"Passenger Service Unused, Unwanted"

D. & M. Seeks to Discontinue Passenger Runs

Application Made to Michigan Public Service Commission

Short line railroad passenger service in a sparsely populated territory such as is traversed by the Detroit and Mackinac railway is "unused, unwanted and obsolete," states officials of the Detroit and Mackinac Railway Company in announcing that an application had been filed with the Public Service Commission to discontinue passenger trains No. 1 and No. 12.

These two trains are the last remaining passenger trains on the Detroit and Mackinac railroad. At the beginning of the automobile age there were 14 scheduled passenger trains on the main lines of the road, and eight mixed trains servicing the branches. An old time table schedules 32 passenger and freight trains daily on the road.

The first passenger service on the road was established in 1884. In 1882 it had been purchased by General R. A. Alger and his associates, M. S. and C. P. Smith, and the line extended to Alger on the Michigan Central. Originally built in 1877 to the East Branch of the AuGres as a logging road by the Hales, in 1879 it was purchased by C. H. Prescott & Sons. It was improved and extended by them into Ogemaw county.

In 1884 the line extended from Alger to AuSable, and was later continued to Alpena. Taken over by the McHarg interests in the early 1890's, the road was built directly to Bay City and extended to Cheboygan.

In January of 1884, W. N. Miller, with equipment to establish his new newspaper, The Tawas Herald, arrived over the new Detroit, Bay City & Alpena Railroad. Passenger service had yet to be established, and Mr. Miller with his presses and type made the trip here from Alger on a flat car.

About the journey here, Mr. Miller said, "Probably a new road was never better finished or smoother than this.

"Thirty miles an hour with a flat car was made at the time of the editorial excursion without material jar to the printshop or owner; from 20 to 45 miles an hour with a passenger train would certainly be attainable with even safety and comfort if the management should see fit even this winter to subject the line to the test.

HOW THE IOSCO COUNTY ROAD MONEY WAS USED

How much money do we get and what was done with it in 1949? First let us give you the total amount received for 1949 plus an estimate of a small amount yet due.

Received from the Gas and Weight Tax plus an amount yet due	$156,500.00
Plus profit on State Maintenance	20,000.00
Total	$176,500.00
Less Amount Paid to Cities—their portion of Horton Fund	16,400.00
Less Amount Paid on New Equipment	25,000.00
Less Amount Deposited with Federal Govt. County's part of National City Job	12,000.00
Balance left for maintenance of County Roads	$123,100.00

Now, what does it cost to maintain our County Roads?

To give you an idea how far short we are of sufficient funds to do the job let us take just a part of our equipment. Let us take 25 trucks and three graders with a driver on each piece of equipment. Let us pay the driver of these 28 pieces the rentals for the number of hours worked by each piece during 1948 on County Road Maintenance. This alone will amount to $173,000.00. In other words we are short $50,000.00 of sufficient money to operate this part of our equipment.

And please note there is also nothing with which to operate the Stone plant, three formers and their cars, the Supt., and his car the Commissioners salaries and expenses the Stack man, two power shovels, the sander, the mowers, the pumps, heat, light and maintenance of 4 garages, gravel for the roads, chloride and numerous other items that are a necessary part of county Maintenance. This also allows nothing for Road building and improvements.

It is considered necessary to have about 45 men to properly carry out the County and State Maintenance. We now employ 27 men outside of the three foremen, the stockman and mechanics.

From the above picture it is readily observed that it is very necessary that the Road Commission have a lot of work to do that is paid by the Federal Government, the various townships and the State Highway Department, and that much of the time of these 28 men be spent on such work.

It might be worthwhile to note that we get this year, $45,000 less than last year. This is because the Legislature at last session failed to renew the loan law that gave us that amount. This law was passed to replace the liquor law which expired at that time.

We shall list below some of the projects that have helped us get through the year without closing our doors. The townships (some of them) have helped considerably by picking out certain projects for improvement and paying the Road Commission for doing the job. And all of the Townships have helped in the wintertime by paying for snow removal on the former township roads and we have been fortunate in having very little snow to remove for the past two years.

The following is a list of the Townships and the Roads Improved and the money spent or paid to the Commission by these townships.

Grant—Grading Carpenter Hill; regrading 1 1/2 miles Sand Laxe Extension; regrading Art Anschuetz Road 1/2 mile.	$564.26
Tawas Township—Grading and graveling 1/2 mile Township Line Road. Grading and graveling 1/4 mile Westrich Subdivision. 2131.64 Sherman Township—Grading 1 mile Kitchen Road; grading 1/2 mi. Turtle Road; grading 1/2 mile Tom Wood Road.	$764.68
Burleigh Township—Grading 1/2 mile Ruckle Road; grading 1 mi. Pumpkin Road; grading 1 mile of Seafort Road; grading 1 mile	(Continued No. 4, Back Page)

Win at Sterling; Lose Opener At Rose City

West Branch Team Will Play Here Tuesday, December 6

The Tawas City Elks rang up the curtain on the 1949-50 basketball season at Rose City, last Friday night, and the fracas proved to be a 33 to 30 disappointment to the Elks.

Tawas City took a 8 to 7 lead in the first quarter and the score stood 19 to 18 at the half. The Rose City team came back in the third quarter scoring 10 points to the Tawasites five, with score reading 28, Tawas 24 at the end of the third quarter. The Elks scored six points in the final stanza but Rose City came up with five markers and the Tawas lads fell short of the Ogemaw lads by three points.

The Elks definitely weren't "on" in this game and their offensive play was pretty ragged. They had quite a few turns on the free throw lane but were unable to connect. Bruce Myles was the high point man of the evening, registering 12 points on five buckets and two foul shots. Barry McGuire followed him with eight points.

The Elks reserves started the season off with flying colors by trampling over the Rose City squad to the tune of 24 to 18. Mike Westcott came up with 13 points, on five field goals and three charity tosses. Tom and Wright each countered with four points. Bonamie tossed one bucket and Phillips added a free throw.

Tuesday night the Elks came up with a 66 to 21 win over a hapless Sterling squad. The Elks looked like a different team with their passing attack running the Sterling quintet ragged. Coach Mark DeFaublaugh really had his charges fired up for this one and after the Elks hit the hoop for 16 points in the first quarter, holding Sterling to four, the outcome of the game was pretty well settled. Tawas City came back in the second stanza with 19 points with Sterling settling for five points. In the third quarter, with the Elks second team in, they came up with 12 more markers while Sterling had eight. The final stanza found the Tawas lads countering for 19 more points and Sterling connected for six.

To tell the story of the game in a nutshell, this contest was decided (Continued No. 5, Back Page)

The meeting was held in an informal "round table fashion" directly after dessert and coffee was served by the hostess. Plans were made for a special open meeting to be held Wednesday, December 7.

Margaret Prescott gave an excellent review of the cancer discussion given by Mrs. Evans, guest speaker at the Farm Bureau Woman's Activity Group meeting at Hobart's, in Wilber, November 8.

After the meeting concluded, the group was entertained by Hawaiian and Spanish guitar selections by the host and hostess. Then group singing was accompanied by Hazel Earl on the Spanish guitar.

Ernest Nash, of Alabaster, took home the prize for the heaviest buck, a 194 pounder, with a 10-point rack.

Ten-point racks were registered by Ernest Nash, Charles Greenwood, Melbourne Kendall and Jack Crumm.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

France, Canada Urge Atomic Pact; British Labor Gets Speedup Rule; G.M. Dividend Sets Industry Mark

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.

