New Taft-Hartley Battle Looms; Solons Ridicule Recession Idea; Dictator Feared in Defense Plan

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

TAFT-HARTLEY:

Another Try

The administration hadn't given up, despite a humiliating setback in the senate by Taft-Hartley law supporters. It was reported that President Truman's congressional aides were planning another try at repealing the measure, but had reached no decision.

THIS CAME to light after House Speaker Sam Rayburn concluded a conference with the President. The decision on a new repealer effort was to await further confer-ences with labor committee members in both houses.

While the persistence of the administration might be comendable, the wisdom in any further effort toward a Taft-Hartley repealer was doubtful. A majority of top leaders had conceded there was little hope of getting the bill changed at this session of congress, and all, including administration leaders, were willing to make the question an issue in the 1950 congressional elections.

THE RESULT of the vote on changing the Taft-Hartley labor law was confusing to the average observer of the political scene. If labor had played as important a part as it was conceded in the election of President Truman-and with congressional elections up next year-how could so many senators have found the courage to fly into the face of what might seem certain defeat?

On the other hand, if labor's role in politics is as negligible as others claim, why was the administration pressing so hard for the Taft-Hartley repealer. One thing appeared certain: There were many congressmen sufficiently unimpressed with labor's political importance that they didn't mind going contrary to labor's wishes on the Taft-Hartley

RECESSION:

Ho, Ho, Ho!

With unemployment figures standing at the highest peak in 11 years, and many nationwide organizations and national leaders casting about for a bulwark against economic hazards, congressional leaders were laughing at the idea the nation might be edging into a depression.

THEY had just conferred with President Truman and upon emerging from the conference ridiculed the notion that all might not be as rosy as possible with the nation's economic picture.

If the lawmakers were out on a limb, they were way out, for House Speaker Rayburn and the senate Democratic leader, Scott Lucas, minced no words in expressing their optimism.

"WITH 58 million people employed in industry and 30 million farmers with money to pay for latever they need, I'll be-I see how you can call it a recession," Rayburn declared.

Said Lucas: "If it is, it's the most prosperous one we've ever experi-

MEANWHILE, it was said President Truman was preparing a spe-cial economic message for delivery to congress. It was expected to carry recommendations for dealing with declining prices and the unemployment situation.

Out of all this came repetition of the additional-taxes proposal. Asked about that, Rayburn said it had yet to be determined. He did not make it clear whether he meant President Truman is reconsidering his plea for four billion dollars in additional taxes a year, or whether the matter is still up in the air in

NEW HOMES:

More Cash

Buyers planning to finance homes through FHA-insured mortgages may have to make larger down payments from now on. THE federal housing administration had cautioned its underwriters to consider declining construction costs when appraising houses for insured loans.

The result, the agency said, would be lower mortgages on many new homes. If the builder fails to cut his selling price in line with lower costs, the down payment will be higher. THE decline in building costs and materials have been noted since late last year, the underwriters were told. Most materials are plentiful, it was said, and production rates of workers in many sections have improved.

DEFENSE:

Dictator Feared

In nearly all discussions concernunification of the nation's armed services, one thing stood out -many congressmen feared the possibility of a "military dictator" if framers of a unification bill weren't careful.

THIS feeling was put into words by Georgia's Representative Vinson who proposed several amendments to the pending bill, declaring that he wanted to make sure no military dictator ever arises in the United States. Vinson, a Democrat, is chairman of the house armed services committee.

The amendments he proposed would take the armed forces out from beyond the recently enacted government reorganization law, and put them beyond a shuffling by President Truman; put a civilian chairman over the joint chiefs of staff, a body which includes the highest officers of the army, navy and air force, and fix the membership of the national security council by law, requiring that other members be subject to approval by the

THESE AMENDMENTS were proposed to a unification bill which already has passed the senate. The measure is one which would increase the direct authority of the secretary of defense over the armed forces.

Louis Johnson, who holds that post, has told the house committee he needs that authority to make the 1947 unification act work. He pledged to save over a billion dollars a year in operation of the military services if the bill were passed, —if and a civilian manager put in charge.

INTELLECT:

Women's Best?

If two Indiana university professors are to be believed, then the male of the species must face an unpleasant fact-namely, that girls (or women) can reason better than boys (or men).

THE professorial gentlemen claimed, and cited figures for proof, that the female is the superior of the male in the reasoning department, and this despite ten million jokes, books, philosophical discourses and general experience to the contrary.

The professors say unequivocally that given a set of circumstances, the lassies can come up with more logical answers than boys can do. These gentlemen are Dr. William H. Fox and Prof. Nicholas A. Fattu of the research division of Indiana university's school of edueation.

They made the tests in two high schools, one in a city of 11,000 in north central Indiana, and the other in a consolidated rural school near Indianapolis.

TO USE the professors' own words in the report:

"Scores on the interpretation of date test, seeking to establish their relationship to measures of achievement, personality and interest, found no differentiation . there was a clear cut advantage for girls in both schools in ability to reason, to see relationships, to make comparisons and to suspend judgment until pertinent facts are collected."

To which many a male will counter: Too bad they seem to lose those faculties when they grow up.

MUNICIPAL INCOME

Property Tax Declines as Revenue Source

American cities were facing an unpleasant fact-general property taxation as a source of revenue was proving inadequate to meet municipal needs.

The International City Managers' association reported the finding after a survey of municipal-revenue sources. Data was gathered from

In five years from 1942 to 1947, the proportion of municipal income obtained from property taxation compared with that from other sources dropped 8.4 per cent. Slightly more than half of municipal revenues now come from property taxes. In cities of over 25,000 population revenue has increased census returns and from reporting by 13.2 per cent, while the property tax increased by only 5.9 per cent.

CORN:

Reaching Up ". . . And the corn is as high

As an elephant's eye . . ." Those lines from a hit tune from the musical "Oklahoma!" give an indication of the jubilation in the corn country when the stalks are high, and more than a hint of the crop's importance.

THE federal government also is acutely conscious of the importance of the corn crop to the nation's economy-so when it was reported that this year's corn crop was reaching for the skies, there was general rejoicing.

