues Miss Norris. Generally the cause of the difficulty is well known. It may be extravagance, or jealousy, or a desire for dominance. In any case, the psycho-analyst can do little more than point the trouble. He cannot make the necessary changes in the individual's character or circumstances.

Often a husband and wife can solve their imaginary mental problems by a frank talk. Whether the difficulty arises over money, or relatives, or some personal fault, the solution can be found by bringing it out into the open. There is seldom any use going to a high-priced psycho-analyst. Better solve your own problems, concludes Miss Norris.

Your money problem on a sensible basis, and then both of you stick to your bargain, and with the money saved on the psycho-analyst go to dinner and the theater together.

A secondary great cause of married distress is jealousy. Don't give each other cause; that is the simple cure, and that is all the scientist can say. But if there is cause, a psycho-analyst can't cure it. If the grass-widow in your husband's office really has matrimonial designs on him, having the situation analyzed won't help. After the most skillful handling, the facts will remain the same; he is making love to another woman.

Jealousy was the basic trouble with a man I knew, according to the expensive psycho-analyst he consulted. The analyst told him that he had been jealous of his father and mother, his sisters and brothers, his teachers and associates. This did not, however, help him with his wife, who shortly afterward justified his jealousy by going off with another man.

Jealousy is a sin, and so are unkindness, domestic injustices, extravagance, waste, penuriousness, nagging, drink—all the other ills to which marriage stands heir. Sin is cured by grace, not by analysis. Drinking and gambling husbands know what's wrong, without long luxurious talks about it. Scolding, wasteful wives are perfectly aware why there are always storms over the household bills. Mothers and fathers who quarrel before the children, know why Joan is nervous and shy, and Tom completely unmanageable. It would save some of them a lot of money if they looked into their own hearts before laying them bare to a complete stranger.

C. Keller

ror in the recent heavyweight title fiasco.

Suppose we take up the case of the New York Yankees. I happened to be in the immediate vicinity of the Yankees, the Red Sox and the Tigers for several weeks in Florida this spring.

Everyone figured, and this included Joe McCarthy, Bill Dickey and Larry MacPhail, that the one possible weak spot in the Yankee lineup should be their pitching. Spud Chandler—and then who did they have? Their defensive fielding was an established fact. This part couldn't miss.

What about the Yankee offense? Now you must admit that Joe McCarthy, Larry MacPhail and Bill Dickey are three rather smart operators as far as baseball is concerned.

McCarthy, MacPhail and Dickey all admitted this. Nothing to worry about in the way of a run-making attack. Stirrweiss had led the American league at bat a year ago—309.

DiMaggio was a normal .340 hitter. Etten, Gordon and Henrich were at least .285 hitters. Keller was a .300 hitter. Rizzuto had been a .310 hitter. The team average should have been around .280 or .285.

Mystery of the Yankees

So what happens? Nearing the end of July the team batting average of the Yankees is under .238. They are far below the Athletics and the White Sox. Outside of Charlie Keller they stand with a flock of .233 hitters, taken as an average.

Yet most of these players were once dangerous each time they moved to the plate. They were batters to be feared. Today almost any one with a right or a left arm still hanging on can stop them cold.

What has happened to the old-fashioned Yankee attack? Practically every member of the squad is a friend of mine. It isn't a matter of dissipation or lack of determination. They are giving the game all they have.

On a general average they are smart, intelligent, hustling ball players. They feel lower than MacPhail or Bill Dickey feel. Their reputations, which means their living, is at stake. But they can't hit.

You can understand one or two men moving into a batting slump. How can anyone explain practically an entire team taking the soapy chute at bat? There is no longer any question but that the tropical trip to Panama took a heavy toll.

Those who went to Panama reported to St. Petersburg early in March in July condition. They were too far ahead of any training schedule. I don't believe this mistake will ever be repeated. Anyway it is only a part of the answer. It can't explain the entire story.

When 11 ball players, who should range somewhere between .280 and .340, drop below .240—experienced, veteran stars who have been through the fire before—you wade right up to your neck in what is technically known as a quandary—whatever a quandary is—trying to find the answer.

Look at the Red Sox!

You can't blame this on war years because in the same spring and summer interim, the Red Sox have placed five hitters among the first ten. The Yankees have had only one hitter—Charlie Keller—among the first 10.

The Yankees have been down slightly lower than the White Sox were in 1906, when they were known as the "Hitless Wonders." But the "Hitless Wonders" had Ed Walsh, Nick Altrock and Doc White who were pitching four and five-hit games.

If any three of the 11 Yankee hitters expected to bat from .280 to .340 had only moved up in the .280 class, many a ball game, now lost, could have been saved. This amazing reversal of form has the usually sane and able Bill Dickey baffled.

Bill, being a veteran who has always used his head, can understand two or three members of a team in a three-months slump. But as he shakes his Arkansas head, he can't quite understand 10 or 11 from one squad forgetting what the old ash furniture means, and how it should be used.