NEW NAVAL OPERATIONS BOSS CONGRATULATED . . . U.S. Navy Secretary Francis Matthews (left) congratulates Adm. Forrest P. Sherman after the latter was named by President Truman as chief of naval operations to succeed Adm. Louis E. Denfeld. Denfeld was let out because of criticism of unification and defense policy in the armed services setup.

ATOMIC PACT:

Asked by Two
France and Canada joined at Lake Success in asking that all nations do everything in their power to ban use of atomic bombs and control atomic energy.

THE APPEAL was directed to all—and especially the Soviet union—to forget traditional ideas of the sovereignty of nations and join an atomic pact that would promote security and peace.

It was a sincere gesture, but about all that could be said of any results that might ensue was that it was a "nice try."

The proposal did have the support of the others in the majority group of the 59-nation political committee of the U.N. general assembly, but Soviet Russia was still to be heard from on the suggestion. The French-Canadian resolution actually meant the majority powers want the general assembly once more to endorse their proposal for atomic control and to order secret talks to continue between the Big Five and Canada.

FIRST BOMB WEIGHED TON

According to Stephen M. Alexis, Haiti, the first atomic bomb weighed a ton. He made the statement at a United Nations session. Statistics on the makeup of the bomb have not been officially disclosed, but Alexis said he had his information from a scientist, and that in three or four years there would be a smaller bomb for use by smaller countries.

SIR BENEAL N. RAU, India's chief delegate, offered another idea in the debate outlining officially his plan for the international law commission to draw up a world declaration for prohibition of the bomb and for control of atomic energy.

But, it was said in official circles, that the French-Canadian proposal was as far as the majority powers wanted to go at this time.

DIVIDENDS:

New High
Was it a symbol, a portent of the future? Did it indicate the strength of the nation's economic situation, or was it as temporary signboard at the mercy of any real wind of economic recession?

WHATEVER its real significance, industrialists and economists took cheer for it. It was a vote by General Motors corporation of the largest cash-dividend total in the history of American industry. The company, which recently reported a record net profit of more than 502 million dollars from the first nine months of this year, would send checks totaling $190,436,055 to 436,005 holders of its common and preferred stock. The distribution would represent a year-end payment of $4.25 a share on the outstanding issue, raising to $8 a share the amount declared on the common stock this year.

GENERAL MOTORS was also expected to establish a record when it retired out of its own corporate funds its entire long-term debt of 125 million dollars—17 to 27 years before the notes are due.

OLDSTERS' ATTITUDE

Crankiness in Old Age Linked to Health

According to an Ohio state university professor, crankiness or a cantankerous state in old age is directly proportionate to poor health. In other words, the professor's situation holds basis for the adage that a man is "only as old as he feels."

The professor, Albert R. Chandler, said his conclusion was the result of 503 reports by college students,

Plane Record

Commercial planes were darting about the world faster and faster. Latest speed record for commercial planes was claimed by Pan American lines which reported its strato-cruiser Westward Ho landed at London in 9 hours and 12 minutes after leaving New York.

Capt. Robert D. Fordyce, Jackson Heights, N. Y., commander of the Westward Ho, did it with the aid of a tail wind which at times reached a speed of 75 miles an hour.

The plane traveled the Great Circle route and its average speed was about 385 miles an hour. The plane carried 21 passengers and a crew of 10.

Only a day before, a Pan American plane flew from New York to London in 9 hours, 21 minutes, which had bettered the existing mark by 20 minutes.

BRITISH LABOR:

More for More
It has been a fairly well established philosophy of trade unions to frown on the "eager beaver" who likes to demonstrate how fast he can work or how much he can produce in a given time. In fact, some unions prohibit members from engaging in any type of production speed contest.

The philosophy is understandable, if not popular. It is one which takes care of the union member who hasn't the ability, the skills or the physical stamina to keep up with the would-be speed demon. The philosophy has been applied often enough for critics to charge that it has amounted, in many instances, to an actual work "slow down."

ALL THIS being a matter of record, England's labor government's move to allocate higher rewards for greater labor productivity came as a surprise to many U. S. supporters of the Atlee regime. They began to speculate whether the prime minister was laying up trouble for himself among his labor adherents.

The British government's turning away from this traditional philosophy of labor was explained on the basis that it must be done to meet growing demands for higher wages to offset higher living costs. Therefore, the ministry is advocating a system of tying wages to the rate of production, rather than the price index.

GOLD HOARD:

Really There
Those skeptical, apprehensive citizens whose dreams had begun to be haunted by the awful spectre of doubt that Uncle Sam's purported gold store at Fort Knox wasn't there at all could all relax. The gold was there, all of it.

ASSURANCE came from a source certainly qualified to know, for that source was Leland Howard, assistant director of the U.S. bureau of the mint. It is his duty to examine personally the gold hoard at least once a year.

"There's more than 12,000 tons of it (gold) at the Ft. Knox depository," he reports. That's more than half of the 24 billion dollars worth of the stuff which the government keeps under lock and key.

RUSSIA:

Direct Warning

Soviet Russia was doing a bit of boasting and chest-thumping about the atomic bomb for her arms stockpile.

IN A SPEECH broadcast from Moscow, Georgi N. Malenkov, a member of the Soviet inner circle, warned that with the atomic bomb in Russian hands a third World War would "wipe out capitalism." His was the main speech in celebration of the 32nd anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution.

"If the imperialists unleash a third world war," he said, "this will not be the grave of individual capitalist countries, but of world capitalism as a whole."

He said that atomic energy in the hands of capitalism is the "means of bringing death."

Turning to a new note for the moment, he declared that "we do not want war and are doing everything to prevent it." Then, discussing atomic energy again, Malenkov asserted that atomic energy "in the hands of the Soviet people must and will serve as a mighty weapon of unprecedented technical progress and further speedy growth of the productive forces of our country."

FOLLOWING THE PARTY LINE right down to the final syllable, he charged that the United States has a plan to "enslave the entire world" and that this plan was "borrowed from the mad plans of Hitler and Tanaka (pre-war Japanese militarist) but different in that it exceeds both plans together."

Despite all the boasting and the bombast, there existed in many minds a doubt that Russia has the atomic bomb as we know it—a weapon ready to be dropped at will.

POLITICS:

Sound & Fury

The sound and fury of the 1950 congressional campaign was touched off rather prematurely by Minnesota's Harold E. Stassen in Minneapolis where he accused President Harry Truman of making "vicious and untrue" statements in his attacks on political enemies.

AND STASSEN is one of those enemies, for the former Minnesota governor and now president of the University of Pennsylvania, is a certain candidate for the GOP presidential nomination in 1952.

Stassen charged that Truman used historical references in his recent St. Paul speech to "wrap the cloak of Jefferson around himself," but that actually the President "long ago personally trampled on the cloak of Jefferson."

WITHOUT mentioning Truman by name, Stassen answered directly the President's address at St. Paul in which the chief executive assailed "reactionaries" who, he said, had impeded progress of his welfare program in congress.

Stassen praised congress for refusing to go along with Truman on the "dangerous" Brannan farm plan, on the President's request for postwar retention of OPA, and on his demands for pyramided centralized power over a wide range of subjects.

BLARNEY:

A Sham Rock?

Most folks know better than to get into an argument with an Irishman—particularly about anything that is peculiarly Irish, such as the blarney stone.

BUT IN CALIFORNIA, as in Brooklyn, anything can happen, so it wasn't too surprising to find a row over Ireland's famed blarney stone breaking out there.