It is traditional with the men who grow corn that if the stalks are "knee high by the Fourth of July" an excellent crop is in prospect. But this year, if that adage were true. the abundance of the crop would be amazing. For by July Fourth, the corn stood not just "knee high," but almost shoulder high. From all sections of the major corn beltextending from Ohio westward to Nebraska-the word was the same: the corn crop was off to an excellent start.

GRAIN experts considered it possible that last year's fabulous crop of three billion, 650 million bushel might be topped by the 1949 crop Last year's crop had much to do with cracking the postwar agricultural price inflation and is believed by many to have played a key part in keeping Thomas E. Dewey out of the White House.

While prospects were considered splendid, the cautious were knocking on wood for two reasons. These were that Iowa and Illinois both have extensive corn-borer infesta tion, and subsoil moisture was deficient in some areas, making the crop more dependent than usual on good rains in July and August.

TOKYO ROSE: Sitting Pretty

Whatever had been her effect in bringing death to American GI's in the South Pacific, there was to be no death penalty for Mrs. Iva D'Aquino-known to the world as Tokyo Rose.

SHE was on trial in San Francisco on a charge of treason because the government of the United States contends she broadcasted for the Japanese in the "hope to demoralize and discourage allied military men and to impair the ability of the United States to wage war against its enemies.'

In a manner of speaking, Tokyo Rose was sitting pretty. The government prosecutors said they would not ask for the death penalty, so all the woman faced was imprisonment and fine or possibly

A newspaper story of her arraignment said she wore a "tail-ored gray mixed plaid suit with gilded buttons. Her freshly-shampooed hair was topped with a gold beret. She sat demurely at her attorney's elbow as if she were his secretary.'

ALL throughout the war there were mixed claims about her influence on GI morale. Many servicemen declared they "got a kick out of her broadcasts—chiefly for laughs," while others blamed her for widespread demoralization among the Allied personnel.

In view of the Judy Coplon conviction on a charge of treason in connection with the Russian government, things might go hard with Tokyo Rose in the length-ofterm department; but with the specter of death removed as punishment for a crime for which death might well have been expected, the blow couldn't be too severe.

Heave-Ho!

Julian Wilson, Cleveland newspaper photographer, is almost in the news as often as he photographs it. Here he is getting the old heave-ho from the Cleveland ball park after dispute with umpires Art Pas-sarella and Eddie Rommel about how far he should venture onto the field.

NEW PARTY:

Target: Poverty

Like an item from the past was an announcement from Columbus, Ohio, that the Townsend clubs had decided to establish a new political party in the United States. Not too long ago the nation's press was full of stories of the Townsend movement-a drive by Dr. Francis E. Townsend and his followers to obtain a nice pension for everyone over 60 years of age. It drew many followers and was a political factor.

President's Promises

CANDIDATES for public office are, as a rule, long on promises, but when elected they are, also as a rule, short on performance. That charge can not be laid at the door of President Truman. He made promises during the campaign, many of them, and he has made strenuous efforts to fulfill those promises.

The President promised labor that, if given a Democratic congress, he would have the Taft-Hartley law repealed, and the Wagner act re-enacted. He tried to make good on that promise, but congress, the one he asked for, failed him.

He promised a federal housing program of ambitious proportions, and he has urged and pleaded with congress to enable him to keep that promise to the extent of 46 billion dollars that we do not have.

He promised to take care of all our dector's and hospital bills connected with all our ills and accidents, with provision that we pay for it indirectly. If that is not done it will not be because the President did not try, but because an obstreperous congress would not

He promised equal rights legislation; more pay to those receiving social security checks; an expansion of social security operations, and other ambitious welfare programs. In every case he has tried to do what he promised he would do if elected and given a Democratic con-

He promised the farmers higher prices for the products of their farms, and the housewives lower prices for the foods for their families. That was a hard one, but he provided a solution, though it would cost the federal treasury some billions of dollars, but congress has, so far, refused to accept the President's solution.

Such are some of the promises the president made as a candidate. As an elected official he has made an effort at fulfillment, only to be blocked by congress. In Washington some say he is a stubborn individual, who is merely butting his head against a stone wall. Personally I would not call him stubborn but would say that he is making an effort to make good on the promises he made to numerous classes when seeking their support. In doing that, he has largely established a precedent, for which he is entitled to commendation.

I am inclined to agree with congress, and believe that to make good on the President's promises would wreck our American economy, and land us in the bankruptcy courts. Regardless of what the results might be, I do commend the President for his efforts to make good on his campaign promises. It is rather a new experience for the people of the nation.

Arbitrary Labor Bosses

When our public officials admit their impotence to protect the health and lives of American citizens, on American soil, it is time for such action on the part of congress as may be needed to provide a cure for such impotence. Hawaii is a part of the United States; the people are American citizens; they are dependent on the mainland for food, and other supplies essential to life. Harry Bridges, the Australian born boss of the longshoremen's union, and others of that Communist-infested labor organization, decree the needed supplies for the people of those American islands may not be loaded or unloaded on or off ships, regardless of their needs.

President Truman has expressed his sympathy for the people of Hawaii, but says there is no law under which he can assist them in securing needed food. He says, in effect, the authority of Harry Bridges and his co-boxses of the longshoremen is greater than that of the President of the United States in a situation that affects the people of the nation. The President is wrong. The law he has tried so hard to repeal provides the remedy, but if it did not congress should see that he was given such authority. The arbitrary action of labor bosses that affect the rights, interests and well being of the general public cannot be countenanced in a nation of free people. It is time the labor bosses found that to be true.

His statements would quite definitely indicate that Elder Statesman James Byrnes is not enthusiastic over the efforts of the "do gooders" to pass out government funds to all who ask.

There may be floods, or droughts, or untimely frosts, or destroying insects, but despite all the ills to which the American farm is heir, the nation usually comes through with a satisfactory crop of food products, for which a hungry world waits.

Elmer.-Are you a good psychi-

Doctor.-Yes, I never played first base in my life. Elmer.-What position did you Doctor .- I was a southpaw pitcher in my college days. Elmer .- That does it! I must have my gun back . . . Please, my gun! . . . It rests my nerves so!

Doctor.-Quiet! I'm trying to help you out of a very serious jam. You shot a ballplayer and can go to prison.

Elmer .- Do they put people in prison for shooting ballplayers?