It all happened when a 15-pound stone, believed by San Franciscans to be a chunk of the real blarney stone, was stolen from a church bazaar. Jim Cummins, custodian of the San Francisco stone chunk, declared he had "documentary proof my stone is authentic."

On Trial Again

GEESE:

Farmer Burned

Near Allegan, Mich., nearly 13,000 Canadian geese were making themselves at home in the grain fields of farmer Andrew Degeus. The loud yackety-yak of the birds as they devoured the grain attracted about 5,000 sight-seers. At times, nearly 4,000 of the birds would rise into the air in a black cloud. Spectators thought it was great fun to watch the birds eating their dinner on the farm.

Left to right (seated) are Joe Larkin, vice-president in charge of labor relations for Bethlehem; Phillip Murray, union president; David J. McDonald, United Steelworkers; and James Thimmes, vice-president of the United Steelworkers. The union-Bethlehem agreement was the first break in the month-old nationwide steel strike. Union officials said it would set a pattern for settlement with other steel companies involved in the strike.

PRELUDE TO PISTOLS FOR TWO . . . At a sharpshooting gallery in Paris, France, M. Nordman is sharpening up his shooting eye in preparation for an affair of honor. His duel will be with M. Tixier-Vignancourt. Both of the duellists are lawyers. As a result of an argument in court, M. Tixier-Vignancourt considered himself the recipient of an insult from his adversary, M. Nordman, and issued a challenge. The two lawyers then agreed to substitute pistols for law briefs and arguments. If the affair follows the usual duelling procedure now in vogue in France, no one will be hurt. The old saying, "Pistols for two, coffee for one," is out.

Monopoly of Brains

FOR SOME YEARS I had occasion to visit Wilmington, Del., at intervals. On such visits I stopped at the duPont hotel. In a corridor there was a display window that always attracted my interest. In it were shown more than 100 small items of merchandise. Some were wearing apparel, others were but gadgets of one kind or another, cosmetics, and other things.

Not one of the things displayed in that window were produced in Wilmington. They were products of hundreds of factories in all sections of the nation, all of them comparatively small in size. Those factories were selling their products in competitive fields. No one of them had a monopoly on production of any one item. The materials from which all were made were produced by duPont, and were a result of discoveries made in duPont chemical laboratories.

The 100 or more items shown in that window were but a small portion of things the materials for which are born in duPont laboratories. The total of all is numbered in the thousands. Each one of them means greater pleasure, convenience or comfort for the people of the world, and the total of all means hundreds of thousands of jobs for American workers.

Included among the various items in that window was a pair of nylon stockings and a pair of rayon socks. At that time a friend of mine was in the business of manufacturing hosiery. He was one of many purchasers from duPont of materials from which nylon stockings and rayon socks are made. He or no group of hosiery manufacturers had a monopoly on such production, but in his plants alone those materials meant jobs for 1,000 people or more. Knowing, through the operations of my hosiery manufacturing friend, something of the duPont methods, I thought that concern was doing a big part in maintaining the American free competitive system. It was preventing, rather than assisting in creating, monopolies.

For the second time within the last third of a century the attorney general of the United States has brought suit against the duPont company, charging it with being a monopoly and seeking to dissolve it as a corporation. Other than from information received from my hosiery producing friend, I know nothing of the operations of the duPont Company. It may be violating the anti-trust laws, but I do not know in what way. As far as I can see, the only charge of monopoly that might be established would be that of a monopoly of the chemical brains of the nation.

The chemical brains it has exercised have certainly produced vast benefits for the nation, including jobs and wages for hundreds of thousands of American workers. They have found use for materials of the soil, the mines and the forests, many of which had been considered waste before their utility was discovered by duPont. These brains have provided the people of the world with many things contributing to their pleasure, convenience and comfort.

Laboratories operated by practically all the major industries of the nation, have, more than any other thing, made America great as an industrial nation. Such laboratories have provided the know-how of what to produce and how to produce. From such laboratories have come jobs, wages, homes for millions of Americans. We cannot afford to sacrifice such a source of supply.

A woman's voice on the phone asked if I would say which party, Republican or Democratic, I would vote for at the next congressional election. "Which Republican or which Democratic?" I asked. Fact is, there will be approximately as many of each as there will be candidates of each for the house and senate. There are no policies for candidates to follow. Unless conditions change before next fall, each candidate will be on his own. He will be for or against only that which he thinks will attract the most votes.

The woman's club announced it as a "brunch," without the quotes. After some inquiries I found it meant a breakfast. Why they did not call it breakfast I do not know, unless it might lead their patrons to expect bacon, eggs, wheat cakes and coffee, instead of only coffee and a doughnut.

We have an over-abundance of dollars, but none of them will buy much. Less quantity and more value would be acceptable.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

By Lawrence Gould

Name Calling Is Profitless

Does calling names get you anywhere?

Answer: Not often, if ever. It relieves your feelings (though it may make you feel guilty later) and perhaps wins you some sympathy from people who already feel as you do. But expressing your hatred of someone — which is all calling him names amounts to — neither changes him nor helps you to deal with him more effectively. It merely distracts you from the tasks of understanding why he does the things you fear or dislike and what can be done to counteract them. To a mature mind there are no "villains" — only grown-up "problem children."

resistance your unconscious mind sets up against a process which may weaken its hold on you. If you find a doctor whom you can trust "some of the time," take your doubts to him and discuss them along with your other symptoms. He won't mind, and probably can help you overcome them.

Does reading ability improve with practice?

Answer: Under normal circumstances, Yes. Up to your limits of fatigue, the oftener you do anything, the more it tends to become automatic, and therefore to be done faster and with less expenditure of effort. A competent book reviewer really can get the gist of a whole book in the time that it would take most people to read, say, two or three chapters. But if you've acquired bad reading habits — like just looking at words without stopping to think what they mean — the more reading you do, the less you will understand or remember.

Can you be sure a psychiatrist will help you?

Answer: I'm afraid not — in fact, I doubt whether any honorable man would guarantee to cure a given patient. But if you are mentally ill, remember that your very doubt of whether psychiatric treatment can "do any good" is part of your illness; it grows out of the

Glutamic Acid Improves Intelligence

By Dr. James W. Barton

I HAVE WRITTEN a couple of times about the use of glutamic acid — an amino acid — in helping to brighten the mind. This discovery was first reported by Dr. C. C. Pfeiffer, professor of pharmacology, Illinois College of Medicine, who stated that glutamic acid brightened the wits in a series of 69 mentally defective children one and one-half to 17 years of age. More recently an editorial in "The Journal of the American Medical Association" stated that glutamic acid had been found of great help in the mild form of epilepsy (petit mal). Still another group reported that they had observed a rise in mental age and intelligence quotient in adults.

Since the above favorable reports, some research workers have stated that they failed to obtain favorable results in treating "backward" children with glutamic acid.

In view of the above favorable and unfavorable reports, a not unusual occurrence when any new drug or method of treatment is announced, it is of interest to learn that glutamic acid has been found to improve the wits or intelligence in what is known as mongolian idiocy (which is present when the child is born); that is, the lowest form of intelligence.

Generally speaking a moron has an intelligence quota of from 80 to 90, an imbecile is much below this, running from 50 to 60, but an idiot has little or no intelligence, although he is lively and imitates well.

It would naturally be expected that little or nothing can be done to increase the intelligence of a mongolian idiot, but in "The American Journal of Psychiatry," Drs. F. T. Zimmerman, Bessie B. Burge-meister and T. J. Putman report their study of the effects of glutamic acid in 30 definite cases of mongolian idiocy or mental backwardness and 30 non-mongoloid control cases.