Doctor.—If they didn't some clubs would be bumped off in a single afternoon. Now, listen, there must be a psychopathic reason for what you did. As a child how was your home life, and you'd better make it bad. Was there, for instance ever a Christmas when your folks

Doctor.-Did your father ever read the baseball summaries aloud? Did you ever live in Brooklyn back in the days of those eccentric infields? Was anybody in your family a baseball fanatic?

Elmer.-I had an uncle who used to recite that Costello thing en-titled "Who's on First?" Doctor.-Good. I'll make a note of that. In your infancy were you. ever chased with a ball bat for not doing your homework? Elmer.—I seem to remember something like that. And I recall that as a little child I was taught to walk too early. I developed an aversion to walks. Doctor.—That would explain it if you shot a pitcher. In school did you ever have a teacher who wore a mask and chest protector? Elmer.-No, but I had a kindergarten principal who carried a sawed-off bat and insisted he had been ordered to bunt.

Doctor.-In your immature years did you ever play softball?

Elmer.-Yes. I was such a poor hitter I never got to first except when hit by the pitcher. And I never got to second because there wasn't a .300 hitter on the team.

Doctor .- Now it's all clear. If you ever were to get to second base you knew you would have to shoot the first baseman . . . The idea took possession of you! . . . It became an urge! . . . You couldn't resist it! . . . We can explain everything to the court. You are as good as free.

Elmer.—Goody! Goody! Can I have my gun back? Doctor.-Probably, but we may have to switch you to some other league!

Top Sport

In the event you've ever engaged in the age-old argument as to what is America's top outdoor sport, here's some information that'll do you good, if you say "fishing" is tops:

According to a poll recently conducted by the American magazine, fishing is absolutely America's top outdoor sport. It is a billion-dollar industry and sportsmen who fished spent 1.35 billion dellars in 1948 in pursuit of their sport. Sportsmen who hunted and fished, both, spent 10 million dollars more than was spent for the combined sports of bowling, golf, skiing and motor Hunting ranked fourth in the number of devotees and expenditures, the nimrods having spent 750 million dollars.

Hunting Quiz How many of the following questions about shooting small game animals and birds can you answer correctly?

QUESTIONS: 1. At what range are ducks and geese usually taken? 2. How fast is a canvasback traveling when he's crossing your sights with the throttle wide open? 3. How many pellets does it take to kill a mallard? 4. What is a reasonable top range for shooting rabbits and other upland game?

5. What are the best shot sizes for upland birds, small game and wildfowl? ANSWERS:

1. At least 35 yards and frequently more. This means you should use large shot, to insure a clean kill, and fire a dense pattern. That's why many duck hunters recommend a full-choke shotgun.

2. From 90 to 100 feet a second. Mallards, black ducks, spoonbills, Canada geese, brant, bluewing teal and greenwing teal may hit 90 feet a second; redheads scurry along at 75 to 95 feet each second.

3. Tests made with Western cartridge company Super-X ammunition show that an average of five No. 4 pellets are required for a clean kill on a mature mallard at 60 yards. Head shots, of course, are exceptions.

4. Forty Yards. Squirrels, quail grouse, partridges, woodcock, snipe, rail, plover and doves also are usually taken up to this same top range. You want a fast load; small shot sizes in a modified choke, improved cylinder, or under some conditions, cylinder barrels. Recommended are 12, 16, 20 and 28 gauge shotguns with 26, 28 and 30 inch barrels. 5. For normal range and usage, it has been found these sizes are best: For snipe, woodcock, rails, shore birds, No. 8 or 9. For doves, quail in late season, large shore birds and small winged pests, No. 7, 71/2, and 8. For pheasants, prairie chickens, grouse, rabbits and squirrels, No. 4, 5, 6 and 7. For turkeys and large furred vermin, BB, 2 and 4. For duck shooting over decoys, No. 5 and 6. For all other duck shooting, No. 4. For geese, BB, 2 and 4.

Stream Fishing

Whether or not the streams you fish appear stagnant in mid-summer, certain fish usually will seek highly-aerated waters during hot weather—and it is in such waters that the angler should exercise his best skill and efforts if he expects to creel any fish.

It has been the experience of practically every veteran angler that the best mid-summer catches of bass are taken from eddy waters around rocks, logs, root-wads and along stream edges where plants and roots combine to provide cover and accessible food. Undoubtedly bass frequent such places for a combination of both food and the aerated condition of the water. Even so, many anglers pass up such spots in their hurry to seek large, deep holes, which may prove not half so productive.

Channel catfish and jack salmon are usually found during the daytime along the bottom of deeper holes of water; but as night falls and for long periods thereafter, they come out into the shallows and riffles to feed.

Since predacious fish feed most heartily at night, anglers find the beginning of this period, and its end, as the most productive periods.

Bait Trouble?

If you've been having bait trouble, why not try gar flesh, leeches, goldfish or gooseberries?

According to the Missouri game and fish division bulletin, they all work. Two Cameron fishermen reported catching several catfish on bait they made from cutting up a 46-inch gar. Catfish also were caught on Leches and goldfish and, at Milan, gooseberries took several

CHAPTER I

What a softie going home makes me! The old neighborhood, the old hedge-rows, even the corner posts. Why, I helped set that corner post! I remember the "deadman" at the school picnic, strawberry festival, foot of it. You can pretty well tell a farmer by his corner posts. If his Lucy spoke a piece. I can see her corner posts are firmly anchored, stand straight and are braced and at the head of the room; the women double-wired, then you can know the man is a good farmer. You see steps forward and makes a bow that corner post there, leaning now and wobbly in the knees? Well, I comes up slowly and gracefully, helped Newt Kennedy plant that and says: "I will endeavor to repost. It chokes me all up, when I cite 'Bingen on the Rhine.'" It was think of those days, me helping Newt. Seems funny that looking at an old woodpecker-eaten corner post would choke a person up, doesn't it? Newt my boyhood hero! I wish I could have one now so great. Big brawny, fun-loving, tousle-haired, tenderhearted, boy-understanding Newt. I thought he was wonderful. I still do. I walk down the road I know so well and look at the corner post and a miracle happens. Newt is there and I am there. People don't set corner posts as well as they used to. Or so it seems to me. We dug them deep then, stood them straight and wired them well. Here I am mooning over the old days and getting all goose-eyed. But I don't care. Some of my tenderest memories are back here on the old farm and with my neighbor Newt Kennedycertainly the best a boy ever had. And certainly he was the best hay pitcher who ever bent a hickory handle. When Newt'd set his threetined fork into a mound of timothy and heave at that handle, the handle would bend up and the hay cherry tree—as thrilling a sight as anybody'd want to see. No one could sit up with the sick the way Newt could. Ma'd look out the window and say, "There's a lantern coming down the road." It'd be Newt going to sit up with a sick neighbor. The next morning New't be going back dangling the dead lantern. Pa would say, "Homer, holler him in." Sitting at the table, he'd have a cup of coffee and tell us they'd sent for old Mr.