While too much should not be expected in all cases of mental backwardness, parents of backward children would do well to discuss this method of treatment with their family physician.

While diabetes is not a contagious disease, it is hereditary, and the million diabetics are chiefly the relatives of diabetic persons.

We should all try to avoid noises. We should try to avoid making unnecessary noises.

The lower bowel is not supposed to be empty at any time.

By nourishing food, enough but not too much rest, and slight and regular exercise, the health of both mind and body of the elderly can be maintained for years.

In any sinus condition, the important part of the treatment is to get the sinus to drain properly so that pus or mucus in the sinus will drain out.

Make Your Fruit Cakes, Plum Puddings in Time For Leisurely Ripening

BEFORE YOU GET CAUGHT in the crush of holiday shopping or tangled in festive tinsel and wrapping, give a thought to your fruit cakes and plum puddings. These should be made at least a month or more before the holidays to give them time to ripen and mellow so their flavors will be perfect.

It's a comforting thought, too, many homemakers have found in years past, to have their Christmas desserts all snugly wrapped, ready to be eaten well in advance of all the other holiday food preparation.

In case you want to give away fruit cake and plum pudding as presents with "warmest regards" from your own kitchen, decide exactly who will be the lucky receivers, and plan accordingly.

PLAN TWO DAYS for making your fruit cake. The first day is usually spent ordering the fruits and nuts and getting them ready, along with lining the pans with paper. The second day is spent mixing and baking, as well as decorating and wrapping the cakes for storage.

- Horn of Plenty Fruit Cake (Makes 5 pounds)
- 2 1/2 cups golden raisins
 - 1 cup dried apricots
 - 1 1/2 cups sliced citron
 - 1 cup cut candied pineapple
 - 1 cup halved candied cherries
 - 1 cup shredded coconut
 - 1/2 cup apricot whole fruit nectar
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons nutmeg
 - 2 teaspoons mace
 - 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 - 3/4 cup thick orange marmalade
 - 1 cup butter or substitute
 - 1 1/4 cups granulated sugar
 - 4 eggs
 - 2 1/4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 - 1 1/4 cups finely chopped blanched almonds

Rinse raisins and drain. Pour boiling water over apricots and let stand five minutes. Cut into thin strips. Combine with raisins, citron, pineapple, cherries, coconut, nectar, spices and marmalade. Cover and let stand overnight. Cream butter and sugar. Add eggs, one at a time, and beat thoroughly. Add flour sifted with baking powder and salt and mix well. Blend in flavoring, almonds and fruit mixture and mix well. Pour into two loaf pans (8 x 4 x 3 inches) or one (9-inch) tube pan lined with two thicknesses of greased brown paper and one of waxed paper. Bake in a slow (275°f.) oven 3 to 4 hours, depending upon size of cake. Decorate top as desired.

Bake your fruit cakes in loaf pans or tube pans, whichever you like, but bake them early. Then they'll have a chance to ripen properly before the holidays and taste their mellow best. This Horn of Plenty Fruit Cake, light in color, is packed with luscious candied and dried fruits, golden raisins, coconut and almonds.

LYNN SAYS:

Try These Tasty Seasoning Tricks
Rice pudding is an old-fashioned favorite, but it will have more flavor if you make it with brown in place of white sugar. Plump the raisins in hot water before adding to the rice.
Spread toast with chutney before serving the Welsh rarebit. Yes, it's different but interesting.
Baked pears become a favorite dessert when they're served with nutmeg flavored cream.

Plum puddings, like fruit cake, should be given a month or so to ripen before serving to taste their best. Here's a truly festive pudding with fruits, nuts and spices combined with suet, molasses and bread crumbs.

FOR THOSE who prefer a dark type of fruit cake, here is a recipe which gives excellent results:

- Dark Fruit Cake (Makes 10 pounds)
- 1 1/2 pounds candied cherries
 - 1 pound candied pineapple
 - 1 1/2 pound candied apricots
 - 1 pound citron
 - 3 pounds seeded raisins
 - 1 pound currants
 - 1/2 pound raw, shelled almonds
 - 1/2 pound (2 cups) sifted flour
 - 1 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon cinnamon
 - 1/2 teaspoon cloves
 - 1 teaspoon nutmeg
 - 1/2 pound shortening
 - 1/2 pound brown sugar
 - 1 1/2 cups cider
 - 6 eggs, separated

Cut the cherries in halves. Thinly slice the pineapple, apricots and citron. Wash raisins and currants and dry them. Blanch and chop almonds. Mix all these ingredients together. Sift together flour, baking powder and spices. Combine fruit and flour mixtures thoroughly. Cream together shortening and sugar. Add egg yolks and beat thoroughly. Add cider alternately with fruit mixture until all are thoroughly mixed. Beat egg whites stiff and fold into cake mixture. Line the bottoms of 4 pans (8 3/4 x 4 3/4 inches) with brown paper. Grease the paper and fill pans with cake mixture 3/4 full. Place pans on a rack in a large roaster which has about 1/2 inch of water at the bottom. Cover the pan and set in a slow (275°f.) oven for 2 1/2 hours. Remove pans from roaster and set in oven, at same temperature, for 1/2 hour to allow cake to dry.

- Plum Pudding (Makes 2 3-pound molds)
- 1 pound seedless raisins
 - 1 pound currants
 - 1/2 cup chopped nut meats
 - 2 1/2 cups sifted flour
 - 2 teaspoons baking soda
 - 1 teaspoon cloves
 - 1 teaspoon allspice
 - 1 teaspoon nutmeg
 - 1 teaspoon cinnamon
 - 2 teaspoons salt
 - 4 eggs
 - 1 cup sugar
 - 2 cups pure dark molasses
 - 2 cups buttermilk
 - 1 1/2 cups finely chopped suet
 - 1/2 cup grape juice
 - 2 1/2 cups fine, hard bread crumbs

Wash and dry raisins and currants, combine with nutmeats. Dredge with one cup flour. Sift remaining flour, baking soda, spices and salt. Beat eggs, add crumbs, sugar, molasses, buttermilk, suet and grape juice. Add raisin mixture and blend thoroughly. Add flour mixture; mix thoroughly. Pour into two greased three-pound molds. Cover and steam for three hours. Cool puddings, wrap in heavy waxed paper and store in a cool place. Re-steam to heat and serve with hard or other type sauce.

Garnish your ham with steamed apples which have been molded in cider or lemon gelatin. The flavors suit the ham perfectly.
When you want to stuff a roast of pork or pork chops, you'll find that apples and prunes or raisins and apples have a wonderful flavor affinity to the pork.
Minced pork sausage and rice mixed with egg, shaped into cakes and fried in the skillet, slowly and to a golden brown are a deliciously different dish to have for breakfast.

"Checked" Enamel

QUESTION: Is there any way to smooth the enamel on our woodwork without completely removing it? It has several coats of various colors of enamel and varnish on it. There are fine cracks or checks in some of the enamel. Could we rub it with turpentine or something, then sand it before repainting? If we have to remove all the old paint, how should we do that? Use a paint and varnish remover? We want to repaint our woodwork, but those checks show through so that it doesn't look nice.

ANSWER: You have the right idea, but in reverse — that is, you should use the sandpaper first, and then clean off with turpentine before repainting. If you were going to varnish, you would have to take off all the old finish; but as long as you are going to use paint again, I do not believe it will be necessary to take off all the paint, which would be quite a job. But the cracks and checks should be sanded out smoothly so that they will not show through the new finish.

Difficult to Cultivate

Although rhododendrons and azaleas are favorite plants of many flower-lovers, they are among the most difficult to grow and respond only if given soil and climatic conditions favorable to their development. They are comparatively easy to grow in the southern states where the climate is less rigorous, but in the northern states they are grown with difficulty, and some of the tender Asiatic species cannot be grown outdoors the year around. In the North the evergreen species often suffer from windburn in the winter and drought in the summer.

Undeveloped Land

About 80 million or more acres of undeveloped land in the United States are estimated to be suitable for farming.

Buck Shots

The second week of hunting finds the stories going something like this: "Boy, the biggest I ever saw, but I missed him."

Randy Fox is still hunting deer in his own backyard. Before the season opened he spotted deer tracks in his backyard orchard and since being unsuccessful on the "plains" is checking on those backyard tracks again.

"Thanks for the drink, Louie" is what one buck would probably say if he met Louis Pfeiffer on street today. Louis Pfeiffer, Otto and Phil Ross were hunting near Tawas City and Louie spied a buck drinking from Silver Creek. Kind-hearted Louie, waited until the buck took his last drink and then was going to get his venison. But the buck had different ideas and vaulted a thicket and was gone, without even thanking Louie for the drink.

A new graduate—After many years of hunting, Howard Hatton finally graduated—from the spike-horn class to rack class, with his 8-pointer, opening day.

Lunch hour—During noon hour Monday, employees of Mueller Concrete Products Co., while eating their lunch spied a six-point buck also munching his dinner in a nearby field. Two of the employees, dropping their lunch rushed home for rifles and spent the rest of the noon rest period chasing the deer. The trail ended at Moffet's woods, when work was resumed. Later in the day, the men, with that "empty feeling," after not eating their lunch, looked out and there he was! The buck was back in the field eating—dessert no doubt.

Vic Marzinski was good to his word, as published in last week's Herald—Except! Vic got his buck on Saturday, before 4:00 P. M. as he said he would, but proved to be too small to enter in the contest.

Iosco Soils December 2

An opportunity, according to Harold R. Clark, County Agricultural Agent is offered to all Iosco County farmers to have their soils tested at the Tawas Township Hall on Friday, December 2. Extension Soil Specialist of Michigan State College, E. D. Longnecker, will test soil samples for acidity and make recommendations for individual soils problems. Samples to be tested for plant food elements will be packed and sent to M. S. C. soils laboratory for which a nominal charge will be made.

This is the second soils testing day to be held in Iosco County. Many farmer took advantage of the last April at which over 225 samples were tested.

The fall is a good time to get this soil testing job done. To know the fertilizer requirements now give the farmer time to order his needs before the spring rush. Mr. Clark advises that samples should be taken from about two inches below the surface and three to five samples, depending upon the size of the field, be taken of each field. If the soil type of the samples is similar they can be moved into one composite sample.

The hall will be open all day beginning at 9:00 A. M. Mr. Longnecker will hold a general meeting at 2:00 P. M. and discuss soil management practices of Iosco farms.

Brucellosis in Humans

Brucellosis—mainly contracted by human beings from swine and cattle—first became a reportable human disease in 1928, when less than 100 cases were reported in the United States. In 1947 more than 6,000 human cases were reported. Approximately 35 per cent of human cases are caused by eating infected food products of animal origin. Such cases can be prevented by proper pasteurizing of milk products and cooking of all meat.

Over twenty-one winter sports carnivals and special events will be held in the area represented by the East Michigan Winter Sports Council according to Frand Davis, Secretary of the East Michigan Tourist Association. Sixteen communities are planning a winter-long program of entertainment for the winter sportsters with some communities staging several special events and carnivals during the winter.

The East Michigan Winter Sports Council, a special committee of the tourist association, is again planning their advertising and promotional campaign for winter sports. This campaign will feature newspaper advertising in southern Michigan and nearby states, folders, publicity service, weather and snow conditions reports for skiers and a new winter sports movie to be made in the area this winter.

Final plans for this program will be made at the next meeting of the Council, which will be held December 8, noon luncheon at Snow Valley on the west side of Otsego Lake near Gaylord.

Events in this area include: Carnival at Silver Valley January 3-4. Cornation Ball January 4. Grayling Winter Sports Carnival, February 10-11-12. Fox Field Trials at Standish (no date set) West Branch Carnival, February 18-19.

Visit Bulletin Rack in County Agent's Office

The bulletin rack in the office of Harold R. Clark county agricultural agent is a place of interest to farmers and homemakers visiting the county extension office. Some new bulletins recently arrived from Michigan State College are suggested by the agent as useful and informative reading.

Three publications come from the Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station. The first, circular bulletin 215, "Reducing Sugar Beet Costs," gives details of labor-saving developments in the beet industry and tells how farmers may use them.

Special bulletin 358, "Fruit Setting in the Delicious Apple," will be of interest to apple growers in all sections. It covers results of tests in many regions and is a scientific study of fruit setting in one of the world's most extensively grown apple varieties.

"Success in Farming Rough Land in Southern Michigan," special bulletin 356, tells of the problems of farming rough areas and of the ways used by many successful farmers in solving the difficulties.

Three new folders issued by the Cooperative Extension Service cover topics of interest to farmers and homemakers. "Dwarf Fruit Trees," F-136, lists varieties and cultural methods for these popular miniature trees. Folder F-140 "Making Tailored Buttonholes" will be of help to the seamstress in doing a professional job. The benefits of artificial insemination are discussed in folder F-138 "Artificial Breeding for Dairy Profits."

These publications and others covering both farming and home-making subjects are available at the county extension office, located in the Federal Building.

Art of Curing Home Killed Meat

When butchering times comes, it's wise to review the methods recommended for curing, smoking and storing, advises Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent.

E. D. Farwell, Michigan State College animal husbandry specialist, has supplied some hints on proper care of meat. Fresh meat, he states, should be chilled promptly after slaughter to 36 to 40 degrees F. and kept there during the curing process. For each 100 pounds of meat to be dry cured, use seven pounds of salt, two pounds of sugar, and two ounces of salt peter. For brine cure, mix these ingredients with four gallons of water for each 100 pounds of meat.

For hams and shoulders, 2½ to 3 days are needed per pound for curing each piece and two days per piece for bacon. For dry cure, rub one-half of the curing mixture on the meat and pack in a clean wooden barrel or crock, taking care not to shake off the curing mixture. After six to eight days remove the meat and resalt with the rest of the mixture. If brine solution is used, pack the fresh cuts in a barrel or crock and cover with brine. Boiling water that has cooled should be used in making the brine solution. Keep the meat under the brine and shift top cuts to bottom of solution occasionally.

After curing, wash meat in warm water and soak in cool water for one hour. After 24 hours of draining, smoke with any green hardwood. Hang meat 6' to 8 feet from fire and smoke about 36 hours.

Meat should be wrapped in grease resistant paper and placed in a protective bag for storing. Keep in a dark, cool, dry place.

Why D. & M. Seeks Permission To Discontinue Its Bay City-Alpena Passenger Trains

The Detroit and Mackinac Railway Company has filed an application with the Michigan Public Service Commission for permission to discontinue the operation of its passenger trains Nos. 1 and 12 operating between Bay City and Alpena.

WHY?