would go, as big at the top as a

Scott's kinfolks. A hush now. . . . When Newt'd told the news and was ready to start, Pa'd say, "Homer, do you want to help Newt chore? I expect he's kind of tired, sittin' up all night." Pretty soon Newt and I would be walking down the road toward Newt's house, me carrying the lantern.

The rest of the family would be up and we would all sit down to eat. That was nice. You can't chore on an empty stomach. Most people in our section, when they ate, didn't talk; just flew into the food. But the Kennedy family did. There was more table laughing at their house than at any home in the neighborhood. But they managed to be good farmers. And that was what everybody wanted to be-a good farmer. If you were not a good farmer, you might as well move to town and get on the jury panel. That's the way we looked at things. But if you owned land and had money in the bank, then everything else was

Life Was Fun—

At the Kennedys The Kennedys were about an average sized family; two girls and a boy; then there was Grandpa who lived in the L and smoked dogleg. He had been a covered-wagon pioneer and had shot buffaloes and had skinned them with his own hands. On the wall in his room was a skull with a hole. I loved to look up at the skull and the hole and try to get him to say he had shot the buffalo, but he wouldn't quite do that. Sometimes he would ask me if I wanted to help him burn the worms off the black walnut trees. He would take a shovel, fill it with ashes, then wet the ashes with coal oil. Then he'd hold the blazing shovel under the nests; the worms would begin to heave. Sometimes it almost made me sick. But I always wanted to go. First there was Newt. Everybody called him "Newt." Pa and Ma let me call him that, but they made me call the other neighbors "Mr." Knabb, "Mr." Willhoyte, "Mr." Shell and so on. Even Mr. Shannon, who lived on forty acres and worked out by the day, was called "Mr." Shannon. But everybody called Minnie Kennedy—"Mrs. Kennedy." She had been a "town" girl and hadn't been born on a farm.

Ida was the older girl; she was the prettiest girl in the neighborhood; when there was a voting at a cove oyster supper, Ida always won. She had big blue eyes and brown hair, and the heartiest, loveliest laugh anybody ever had in the world. Also she was the most popular girl in the neighborhood; the boys rode or drove their horses when they went to see her and tied them to the hitch rack; there a horse would stand and gnaw the courting Ida.

good-looking as Ida and not so quick with the warm laugh Ida had. But she was the talented one in the family. She was taking Delsarte. No church social, Sunday or box supper was a success unless now at the quilting bee, standing stop work, a hush falls, then Lucy lower than the quilting frames, considered polite to say, "I will endeavor," instead of blurting out, "I'll recite." She makes one step forward and lifts her eyes above the heads of the people. In a few moments everybody is choked up over the soldier of the Legion dying away off in Algiers and wanting somebody to take a message back to his family. When she finishes-such a hand clapping! Her mother sits there trying to pretend she isn't proud. Everybody knows Lucy is going far. Some day she may even win the state declamation contest. Harlan was a year older than I was; but much stronger, for I was peaked. Harlan never read a book in his life (except at school, kind of) but that was all right; he knew things I didn't know and could do things I couldn't dream of doing.

The Kennedy home was ten minutes down the road from ours. How many times I've paddled along that road, hurrying when getting near, taking my time coming back. coming back meant work, endless work it seemed to me. I would help work at the Kennedy's, but it never seemed like work. But ah! at that age nobody wants to work at home. It was hard to work at home; but it was fun to work at Newt's. How many nights I've stayed at the Kennedy home and never did I stay there when it wasn't fun. Summer and winter I've plodded that stretch of road; in winter I got out and helped scoop. For I didn't want a road block between us and the Kennedys'. Sometimes it seemed I was there as much as I was at home. There was always something going on at the Kennedy house! it made ours seem dull. I was not allowed to have a firearm, but Harlan had a muzzle-loading musket that would kick the shoulder off a mule. But that didn't keep us from firing the shoulder-killer. Sometimes at school we would peel off our shirts and show the other boys the black and blue marks. It made us heroes. And never-never-did Newt tell us we couldn't go out and bang away . yet Pa wouldn't let me keep a gun on the place.

More Memories— Not All Pleasant

No girls at our house, so, in a way, Ida and Lucy were my sisters. They were both older and to me. tremendously glamorous. Especially Ida, who had so many beaus.

Softie, indeed. Sometimes in this harsh world it doesn't hurt a person to lean a little to the sentimen-

So now I am at "home"; for that is what the old farm, the old neighborhood and the old neighbors are. I like to walk down the road by myself-walk between the osage hedgerows and the cornfields and the lespedeza-and look in reality at the things burned so deep in my memory. But it is not all pleasant. For instance, there is a sight that takes my heart and squeezes till my heart hurts. For this is the slough hitch rack while the boy was in where Newt dug a ditch to help carry off the surface water. The

Lucy was the second girl, not so | grass was slough grass; a plow had never been set in it. It wasn't much of a ditch; really just a slit in the ground, five inches wide and a quarter of a mile long. That five inches was the width of a tiling spade. But the ground was laid open like a wound; and the ground began to "wash"—"erode" we later learned to call it. That little fiveinch ditch is now a monstrous, angry gully; the black loam is going steadily-every day, every rain -into the Gulf of Mexico.

And the geographical location, for those who may wish to know, is northwest Missouri. It is in the great corn-producing section—the black loam belt.