If these trains continue to operate, they will for the year 1949, show a deficit that will exceed $110,000.00. It is regretted that it was necessary to make such a request but the patronage of these two trains has steadily decreased for the past several years in spite of the fact that modern equipment was placed in this service which provided the utmost in comfort and safety. These trains are powered with Diesel locomotives which provide speed and cleanliness, yet they are not patronized by the public.

For a number of years the decreasing patronage of these trains coupled with the increasing costs of operation, has resulted in substantial losses until now the direct out-of-pocket expenses of these trains is over one and one-half times the revenue. Very often these trains complete their schedule between Bay City and Alpena without a single revenue passenger occupying the coaches and seldom does the number of revenue passengers exceed the man power of the crew.

With the convenience of modern busses now traveling the paved highways and running parallel with the railroads and providing the pick-up and delivery of its patrons at almost every country crossroad and city street, it has made the short line railroad passenger service UNWANTED, UNUSED and OBSOLETE, especially in a sparsely populated territory such as is traversed by the Detroit and Mackinac Railway.

Here Are The Facts

Out-of-pocket expense and revenue of passenger trains 1 and 12 for the first eight months of 1949.

Total Revenues (passenger, baggage mail and express) ----- $48,159.16

Actual out-of-pocket expenses directly chargeable to trains 1 and 12 (wages and payroll taxes for crews, fuel, water, lubricants, enginehouse expense, locomotive and car repairs, other supplies and terminal expense. ----- $70,933.84

LOSS ----- $22,774.68

Total 1949 Loss Estimated at More Than $110,000

There are numerous other expenses not included in the above statement, also chargeable to the operation of these trains. These include the passenger proportion of maintenance charges for tracks, bridges, signals, stations; depreciation charges, other taxes, insurance, wages of agents traffic expenses, etc. The 1949 loss to the Detroit and Mackinac Railway in providing this train service, including all passenger costs chargeable to these two trains, is estimated to be more than $110,000.00.

In view of this tremendous loss, we have no alternative but to request discontinuance of passenger service between Bay City and Alpena. We feel confident that users of Detroit and Mackinac Railway services will understand our position.

How to Keep Home-Rendered Lard Sweet Longer

Mixing home-rendered lard with vegetable shortening will make the lard keep fresh and sweet twice as long, says Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent.
Information from L. J. Bratzler, meats specialist at Michigan State College, says that farmers who used this means of preserving lard during the last two seasons found it highly satisfactory.
Only two or three pounds of the usual hydrogenated vegetable shortening are needed for each 50 pounds of lard. U. S. Department adding the shortening to the rendered Agriculture researchers advised lard in the kettle just before settling and separating the cracklings. Another method is to mix the shortening with melted lard in the storage containers. In this case shortening should be stirred carefully until entirely melted and mixed thoroughly with the lard.
The chemists emphasize that hydrogenated (hardened) vegetable shortening should be used. It is sold under several trade names and any good brand will do the job.
Home-rendered lard should be stored in tinned containers, which are free from rust. Since contact with air causes lard to become rancid, containers should be filled to the top and tightly closed. After filling, the cans or pails of lard should be stored in a cool, dry place.

Hospital Fare in 1873
Hospital patients did not "fare" any too well before 1873, the year that marked the origin of professional nursing in the U. S. According to the American Nurses' association, the diets of the bedridden 75 years ago consisted mainly of tea, whey and gruel—which the nurses themselves had to make. Today's hospital meals are planned by dietitians and prepared by skilled chefs.

Lacquer Finishes
Automobiles are no longer painted and varnished but are coated with a material, actually more durable than the metal it protects, which is in large part soluble cotton. Today's widely used lacquer finishes are made from cotton, corn, and air. From these basic sources the scientists derives his starting chemical materials, to which are added pigments and plasticizers.

CHAPTER XIX

Sometimes Newt offered to carry it out and swing it up, but Grandpa wouldn't let him. No sir; he was going to do the job himself just like he had ever since Newt's Ma had died.

One day Grandpa glanced up at the sky; a good day to sun the bed, and yet, in a way, he dreaded it, for it was getting harder and harder to do. "I guess I'll sun my bed," he said as if it wasn't anything at all.

Newt looked at the old gentleman, who appeared to be growing more and more frail. Yet, in some mysterious way, the pioneer had amazing vitality; and unexpected strength, too.

He didn't go straight in, even though he'd made up his mind, but delayed the ordeal as long as he could, the way a person does when he has a hard job to tackle.

Finally he went in and stripped back the covers—there was his precious feather bed, the bed he had spent so much of life on, the bed he'd probably go out on.

"Well," he said. Then sat down, his bony, loose-skinned hands drooping in his lap.

He began edging the feather bed up on the footboard.

How ancient it looked. It was a kind of picture book of the years. He got the feather bed up on his old humped back and edged the bed through the door. It was heavier than it had ever been before. It hung over him like a giant saddlebag over a mare's back; one huge ball in front, another behind, bumping his legs and trying to get him down.

How far away the line seemed. His knees began to shake. Maybe he wouldn't make it. Yes, by God he would. He wasn't going to be licked by no feather bed.

Newt looked at the feeble old man working his way across the yard like a tumblebug.

"Don't you want help, Pa?"

"No, I don't," he said sharply.

Perspiration came out on his leathery forehead and ran down into his eyes. Almost savagely he pawed it out.

Before he really got there, he reached out his hand for the wire; finally seized it. Could rest now.

Now came the struggle to get one of the balls over the line. Up . . . up. He felt dizzy and had to stop.

"You're sure you don't, Pa?"

He waited before answering, panting, his eyes glazed.

"Thankie, I guess I can manage."

Finally, after incredible labor, he got one end of the bed over the wire. He was panting now and so dizzy he had to steady himself by the wire. When he recovered, he began to inch the two balls even.

He set the wire in the V of the prop pole and pushed up; the bed swung high above the ground.

He sat down on his bench and rested a spell. Then came back and proudly surveyed his work. "Made it!" he called.

"I see you did, Pa. You've got amazing strength."

He basked in the compliment. "Not like I used to. Wasn't anybody on the range could do the work I could. One season I broke two hickory pitchfork handles."

Soon he was nodding. After a bit, he felt better. Then got up and went back and again admired what he had accomplished. He glanced at the bed as if to say, "Well, I licked ye!"

Going in, he sat down before the tangle of springs. The springs were held in some semblance of correct position by the lacework of cord. Some of the cord had been worn in two which let the springs tilt out of shape. As patiently as a spider mending its web, he set about putting in new strings.

The sun moved around the bed.

At last, it was time to take it in. If he brought it out, reckon he could take it back.

He sniffed. Smelt sweet.

WONDERFUL NEIGHBOR

by HOMER CROY

A prodigal son of northwest Missouri, Homer Croy drove along a country road amid scenes of his youth. As he sees familiar sights, he associates them with the Kennedys—Newt, the kindest man he'd ever known; Mrs. Kennedy; their daughters, Ida and Lucy; their son, Harlan, his boyhood pal. He remembers going home from college to attend his mother's funeral. He remembers happy times, too, spent in the Kennedy sitting room. He remembers Ida's many beaux and her romantic escapades from which Newt had to rescue her—and her marriage to Clarence Duncan. Then he remembers Grandpa, who slept on a feather bed, and would not sleep on a mattress.

to the bed, he let the feather bed fall; then sank wearily down on it, panting.

When he felt rested, he pulled the bed into shape. How comfortable it looked. Would get a fine night's sleep.

He went out to Newt in the yard. His old eyes were shining. "Made it!" he called triumphantly.