I turn out, cars whiz by me, and I think of the first car I ever saw pound along the road; and I think of the horses it scared till they shook and I think of what the farmers said-which was enough to make the drivers shake. There is the house. Yes, the Kennedy mansion; for their house was bigger and finer than ours. It had two stories; ours one. And theirs had two porches; one in front and one behind. How many hours I've sat on that front porch and turned the ice-cream freezer. That yellow trim that used to look so nice . . . well, some of it's loose; certainly all of it is dingy; up yonder in the eaves, is a woodpecker hole. One of the lightning rods is out of kilter. Newt would never have allowed that. And the picket fence is shot. I go in. There is the exact spot where the base-burner stood. But now it is a crude-oil burner with not a square inch of isinglass in its ghastly body. How many times I've lain on the floor and gazed into the mysteries of the glowing coals and gone to sleep and been carried upstairs and put to bed.

Unconsciously I glance up at the ceiling and my mind flies back to the quiet Sunday afternoon when the Kennedy family was gone and when Harlan and I crept into the sitting room to get the musket off the wall—on Sunday when no gun was allowed to be fired. Whang! it went off, tearing a hole in the ceiling as big as a sausage cake. I can't think of that moment yet without my soul shriveling to the size of a peanut. I look up. Thank God! no hole now.

There is the table where the old stereoscope lay and beside it the box of "views." How many times I have jiggled the slide-holder back and forth and gazed at "Niagara Falls in the Winter Time," "Our Martyr President's Funeral Procession-President William McKinley," and at "The Buffalo Horse Fair."

Yes, this is the room-the very room—that my heart goes flying back to, for once I lived and died in this room. And Newt did too, I think. I would like to say this was the first time I remember my neighbor, but I can't, for I can no more remember the first time I saw Newt than I can my own father. He was always, just as my father was. And he would always be, just as my father would. . . . But certainly the incident I am preparing to relate was almost the first to make a vivid impression on me.

A Body Is Found; Epidemic Strikes Close

I'll call it the Vaccinating. For that is what we called it. And here it is, as it comes winging back to me through the years. Yes, getting old. But not in memory. That is very new and bright, indeed. And pre-

I am shocked, as I look back across the valley of years, to remember how crude were our medical accommodations but it never occurred to us they were crude; in fact, we were thankful we were so fortunate and got along so well.

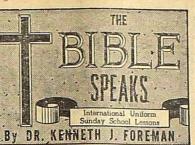

Smallpox was what we dreaded most. When it struck, there were stories of people being buried at night; and of a father carrying a child in a coffin on his shoulder because no one would go near; then burying the child alone. One day smallpox struck close and terrifyingly. A farmer climbed the ladder into his mow to hav the horses and there was a dead man. The coroner was sent for; the neighbors stood around waiting and talking. The coroner made an examination, then went away as fast as he could and brought back the county doctor. The body was got out of haymow and taken to the paupers'

And now, in no time at all, everybody had to be vaccinated. But this had been done before, so our people knew how to go about it. A man was chosen from every neighborhood to go to town, get the antitoxin and have the county doctor show him how to vaccinate.

Usually the same person in a neighborhood did the vaccinating each time, but our man had moved away, so Newt was chosen. I can imagine (now that I am older and possibly a little wiser) how he dreaded to go and yet how much he wanted to go.

Right With God

Lesson for July 24, 1949

"GET RIGHT with God" is an expression which has been sometimes used by people. It is not a coarse or cheap idea. It is the most important thing you can do. Think what it means to be wrong with God! That means to be out of harmony with his will, go-ing "across the grain of reality" as the old Greeks used to say. To be wrong with God means to Dr. Foreman be a rebel against reality, to have the power of the universe working against you, and so to be headed for sure destruction. Wrong with God, you cannot win. Right with God, you cannot lose. To be right with God means to be in line with the purpose that runs through all things; it means in the simple language of the Bible, to live as a child of God.

Mule or Man?

THERE are two ways in which man can come into line, so to speak, with God. One is by being whipped into it, and the other is by a free act of will. The poet of the 32nd Psalm begs his readers not to be like mules or colts (Ps. 32:9). These animals can be broken and controlled by their masters. But they do not understand what is going on, and if left to themselves they would never serve.

They have to be caught, harnessed and driven. But God does not want to treat human beings like that. Getting right with God is not a business of getting into harness, being beaten into walking on the right

That is not God's way. He pleads with us through his inspired poet: Be not as mules—be men!

Facing Up to Yourself

THE short good Bible word for being wrong with God is Sin. The very first step toward being right with God is to see yourself as you are. No one ever went to a doctor, till he at least suspected he was sick. No one ever went to school of his own accord who thought he knew everything. And no one will come to God who thinks he is as good as he needs to be. When life goes hard with us, when everything about our life seems twisted and rotten, we make all sorts of excuses for ourselves, we lay the blame on our parents or our friends of the social and economic system in which we live (doubtless all these have a share in creating our troubles), but we hate to look at ourselves in the mirror of truth.

This comes first: recognizing our own wrongness, not just weakness but wrongness. When we reach the point where we can say with the Psalmist, "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me," then we are on the right road.

"Hide Thy Face"

THERE are two things we never hear about in the Bible. One is that God never forgave anyone who did not repent, and the other is that he refused to forgive any one who did repent. But repentance is not merely regretting that a wrong was done; still less regretting being caught. Repentance, the kind the Bible describes (as in these Psalms for example), means a complete change of attitude, it means coming over on God's side and seeing sin the way he sees it, seeing life the way he sees it.

God's forgiveness is not of the grudging, remembering, reminding kind. But condoning and forgiving are still a world apart. Condoning means saying in effect, It is all right, it makes no difference, you can go on sinning for all I care. Some human "forgiveness" may be like that, but not God's. His forgiveness is based on real repentance, and the aim of it is to save the sinner from his sin.

Plenteous in Mercy

THE Psalmists saw clearly what kind of God we have. He is not like the holder of a mortgage waiting till the first time some payment is deferred gives him a chance to pounce down and evict his tenant. We are not criminals against whom God is a prosecuting attorney, trying to pile up evidence against us. "If thou shouldest mark iniquities, who shall stand?" We are children, lost and wandering children, rebellious and disobedient children, but still children; and God holds open the door of mercy.

Might Have Been Highest

If Aconagua hadn't "blown its top," its name might be far more famous than it is today. This Argentine mountain might have been renowned as the world's highest peak. According to World Book encyclopedia, Aconagua, highest mountain in the western hemisphere, erupted many centuries ago with such force that it totally destroyed its summit and all signs of its volcanic crater.