"I see you did," said Newt. He felt almost as tired as his father.

One day a fine-looking automobile came down the road, but instead of shooting on by it turned in. Many automobiles were now upon the highways; but times had changed. Horses which once had snorted and trembled, now merely pitched their ears and showed the whites of their eyes.

It not only turned in, but gave a honk. If these were strangers in trouble they would hardly honk so imperiously.

Once lazy Nodaway Indians had shuffled along this road; later gypsies had come along it; now tourists were rattling by. It didn't seem much of an improvement.

Four persons got out. Not only got out but started across the croquet ground to the house. Sometimes people got out and gazed at us as if

At milking time, Uncle Jim sat on the extra stool and told about the places he had been and the important people he had met.

He went around with Newt as Newt fed the hogs and the steers and the horses.

The Kennedys prided themselves on the good table they set, but as glamorous Uncle Jim told about the fine hotels he had been in and the wonderful meals he'd eaten, Newt became more and more humble. "I guess we haven't got the kind of eating you're used to, Jim, but it's substantial and fillin'."

"We've got the best eatin' there is," said Grandpa. "Nobody here lives out of tin cans."

After supper the family went into the sitting room and started the pressure lamp and, as they sat around it, Uncle Jim told about his real estate business and about the easy life he and his family led. Mrs. Kennedy listened intently, absorbed in every word. "I'd like to live in the city. Life must be much easier than on a farm," she said.

There was a moment's silence, for her earnestness and depth of feeling startled the family. Then the moment was passed over.

"I wish you'd tell about the First Homestead," said Grandpa. "I'd relish seeing it."

As the man told about the First Homestead, Grandpa followed eagerly, now and then saying, "Maybe I can make it sometime."

"Excuse me for being personal," said Uncle Jim after a time, "but doesn't life get monotonous on a farm?"

"I just never thought of it that way," said Newt.

"What pleasures do you have?" Newt moved uneasily. "Well," he said apologetically, "we have our land; nobody can jerk that out from under us. I like to see crops grow. It's a pretty sight to walk out across a new stand of redtop."

"What's so thrilling about that?" asked Uncle Jim.

Confronted with the situation, Newt didn't have a good answer. "Meadow larks fly up. I like to hear a meadow lark go whirring off."

"I suppose it's very nice," said Uncle Jim.

"There ain't anything purtier than a new calf," allowed Newt. "His knees are so knobby and his tail switches so fast."

"That must be interesting."

"Well, yes, 'tis," said Newt. He tried desperately to think of other nice things about farming. "Also I like to chore by lantern light."

Uncle Jim shook his head, puzzled. "I suppose it's all right for those who like it."

As Mrs. Wallace told about the motion-picture theaters and the stores and the big churches and the automobile rides in the evening, a dreamy, faraway expression came into Mrs. Kennedy's eyes. "It must be nice to live in the city," she said.

At breakfast the next morning, the fashionable visitors told more about life in the city. "I have a maid," said Mrs. Wallace.

Newt mustn't show he didn't know what this meant. Still he must be sociable. So he asked politely, "Did you get her from an institution?"

Uncle Jim slapped his fat thigh. "Ho! Ho!" he roared. "That's the city word for hired girl!"

Newt shifted uneasily, thoroughly ashamed of his country joke ways. But he must defend himself. "It seems to me that's goin' a long ways around the barn to say what you mean."

Uncle Jim laughed again, tremendously amused by his country relative. "You're away behind the times, Newt. You people are just Simple Simons."

He Likes Farming

"Uncle Jim," as he was called, was a legendary figure. He had gone to the city and got rich. He seemed to travel a great deal and, every now and then, sent a picture postcard from some faroff place. The Brown Palace Hotel, Denver; Shaw's Garden, St. Louis; Rosebud Indian Agency, Portage des Sioux. Sometimes we longed to travel and see the exciting places of the world.

"We're driving through and we thought we'd stop in and see you," Mrs. Kennedy was delighted to see her successful and citified brother and was full of questions. They were now living in Beatrice, Nebraska, Uncle Jim said. He described Beatrice and its tall buildings and busy streets and its canning plant, and he told about the First Homestead. It made our lives seem drab.

We wanted to ask Uncle Jim what he did, but did not quite dare. All we knew was that it was something tremendously important and that he was rich. He had fine creased trousers and fine white hands and fine square-toed shoes and a gold-filled watch with an American eagle engraved on the back; no Noble Stag for him. Also he had a gold watch chain and a fancy stone watch charm.

"Ida is married now!" said Newt proudly.

"That's nice," said Mrs. Wallace. "Who did she marry?"

"She married a farmer."

"Oh."

"He's goin' to develop into one of the best farmers around," said Newt defensively.

Mrs. Kennedy and Lucy flew about the cooking; always lots to do when company came. Lucy kept running up and down the cellar steps, bringing the finest and best of everything; must make an impression on the city visitors.

"It must be nice to live in the city," she said.

Spokesman of God

Lesson for November 27, 1949.

GOD MAKES USE of strange characters. What shall we think of a preacher who tried to beg off from being a preacher? What can we make of a man who actually reproached God for forcing him into the ministry? How shall we rate a man who in time of war urged his own nation to surrender, who was believed by almost nobody, who was reeducated by his own class and even his own family? What can we say of a man who was often in hot water with the city authorities, who spent months of his time in jail, who was called subversive, and who never got along with the established religion of his time?

The prophet Jeremiah was that man; yet posterity honored him. His own generation thought him a liar. But some then knew, as we know today, that he was a teller of God's truth, a spokesman of God.

Was He a Pessimist?

WE KNOW (Jer. 1) that Jeremiah did not wish to be a prophet in the first place, though unlike Isaiah he shrank back not from a sense of sin but because he thought of himself as a mere child.

We know (chap. 20) that at times he was thoroughly discouraged about himself, and even cursed the day he was born. It is also true that in the last war waged by his little country of Judah before it was smashed, his advice from beginning to end was "Surrender."

No wonder people thought him a pessimist, a calamity-howler. But before we call him such names we must remember two things. First is, that his unwillingness to be a prophet, and the fact that so to speak he hated the job, marks a vital fact: he, perhaps even more than other prophets, sensed the difference between his own ideas and what God was saying through him.

Even when what the Lord said was not what they themselves would have wished to say, they spoke for the Lord nevertheless. The other thing to remember is that when everybody wants to believe a pleasant lie, and a man comes along telling the unpleasant truth, he is not a pessimist, he is simply stating facts.

Jeremiah stood by the facts as God gave him insight to see them. If they jalled him for it, he could not help that; but they could not shut his mouth nor close his eyes.

Was he a patriot?

JEREMIAH was constantly accused of acts and attitudes which today might be called "subversive," though he dearly loved his country. This was because he dared to rebuke the ambitions of his country's leaders.

They said: Our country shall be free! But Jeremiah knew it would not be free. They said: Our king will conquer! Jeremiah knew he would end his days a prisoner. Jeremiah was unpopular, to put it mildly, because he advised his country to take the only place among the nations it could take—a humble one.

Then, as now, many persons think that patriotism means believing yours is the perfect country. If anyone points to injustice in our land, some one may yell, "Deport him!" But Jeremiah showed what is a true patriot. He is not necessarily the man who approves all the foreign policies of his nation (Jeremiah approved not one), nor the man who speaks only good of his country and his people.

The best patriot is the person who, seeing his country as God sees it, will dare to speak out against evil wherever he finds it.