The easing of housing problems and a improvement of business conditions at Ottowas Beach, was reported by Mrs. Defiabaugh, wife of Coach Mark Defiabaugh, of Tawas City High School, last week. Little Holly Defiabaugh's overalls, hanging on the line suited the wrens for a home and they moved in, building a nest in one overall leg. So now Holly has a new pair of overalls and the wrens a new home, with the Defiabaugh's following closely the antics of their new friends.

Observe Farm Safety Week-July 24-30

Adoption of safer ways of working and living are being advocated as the main goal of Farm Safety Week, July 24-30.

Harold Clark, county agricultural agent, is joining with local agencies to urge Iosco county farmers to check on their safety

The annual cost of accidents affecting farm people—including fire, motor vehicle and property damage—is approximately one million dollars, or about $35 per farm, resident farm resident.

Farms are apt to contain a number of potential hazards—the little things that should be repaired but have not been.

Broken steps are dangerous, the agent says. Keep ladders, railings and floors in a safe condition at all times. Falls cause more than a third of all fatal farm accidents. Cattle may be kind and gentle most of the time but it doesn't pay to take chances. Approach all farm animals cautiously with a friendly word or pat. You may be kicked or gored unless you do!

Keep hands, feet, and fingers away from moving machinery. If something goes wrong, turn off the machine before you investigate. The safe way is the fastest way in the long run.

Farm Safety Week is being observed in all parts of the nation from July 24-30. Agent

Harmony, Balance Urged in Room Decor

By Ertta Haley

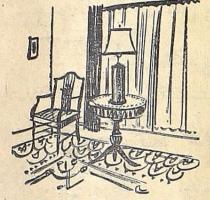

"MY HOME looks just too plain duce color and design to the best advantage?" Here's a question which many women ask when they start to look critically at the rooms and wonder just how to go about achieving beauty they've seen and read about.

First of all, we must consider that there are different kinds of beauty, and what may look good with one room is not proper for another kind. To illustrate, quaint prints or faded out colors which appear old-fashioned would not be appropriate at all in a modern set-

On the other hand, the luscious textures and colors so fitting in modern rooms would not add much to a Colonial home or one done in French provincial or 18th century

Beauty is an individual matter, and it should express the personalities of those who live in the home. With good taste to guide you, you may select those things which will create the most pleasing effects. If you're uncertain about the choice, some study and guidance will put you on the right track.

Give Best Impression With Single Idea The best effect in the home is achieved with a single outstanding idea. If you have a lot of ideas flitting around your head, let one of them take precedence before you start renovating. Too many ideas, even though good, can ruin the room's decor because they will create a confused impression.

If you are using pattern in the room, you are safest in introducing it in the drapes. Stripes, checks, plaids or dots are safest to use if you are inexperienced. Fern and foliage patterns are often among the best designed. Stylized patterns and geometric patterns are frequently desirable. Good period patterns are freuently available for period rooms, and these are fairly easy to select. If you have a valuable Oriental rug, however, you do not want to introduce either too much pattern or color in the draperies. In this case, the rug is the main item in Easily Cleaned Drapes

These handsome draperles of delicate color on a pure white background do away with all concern about grime, sun and rain. Made of vinylite plastic drapery material in decorator colors and designs, they can do much toward putting attractive window treatments within the reach of modest budgets. Available in a host of patterns, both ready-made and by the yeard, the material wipes clean with a damp cloth. It may be used for bedspreads, dust ruffles and dressing table skirts as well as for draperies.

Wife Support - Double Trouble

By Will Bernard, LL.B.

May a Man be Forced To Support Two Wives At the Same Time?

A young couple were divorced, and the wife was granted a monthly sum as alimony. After a few years, the man remarried. Finding it difficult to support both wives, he asked the court to relieve him of his alimony payments. However, when it appeared that the first wife had no other source of income, the court ruled that the husband must continue making the payment. The judge said: "A man may not shun the marital obligations undertaken is a Hospital to Blame For Letting a Smallpox Patient Escape?

A man caught smallpox and was confined to a special wing of a private hospital on the outskirts of town. One night the man's nurse fell asleep on the job, and the delirious patient wandered out into the fields. He finally was picked up at a farmhouse—but not until he had passed the dread disease on to the farmer. After the farmer had recovered, he sued the hospital for damages. The hospital protested that it wasn't responsible for the acts of a delirious patient, but the court disagreed and granted the farmers claim. The judge said the. vicious animal loose on the streets! | and song!"

May a Chef Collect Compensation if Assaulted By the Dishwasher?

During the breakfast rush, a restaurant chef became annoyed by a mounting stack of dirty dishes. He told the dishwasher to move them out of his way, but the latter was slow to comply. When the chef grew more insistent, the dishwasher became very angry and finally gave his tormentor a jolting uppercut to the jaw. The chef was injured, and put in a claim for workmen's compensation. At the hearing the restaurant owner opposed the claim, saying that the dispute was purely a personal matter between the two employees. But the court granted the chef an award.

Do Barmaids Have the Same Rights as Bartenders?

The owner of a barroom decided to economize by having his wife help him at the bar. As it happened, there was a local law prohibiting the employment of women to serve liquor. Somebody reported in one relationship by contracting the matter to the police-and the man was arrested. At the trial, he insisted that the law was unconstitutional because it discriminated against women for no good reason. If men can serve whiskey, he damanded, why can't women? But the court saw things differently and found the man guilty as charged. The judge pointed out that the law was designed to prevent "the hilarhospital was just as much to blame ity and disturbance so often caused as a circus would be for letting a by the combination of wine, women, interesting texture, even though done in a single, solid color, and this may be true of the drapes, too.

One or two colors in a room are far more effective than three or four. The colors which are related in rugs, upholstery and drapery are essential for beauty, which to a great extent depends upon the principles of unity, balance and

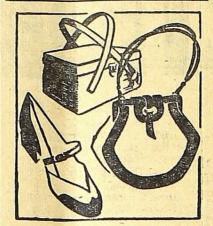

Even though a home is completely free from prints, it can still be a thing of rare beauty. So much interest in weaves and textures in various fabrics are available to-day, that beauty may lie in them.

Whenever you choose prints, be certain that the print suits the fabric. Certain prints may be too heavy for sheer fabrics while others may be too fragile for heavy materials. Feel, as well as see them.

How Best to Shop

For Curtains, Drapes
Too much money should not be spent on curtains and drapes since these should be changed every five years or so to keep the windows looking attractive. The cost should also be economical since so much more has to be spent on the other furnishings of the room.

Be Smart!

This is the season when the range of novelty bandbags is so large that you can even match your favorite spectator sports footwear with a companion bag. Sketched here is a combination of wheat colored linen trimmed in brown suede. At the upper left is one of the newest of the novelty bag styles, a school lunch basket of intriguing straw in a fine, almost fabric-like weave. One of the nice features of these bags is that you'll find them nicely lined with good fabric as well as carefully finished in details.

New Start Is Always Available

One of the blessed miracles of life is that we can always make a fresh start.

In moments of depression, of course, that is exactly what you feel you cannot do. That's one reason why they are moments of de-

But the truth is that no matter how hopelessly tangled, how fixed and unchangeable the circumstances in which you find yourself may be, there is always the divine right to start all over again.

These should be plain so as not to You begin this process by a little introduce too much design into the clear thinking. You ask yourself "what do I want my life and myself to be, and what is the first step toward realizing that ideal?" You may not be able to see the outcome, or indeed even the second step, but the first is there before you if you can recognize it.

Considers Suicide

Take the case of Lauranna Jackson, for example. Lauranna's affairs have become so miserably unsatisfactory that she cannot see any way out-except suicide, and she says she hasn't the courage to try that.

"I am 36, healthy, good looking and smart enough to have kept several good jobs at different times," says Lauranna's long letter. "At 22 I married the man who was immediately ahead of me in the office, and four years later our daughter, now 10, was born. That year Keith went to the South Pacific and I went back to my mother and my job.

Those were busy, prosperous years for my little Sharon and me, but when Keith came back I was ready to return to the old basis.

"... broken in health and spirits."

However, he was so completely changed that after much quarrelling and making-up and quarrelling again, we got a divorce. My mother died at this time, and Sharon went to her other grandmother. Two years ago I married again, a man who promised me every comfort, and agreed that I should have my own daughter back. He has two daughters, now aged 14 and 11, by an earlier marriage, and I have tried to do my duty by them. They have been badly spoiled and are difficult to handle, and financial reverses have made it advisable for me to resume my office position. My husband, cheated by his partner and unlucky in investments, is broken in health and spirits and may have to retire.

Not Happy With Mother

"Sharon has visited us, but is not happy here, and assures me that she is well treated in her grandmother's comfortable home. And the most unwelcome prospect of another baby's arrival has just about wrecked my nerves. I find myself faced with the prospect of stopping work-stopping paid work, that is-but working as an actual servant in this inharmonious household, and replacing my own child with two utterly undisciplined little girls. Moreover, presently there will be the exacting care of a small baby when our finances are unable to stand the strain of present expenses.

What can I do to extricate myself from this slough of despondency, bad nights, quick temper, anxiety, and the dread of fresh responsibilities when my baby is born? There must be a solution, I'm still sane enough to believe that. For I feel brains" any longer." Here is one more case of an impulsive woman, herself undisciplined, who builds up trouble through long years, and expects to escape from the result of her actions in a matter of days or weeks.

as if I could not stand this situation

Trouble has to be unravelled the way knitting does. You have to go right back to the wrong stitches, and start over from there. Lauranna's predicament wouldn't seem trouble at all to half the women of the world. Thousands of discouraged husbands have been helped along by a wife's courageous example to the rebuilding of fortune. This is an everyday story with the right man and woman.

New babies arrive every day by the hundred, all over the big world, under circumstances infinitely more distressing than these. Small girls are trained to be gentle and useful under the influence of a good example.

And making her home a place of harmony and interest is the quickest and the unfailing way for Lauranna to lure little Sharon back

The important problem in the picture is Lauranna herself. She's been shirking all along the line.

'Other Woman' Inspires Book

Blondes, Housecoats Feature New Novel

NEW YORK .- Thanks to a beautiful blonde and a $2.98 housecoat, novelist Isable Moore expects to net $20,000 this year.

They inspired her new book, "The Other Woman."

Miss Moore confessed that she's had three unfortunate careers and a like number and quality of marriages. She said: "Maybe people won't think that record qualifies me to speak . . "But I think the trouble with most married women is that they wear cheap housecoats, don't pay attention to beautiful blondes, prepare too few breakfasts for their husbands, and think they've made a supreme sacrifice when they take the children to the dentist."

The young novelist speaks her mind frankly from a Cheery Garden apartment in suburban New York, where she lives with a midastouch typewriter and two pretty daughters who adore her writing.

She tells the story of how-as "a not-too-exemplary wife"-she happened on a best-seller inspiration. "It came on a spring-house-cleaning morning," she recalls, "when I was working like mad, wearing chipped nail polish and a $2.98 housecoat that didn't fit. Up to the door came a blonde with glamour and a desire to see an old friend-my husband."

Luckily, Isable grins, her husband was off on a week-end trip and the blonde had only one day

But after the girl left, novelist Moore ran upstairs, studied herself in a mirror, threw away the housecoat and went on a diet. A month later, combining shock and imagination, she began writing her best book, "The Other Woman." This experience has paid off in sale of the title to Warner Brothers in Hollywood, sale of the novel to Bantam Books-and a petite new figure for Miss Moore. At age 37, in face, she looks younger than she did in pictures taken 21 years ago when she started her first career as a trapeze artist for Sells-Floto circus in New York.

She took that job, she says, because she had "courage, but no

Ancient Treasure Of Persian Gold Brought to Museum

CHICAGO.-A royal treasure of Persian gold from the period 500 B.C. has been bought by the University of Chicago's Oriental insti-

University officials said the valuable collection was bought from a European art collector for an undisclosed price. It is the only col-lection of its type in the western nemisphere.

Thorkild Jacobsen, director of the institute, said the treasure consists of 53 pieces of gold, each exquisitely carved. He said it is an example of the art of the last oriental empire before Greece and Rome took over cultural leadership. It is from the period of the Emperors Darius and Xerxes and survived the looting and plundering by soliders in the time of Alexander the Great.