A Way to Know God

JEREMIAH knew God well, and the trouble with his contemporaries was that they did not know God. But Jeremiah did not say: "Know God by becoming a prophet like me," for he knew that only a few are called to be prophets. Neither did he say, "Go to church oftener," for you can see in chap. 7 what he thought of the Temple of his time. He pointed to the good king Josiah (chap. 13). That king had found God, not in a mystic vision like Jeremiah's, not in burnt offerings and sacrifices, but in the doing of justice looking out for the exploited, caring for the helpless, seeing that justice was done.

Lesson for November 27, 1949.

GOD MAKES USE of strange characters. What shall we think of a preacher who tried to beg off from being a preacher? What can we make of a man who actually reproached God for forcing him into the ministry? How shall we rate a man who in time of war urged his own nation to surrender, who was believed by almost nobody, who was reeducated by his own class and even his own family? What can we say of a man who was often in hot water with the city authorities, who spent months of his time in jail, who was called subversive, and who never got along with the established religion of his time?

The prophet Jeremiah was that man; yet posterity honored him. His own generation thought him a liar. But some then knew, as we know today, that he was a teller of God's truth, a spokesman of God.

Was He a Pessimist?

WE KNOW (Jer. 1) that Jeremiah did not wish to be a prophet in the first place, though unlike Isaiah he shrank back not from a sense of sin but because he thought of himself as a mere child.

We know (chap. 20) that at times he was thoroughly discouraged about himself, and even cursed the day he was born. It is also true that in the last war waged by his little country of Judah before it was smashed, his advice from beginning to end was "Surrender."

No wonder people thought him a pessimist, a calamity-howler. But before we call him such names we must remember two things. First is, that his unwillingness to be a prophet, and the fact that so to speak he hated the job, marks a vital fact: he, perhaps even more than other prophets, sensed the difference between his own ideas and what God was saying through him.

Even when what the Lord said was not what they themselves would have wished to say, they spoke for the Lord nevertheless. The other thing to remember is that when everybody wants to believe a pleasant lie, and a man comes along telling the unpleasant truth, he is not a pessimist, he is simply stating facts.

Jeremiah stood by the facts as God gave him insight to see them. If they jalled him for it, he could not help that; but they could not shut his mouth nor close his eyes.

Was he a patriot?

JEREMIAH was constantly accused of acts and attitudes which today might be called "subversive," though he dearly loved his country. This was because he dared to rebuke the ambitions of his country's leaders.

They said: Our country shall be free! But Jeremiah knew it would not be free. They said: Our king will conquer! Jeremiah knew he would end his days a prisoner. Jeremiah was unpopular, to put it mildly, because he advised his country to take the only place among the nations it could take—a humble one.

Then, as now, many persons think that patriotism means believing yours is the perfect country. If anyone points to injustice in our land, some one may yell, "Deport him!" But Jeremiah showed what is a true patriot. He is not necessarily the man who approves all the foreign policies of his nation (Jeremiah approved not one), nor the man who speaks only good of his country and his people.

The best patriot is the person who, seeing his country as God sees it, will dare to speak out against evil wherever he finds it.

A Way to Know God

JEREMIAH knew God well, and the trouble with his contemporaries was that they did not know God. But Jeremiah did not say: "Know God by becoming a prophet like me," for he knew that only a few are called to be prophets. Neither did he say, "Go to church oftener," for you can see in chap. 7 what he thought of the Temple of his time. He pointed to the good king Josiah (chap. 13). That king had found God, not in a mystic vision like Jeremiah's, not in burnt offerings and sacrifices, but in the doing of justice looking out for the exploited, caring for the helpless, seeing that justice was done.

Private Planes Fail to Match Use Prediction

CHICAGO.—A postwar world where everyone flew his own airplane and traffic cops of the sky kept the Sunday "flivver-fliers" in line has failed to materialize.

In fact, sales of private airplanes in 1949 ran approximately to only 6,000, whereas it had been freely predicted that more than a half-million civil aircraft would be in operation within 10 years after the war. Compared with 1946, when manufacturers sold 35,000 light planes for personal flying, the 1949 total was down some 600 percent.

Causes for the slump in sales of airplanes are legion says Leslie A. Bryan, director of University of Illinois' institute of aviation. He attributes chief costs to the still high prices on aircraft. Poor marketing may be another, he adds, plus high operating costs, limited utility, lack of safety, high depreciation, high insurance costs, inadequate service facilities and disturbing noises.

However, he pointed out that all these factors were similarly troublesome in the early years of the automobile.

Causes Lessening

Bryan said he found that most of these causes are lessening, just as they did with the progress of the horseless carriage. It is only a question of how soon, he says, there will be a transportation medium combining the best in the plane and the best in the automobile, although better than either is today.

Nevertheless, during the last year declines appeared in the number of airports, private pilot certificates issued, flight schools in operation, and personal aircraft manufactured. He sums up these elements of the private flying picture this way:

Airports—"It is probable 7,500 properly located airports would give a passably adequate landing area coverage for the United States," he says, adding that at the start of this year there were 6,414, with Texas in the lead with 624.

In addition, the airport operators council estimates 77 million dollars is available in state and municipally sponsored funds to match money granted under the Federal Airport Act for airport construction.

Half-Million Pilots

Pilots—There are now about 500,000 licensed airmen in the United States, or about five pilots for every registered airplane. Of this number, 10,000 are certificated air-line transport pilots, 210,000 commercial and 280,000 private. Then, there are over 100,000 student pilots.

Flight instruction now averages around $8.50 an hour, compared to $25 an hour and more before the war. It takes between 30 and 40 hours of instruction to obtain a private pilot license, including at least 10 hours of dual instruction.

"In many respects the present-day 35-hour pilot is equivalent or superior to the 200-hour pilot of 20 years ago, because of better standards of controlled instruction," Bryan declares. "Air training is now an established part of education in many schools, being taught both as a vocational and as a cultural subject."

Billie Burke Keeps Vitality
By Standing on Her Head

NEW YORK.—Billie Burke, perennial comedienne of stage and screen, has a bubbling vitality that is the envy of myriad people half her age. How does she do it?, they ask.

She does it by standing on her head.

That's no flip crack, it's a fact. In a recent interview, she declared she spends at least 10 minutes standing on her head, turning somersaults and stretching.

She revealed one or two secrets that make it possible for one who was on the stage 50 years ago to look as young and pretty and be as vivacious as she is. She said that standing on her head is part of it.

"It gets the blood to the brain," she explained, "and that's good for any thinking that has to be done. I suppose it's also good for my feet and the rest of me."

Recalling that the great Caruso had once asked her to marry him she said she had answered "no" because of the tenor's two big sons.

"I told him I just couldn't figure out what I could do with those two huge creatures and that seemed to end our romance."

Cincinnati Police Present
New Halloween Procedure

CINCINNATI.—The local police department came up with something for Halloween which ought to end a lot of policemen's troubles if adopted generally in the future. Instead of their chasing the pranksters that night, they had the pranksters chasing them.

Why? The answer was so simple everyone wondered why he hadn't thought of it. The police simply gave away 10,000 bags of pretzels to the kids, the distribution being via police cruisers.

Triple Return

An American comedian had just completed a tour of English theaters. The actor was asked how he liked playing before the English audiences.

"Splendid," he enthused. "I prefer them to American audiences."

"Why is that?"

"When the English audience hears an amusing story it laughs first to be polite, then it laughs again when it hears others laugh, then it laughs a third time when it gets the point of the story."