Intricately designed, the medallions are believed to have been adornments for the vesture of royal personages. They are the work of Persian goldsmiths and Jacobsen said they rank in craftsmanship with what the finest modern jewelers could do today with improved tools and microscopes.

He said the treasure represents an art supported by unlimited

How the gold survived the last 2,500 years is supposition. But historians believe that some Persian prince, fleeing from Alexander's men, may have buried the treasure for safekeeping.

One piece is a complete necklace consisting of 96 separate pieces—20 lion heads, 53 granulated beads and 23 other beads made of two parts.

The most prized single piece is four-inch winged and horned lion. The ribs, muscles and feathers are chiseled to form the body. Experts said it is a rare piece of relief art work, the lion having been cut away from the medallion by hand.

The university said a micro-scopic examination showed that small rings on the back of the medallions, for the purpose of sewing the medallions to clothing, had been soldered with the same quality of gold as the jewelry.

Looter Emphasizes Stand Bacon Wrote Shakespeare BIRMINGHAM, ENGLAND .-

Shakespeare's works are so highly prized that a copy of a 1550 manuscript in which he made marginal notes is valued at $200,000.

But some people think Shakespeare got credit for plays actually written by Sir Francis Bacon. Today police are searching for a man who broke the glass cover of a case containing the $200,000 manuscript and left a note saying:

"Read "The Mystery of Francis Bacon" by William T. Smedley, now out of print but not wholly unobtainable, and in particular Chapter 21, Pages 158 to 159, which explodes the whole

The manuscript, "Hall's Chronicles" was believed to be undamaged.

Humane Society Gives Break To Blind Man Because of Dog

ATLANTA.—Big Boy, a German shepherd with a beggar's cup on his harness, had a room with a view and his sightless master learned that humane societies can serve people, too. Big Boy and W. C. Knight, 34, appeared in Recorder's Court. Knight faced charges of cruelty to animals by starving the dog that led him through downtown streets and shared a beggar's bread and a windowless room. Patrolman E. E. Caldwell testified that on occasion Knight was known to buy liquor instead of bread, contributing to the dog's scrawniness. He picked them up when he noticed Big Boy's thin frame, and called the Atlanta Humane Society.

Oby T. Brewer, president of the society, told Recorder A. W. Callaway that he wanted only to help the dog into health, and that Big Boy could stay with his master if Knight would care for him.

Knight, his head bowed before the bench, promised to stop drinking and to care for Big Boy as Big Boy cared for him. Callaway levied a $12 fine and suspended it.

Hopes For Whooping Crane Preservation Growing Dim NEW YORK .- Another hope for preservation of the nearly extinct whooping crane has just been dashed.

The National Audubon society has received word from the U.S. ifsh and wildlife service, with which it has been co-operating in attempts to preserve the species, that two eggs laid by a pair of captive birds in the Arkansas national wildlife refuge in Texas have been destroyed.

The eggs were broken up by the parent birds.

Only 33 whooping cranes, remnants of untold numbers, are now known to exist. The others have flown north as usual to nest in some undiscovered Arctic breeding

County Planning To Honor Early Quinine Sponsor

ARROW ROCK, MO .- Belated honor to the memory of an obscure country physician whose courage and learning made possible the opening of much of the nation's frontier is being sought by the D.A.R. of Arrow Rock, Mo.

The doctor is John Sappington, who introduced quinine over the bitter opposition of fellow physicians, to deteat the malaria which in areas like Pike county, Ill. wiped out as much as 80 per cent of the pioneer immigrants in one

The D.A.R., through its committee chairman, Miss Mary Tur-ley and Mrs. B. M. Lanham, is seeking the aid of Missouri physicians and others to erect a state memorial shrine to the doctor.

Learned of Quinine

Distressed by the malaria, which 125 years ago threatened to halt settlements of all the Mississippi valley, Dr. Sappington searched the world's medical literature for latest developments in treating the disease. Thus he was among the first to learn of it when two youthful French pharmacists isolated quinine from cinchona bark in Paris in 1820. Three years later, when manufacture of quinine was begun in Philadelphia, Dr. Sappington obtained a supply and after use on his patients begun he had use on his patients knew he had the remedy he had sought so long.

Accordingly, Sappington's son was sent east for 100 ounces and through error, came back with 100 pounds. As other physicians ridiculed the treatment, and the doctor could not use such quantities in his practice, he took the bold step of opening a factory to make antifever pills. Soon the magic of the remedy became so well known that bells were rung at eventide in many a pioneer village to remind people to take the pills.

Published Book

When the business was at its height, Dr. Sapington published a book on fevers in which he revealed that quinine was the active ingredient in his magic pills. He advised readers to buy quinine at their drug stores and thus deliberately wrecked his business. His purpose had been accomplished. The threat to national expansion had been

At his death, Dr. Sappington left a fund of $20,000 to aid needy students of Saline county, Missouri, to obtain an education. To date, F. C. Barnhill, Marshall, Mo., reports that, with the accrued interest, $217,614.80 has been expended, 12,584 students aided and $85,551.47 still remains.

Yet, despite great services of the country doctor, he lies virtually unhonored in a tomb amid the leaning tombstones of the Arrow Rock cemetery. Now, in long overdue recognition of the doctor's achievements, the D.A.R. has set out to provide a suitable memorial.

Reformed Head Hunter Gets Impressive Sight of N. Y.

NEW YORK.—A barefoot South Sea islander with a blue wool skirt, a GI haircut, and wearing a big smile arrived in New York for his first look at the "big fella place." He found it was the "now me get up no good" of his life.

By that, Robert Salau, 42, son of a reformed Solomon Islands head-hunter, meant the biggest city in the world was the biggest surprise of his life.

He was amazed that the Empire State building looked just like the tattered picture he had carried halfway around the world.

It is "high up too much," he declared.

Salau, a Seventh-Day Adventist missionary, arrived on the Mauretania after a visit to England, France, and Switzerland.

Emphasizing his friendly remarks by brandishing an eight-foot war spear, he said his voyage on the big ship was "more better than a war canoe."

About 40 years ago Salau's tribe was persuaded by missionaries to stop chopping off the heads of enemies and also saving the skulls of deceased members of families. During the war Salau and thousands of other converts gave vital information to U.S. marines. He received a citation.
